

TO THINE OWN SELF BE TRUE AND IT MUST FOLLOW AS THE NIGHT THE DAY, THOU CANST NOT THEN BE FALSE TO ANY MAN.

BY JAYNES, SHELOR, SMITH & STECK.

WALHALLA, SOUTH CAROLINA, MAY 7, 1902.

NEW SERIES, NO. 213.—VOLUME LIII.—NO. 19.

C. W. & J. E. Bauknight are Offering

MAJESTIC FLOUR, $4.90 per Barrel. 3 PLUGS EARLY BIRD, 25c.
PIEDMONT FLOUR, $4.60 per Barrel. 3 PLUGS SCHNAPPS, 25c.
SILVER STAR FLOUR, $4.00 per Barrel. 2 DOUBLE THICK, (Either Kind), 25c.

TWO LARGE SIZE NICKEL PACKAGES ARM AND HAMMER SODA FOR 5C.

We also call special attention to our Hihgland Blend Roasted Coffee at 25c. per pound; also a special Green Coffee we are selling at 15c. per pound. If you try either of these it will make us good friends.

"IT PAYS TO BUY FOR CASH."

State Mutual Life Annuity Co.

ROME, GA.

The Parent Annuity Association of the South.

Assets, $139,471.89
Surplus, over all liabilities, July 1st, 1901, $68,594.6

IT IS WITH PLEASURE AND PARDONABLE PRIDE THAT WE CALL THE ATTENTION OF OUR FRIENDS and the public generally to the excellent contract for Life Insurance now being offered by The State Mutual Life and Annuity Association of Rome, Ga.

It is not an assessment company, but a GUARANTEED STIPULATED PREMIUM CONTRACT. The plan is the Annuity System, which provides a guaranteed annual income to the member in old age. In case of his death it provides for his widow, and in the event of her death, for his minor children.

THE STATE MUTUAL

issues the strongest, the safest and most beneficial contract for a dependent family now on the market. They number among their policy-holders some of the leading financiers of the States of Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia. And with one accord they unhesitatingly pronounce it The Best.

THOMPSON HILES, President. J. W. ROUNSAVILLE, Vice-Pres.
ELBERT T. McGINNIE, Secretary. W. P. SIMPSON, Treasurer.

Office and Consulting Rooms: 1509 Main Street, Columbia, S. C.

First-class Agents wanted. Address: Lock Box No. 127, Columbia, S. C.

Or T. H. FRANCIS, 386 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

Any information cheerfully furnished by—
J. A. STECK, RESIDENT AGENT,
WALHALLA, S. C.

PLENTY

GUANO AND ACID ON HAND NOW.

T. E. ALEXANDER.

WALHALLA, S. C., MAY 7, 1902.

F. C. and American Beauty Corsets

Will satisfy the demands of the most fastidious.

This guarantee with every pair "Money refunded after four weeks' trial if corset is not satisfactory"

Look for these Trade Marks—the signs of quality—on label of box and on inside of corset.

Kalamazoo Corset Co. MAKERS
Kalamazoo, Michigan.

SOLD BY
Mrs. NANNIE BARRON,
Walhalla, S. C.

Just Double

WHEN A HOUSE IS PAINTED it is safe to estimate that a value has been added to it, which is never less, and something more, than double the cost of painting.

How About Your House?

Multiply the distance around it by the average height, and divide by 250. This gives the required number of gallons of

KING'S NEW YORK This Paint costs $1.50 per gallon. Come in and get Sample Cards and study Color Effect

ELECTRIC READY-MIXED PAINT.

J. H. DARBY, DRUGGIST.

THE TROUBLE AT CLEMSON.

Junior and Freshman Classes Were on Verge of Leaving, but Better Council Prevailed.

A telephone message from Clemson College yesterday afternoon said that everything was quiet there, but there was a good deal of excitement yesterday morning.

The Junior and Freshman classes met Tuesday night and resolved to leave the College yesterday morning in a body unless the faculty called for a meeting of the trustees and had the entire Sophomore class, including Cadet Thornwell, reinstated.

The college authorities got wind of what was going on and got Col. R. W. Simpson, the chairman of the board of trustees, to deliver a talk to the students in one of the class rooms. Col. Simpson reasoned with them and finally persuaded them to defer action until the trustees held a meeting and took action. It is stated that there will not be a special meeting of the trustees, but that their next regular meeting will be held early in June. Col. Simpson has a great deal of influence with the students.

The outlook at Clemson, it appears to those conversant with the facts, is the culmination of a trouble which has been brewing ever since the opening of the present session, and possibly longer. The students are very bitter against certain members of the faculty and openly charge them with vacillation and inconsistency and unfairness in enforcing discipline. This feeling is not confined to a few students, but practically the entire body is involved.

Col. Simpson, aided by other cool heads, has succeeded in averting further troubles for the present, but the matter is not yet ended and it will require a thorough investigation by the trustees to satisfactorily settle the difficulty.

The following are the resolutions adopted by the Senior and Junior classes regarding the action of the Sophomores:

SENIOR CLASS RESOLUTIONS. Whereas, the Sophomore class of Clemson College has decided to leave the school because one of its members has been treated most unjustly by the faculty, inasmuch as he has been awarded for an offense punishment that exceeds in severity that which has been inflicted for similar offenses in the past; and, whereas, the action of the faculty was taken in the face of cited examples establishing the fact that such punishment was inconsistent with that awarded in previous analogous cases; and, whereas, also, the Senior class fully and deeply sympathizes with the Sophomore class in its final action:

Therefore, be it resolved, That we commend the members of the Sophomore class for their high sense of justice and for their heroic conduct.

Be it resolved, second, That we believe they have acted from the highest principles of honor.

Be it resolved, third, That each member of the Sophomore class be supplied with a copy of these resolutions in order that his relations and friends may know that the Senior class, with a full knowledge of the case and after a careful consideration, exonerate him from all censure whatsoever.

JUNIOR CLASS RESOLUTIONS. We, the members of the Junior class, do hereby resolve:

First, That the Sophomore class has been treated unjustly by the faculty and that the steps taken by them were taken in defense of their rights and honor.

Second, That after carefully considering the action of the Sophomore class we heartily commend every action they have taken.

Third, That we recommend the Sophomore class on the gentlemanly manner in which they acted on this occasion, and furthermore at no time was any member of the class rash or ungentlemanly.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be given to each member of the Sophomore class.—Anderson Daily Mail, May 1st.

Salem Locals.

Salem, S. C., April 30.—The health of this section is improving since our last letter.

Mr. R. T. Whitmore is still on the sick list. The rest of our sick people are better at this time.

If feathers are any sign of a duck's nest, there will be a fine crop of candidates this time.

Misses Sallie Reid and Florence Whitmore were at home last Sunday from the Walhalla Cotton Mills.

Mr. Jesse Lay has closed his shop at this place. This will discomfit some of us. We hope he will do better where he goes.

Whitmore Sunday school is budding out with the leaves. We hope it will grow steady and strong.

Salem Democratic Club met on the 26th instant and organized with the following officers: W. M. Perry, president; J. W. Grant, vice president; J. W. Wood, secretary and treasurer; T. A. Grant, executive committee; J. B. Grant, W. B. Gwinn, M. B. Finley, R. B. Robertson, M. A. Moss and W. M. Perry, delegates to the county convention, which meets the first Monday in May at the Court House.

Well, if Jake Cook don't know how the convicts are getting along practicing shooting at stumps, I will assure him there is not a man on this side that can tell for there is not a man who has found them at work in these diggings. There is not any complaint about their work up here, for they have not done any to complain at. I guess it will be our time next. You know this is one more friendly year. We will pass around for the next six months. We hope Mr. Pool will send them up here pretty soon, if not before. Bring them with you when you come caussing and let them try some of our hills on the shade side. This pure air and cool water will be healthy for them.

Well, I hope Mr. Cook has gotten well of the mumps, and the candidates will all have a good time. Let us all try to be as merry after the campaign as before.

With best wishes to The Courier and all of its readers, I am yours,
Mack Perry.

The Democrats were never before so united nor have Republicans ever before been so divided on the tariff as they are now. In Congress a few days ago the Democrats voted without dissent for the amendment to the Cuban reciprocity bill, which cut down the differential on refined sugar, which according to the statement of the sugar trust taken $5,000,000 a year of its enormous profits. No less than 64 Republicans joined with the Democrats to adopt this amendment.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwic, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influence of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

Dr. Miles' Nervine
Saved me from the insane asylum. Mrs. A. M. Helmer, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes: "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

THE DEMOCRATIC CLUB MEETINGS.

The Various Clubs Met Saturday, April 26, and Elected Delegates to County Convention.

The following club meetings were received too late for publication in last week's Keowee Courier:

Tokena, April 26.—In accordance with call of the County Chairman the Tokena Democratic club met and reorganized by electing the following officers: F. L. Sitten, president; C. T. Phillips, vice president. Elected for registration and executive committee: J. R. Zachary, R. A. Reeves and P. H. Isbell.

F. L. Sitten was elected a member of the county executive committee. Eighty members were enrolled. Following delegates were elected to County Convention: F. L. Sitten, P. H. Isbell and W. S. Prichard.

F. L. Sitten, President.
W. S. Prichard, Secretary.

Fair Play, April 26.—Fair Play Democratic club met to-day and organized by electing D. V. Wright, president; L. L. Jarrard, vice president, and R. H. Maret, secretary. Committee on Registration—F. B. Watson, O. F. Isbell and A. R. Maret.

Executive Committee—R. W. Maret, T. L. Wootton and A. P. Maret.

County Executive Committee—E. C. Maret.

Delegates to the County Convention to meet at Walhalla on Monday, May 6th: S. P. Stribley, A. P. Hunt, J. W. Grubbs, J. A. Calahan, H. M. Lovingsgood; alternates, G. W. Carnes, B. J. Maret and E. H. Elliott.

On motion of L. L. Jarrard the meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

D. V. Wright, President.
R. H. Maret, Secretary.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, ss. LUCAS COUNTY.
Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of One Hundred Dollars for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure.

FRANK J. CHENEY,
Sworn to before me and subscribed my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON,
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous membrane of the system. Send for testimonials free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Law's Indefinite Delay.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

There is in the jail at Georgetown a negro barber, John Brownfield, who has a sentence of death hanging over him, yet he may have to remain where he is for some years before he will know whether it is to be executed or not, or before the State Courts can order its execution. The case is a striking illustration of how the law may tie up a case. John Brownfield killed a white man in 1900 in Georgetown, and the affair brought about the riot trouble there, which caused the Governor to send the militia there, and finally cost the State about $2,700. Finally the negro was tried and convicted of murder, and was sentenced to die at the rope's end. His negro lawyer, Whipper, appealed to the State Supreme Court. Meanwhile the negro managed to escape from the jail, but was too weak from the confinement to run. He was quickly recaptured and has been in the jail since. In the meantime Sheriff Skinner died and the present sheriff, Mr. McKiethen, was appointed. Not long ago the State Supreme Court sustained the Circuit Court and the negro was ordered sentenced. Before a day could be set for the execution Whipper appealed to the United States Supreme Court, this acting as a stay of proceedings in the State Court. It is problematical when the case will ever be reached in the United States Supreme Court. In the meantime the negro must remain in jail, and no further step can be taken until the highest tribunal in the United States hears the case and hands down its decision. The fellow, it is said, has now completely recovered his health, and bears his confinement, which may last for several years, remarkably well. The case is a most unusual one.

Talk About the State Campaign.

Now there are some who want the State campaign divided up into three sections. Senator Tillman's idea that there should be two distinct sections of the campaign managerie was bad enough, but now some of the Congressional candidates think that if they have to go around with the Senatorial candidates or follow the State candidates, that they will not have a fair show and they want a distinct Congressional campaign. So there it goes. If the old plan, which was bad enough, has to be changed, it might as well be arranged to let every one have a show and get up half a dozen side shows. One is about as apt to attract a crowd as the other.

The whole primary campaigning system is getting to be a first-class humbug and the people will soon see it that way and break up the whole business.

Why it should take so much time for the people to find out all they want to know about the positions and reputations of their candidates it is difficult to see, and about the only result of the heated campaigns has been to stir the people up and have them lose time and patience over politics. They could just as well watch their public servants with few meetings and less agitation, judging from the result of the agitation that has been had in the last ten years. The candidates, of course, will see that the primary system is not interfered with and they will also try to get all the time they want to talk at campaign meetings, but the time will come in the sweet bye and bye when this will be changed, if not by the men who make up the conventions, by those who do the electing.—August Kohn, in News and Courier.

A Colton Picking Machine.

A Jackson, Miss., dispatch says: "The first regular contract ever made in the world to pick cotton by machinery was closed in Greenville a few days since and the first experiment with the machine will be made on a plantation in Washington county next fall. A Pittsburg man is the inventor of the device, and for the past ten years has been conducting experiments in the vicinity of Greenville. He now claims that the device has been modeled on a practical working basis and feels confident that he will revolutionize the cotton picking industry in the South. The machine, he admits, is valueless except on the level uplands, low valleys and prairie grounds, but even if it should prove successful with this limit, its effect on the labor question in the South will be very marked."

Jocassee, April 29.—Mr. W. M. Brown is putting logs in the river to be used in making a boom below Seneca for the Benedict-Love Timber Company.

Mr. W. M. Brown has finished grading the site for his new 25-room hotel. He also has the lumber placed for the building.

Mr. W. M. Brown's mother is spending a few days with him.

Mr. Alfred Glazener, of Toxaway, N. C., was here Sunday. On his return home he was accompanied by his little nephew, Clide Brown.

Mr. R. E. L. Bell went to his fish basket the other morning and took out twenty-one fine cats. Come up, boys, and help us eat fish.

The new road from Jocassee to Salem will soon be completed. Then the candidates can drive up and not get their noses skinned.

The 22d of May has been named "Wagener Day" at the Charleston Exposition in honor of its distinguished and energetic President, Capt. F. W. Wagener. Every effort will be made, and rightly so, to make this the greatest day of the exposition. Not only the people of Charleston, but the people of the State and all portions of the country benefited by the exposition, should do honor to the man who has been the bone and sinew, the inspiration and guide of this great Southern enterprise. Everybody who possibly can ought to assemble in the "Ivory City" on Wagener Day, and show their appreciation for him who has done so much for us.

—Watch the label on your paper if you want to know how your subscription account stands with THE COURIER.

Women Clerks at Washington.

About one-third of all employees in the government departments at Washington are women. Several receive over $2,500 per annum, about fifty receive $1,600 per annum, 100 receive $1,400 per annum, 450 receive $1,200, 300 receive $1,000, and the remainder receive from $600 to $800 per annum.

The civil service commission records for last year show that 3,083 women were examined for the various positions opened to them under the civil service. Of these, 2,476 passed and 444 were appointed; 1,351 of the applicants examined came under the