GEN. ANDERSON'S GRAVE.

W. A. Dickson, in Anderson Mail.] Broyles, May 3 .--- I met with a painful sappointment when I journeyed the other day to Gen. Robert Anderson's old home on the Seneca river to see his grave. I had heard that a number of graves there were marked, but the only tombstone on the neglected and desolate spot stands at the grave of a traveler who was drowned there in the spring of 1819. Notice of this incident may be seen in an old file of the Pendleton Messenger, now in the possession of Mr. C. C. Langston, of the Intelligencer.

There seem to be a dozen or so graves in the family burying ground, a small, unenclosed spot, overgrown with briars and stunted post oak and wild cherry troos. A plantation fire had broken out trees. A plantation fire had broken out a few days before I was there and had swept the spot clean—a rebuke, as it were, to forgetful hands. The graveyard, in the midst of a large cleared area, stands on the inner border of a serei-circular tableland or "second bottom," 'I is ug abruptly some ten feet above the big bottom lowland next the river, and is, say, three hundred yards north of the spot where the dwelling stands. Not far away is the sleves' burying ground. Gen. Anderson's residence stands on the edge of the same elevation where it closes in upon the river and within two hundred yards of the stream. Fronting the house, or where it used to stand, for the fire-fierd devoured it soon after the war, is a strip of eight acres of surpass-

The old house stood north and south, and must have been sixty feet long, judg-ing from the piles of stone and brickbats where the chimneys stood. Struggling through one of these piles is the old-time fig bush that hugged the ancestral chim-ney corners. An overhanging vearling ney corners. An overhanging yearling walnut tree had dropped its last year's fruit among the stones and bricks, some of which I fished out and cracked and ate, and mused while my friend Routh entertained the man living in a recently constructed house in the old yard with a discussion of seed corn or admired the Jarsey red nig nenned mon the spot

Anderson settled upon the river soon after the Revolution, coming, no doubt, with his long-time friend, Gen. Pickens, from Abbeville. He was a native of Augusta county, Virginia, and came from there to South Carolina with Andrew Pickens many years before the Revolution and in his young manhood. Gen. Pickens settled on the east side of the Seneca, and nearly opposite Gen. Anderson, his place being known as Hopewell. They were not related by blood, it seems, but were kindred spirita, and together took the lead in establish-ing and building the Stone Church, and both served the church as ruling elders. If Gen. Anderson ever served the State If Gen. Anderson ever served the State in the General Assembly I do not happen to know, but he was a candidate for leg-islative honors, together with Gen. the hote, where his injuries were at-tended to. The mind of young McJunkin was un-balanced as the result of a sick spell. He had been ill for several weeks at his home in Toccoa and two or three days ago signs of insanity began to develop. It was then decided to bring him to Atlanta for treatment in a private sani-tarium, which was done yesterday morn-ing. The young man was accompanied by his father and two brothers. They registered at the Alexander Hotel until arrangements cond by made for the treatment of youn', McJunkin. He appeared to be somewhat restless during the day and was continually writ-his other sons left the hotel, leaving the sick boy there. Between 8 and \oplus o'clock he became violent and the proprietor of the hotel and others tried to quiet him. Their efforts were futile and finally McJunkin seized a piece of scantling and struck at Mr. Alexander. A message was then sent to Patrolman Belding on Marietta street and the police station was also and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no farther, and they are at work again this street and the police station was also notified. Call Officers Doyal and Tibbs responded. would shoot the man that laid hands on him. He had no weapon, however, Doyal and Tibbs realized that they had a difficult job on their hands and without a difficult job on their hands and without losing any time, rashed forward and caught the young man by the arms. He resisted and struggled vigorously to release himself. Although having been rendered him powerful and he continued to resist until the officers finally over-powered him and placed handcuffs on his wrists. Before the three officers arrived the hotel. considerably more that young McJunkin, was attacked and thrown to the floor. The patrol wagon was summoned and Doyal and Tibbs started out with Mo-Junkin between them, each one holding to an arm. Dr. McJunkin started down the steps in front of them and remarked. "I will go down there with you, John." No sconer had he uttered the words than the boy, totally unconscious of his act, raised himself from the floor on the arms of the two officers and before his intentions were realized, kicked his father in the back with both feet. Dr. McJunkin fell headlong down the steps and rolled over and over several times, landing out on the sidewalk on Marietta street. At the police station the young man repeatedly asked to be allowed to send a telegram to his mother. He was closely watched while being searched, but offered no further resistance. He was placed in the "slick" cell, which is per-fectly bare, to prevent his doing possible injury to himself. Further steps will probably be taken in the case this morn-ing. His condition is pathetic and aroused great sympathy. It is hoped th it proper treatment will soon restore his reason.— Atlanta Constitution, May 3d. No Less of Time.

Col. Simpson said that the trustees, at their regular meeting in June, would take up the matter and take such action as appeared to be the best. The sopho-mores would be heard, if they desire it, and, he said, he hoped they would appear either as a body or by committee and state their grievances fully so the trustees would have knowledge of all the facts.

In conclusion Col. Simpson repeated what he has said on every occasion since the trouble occurred, that he had nothing but sympathy and the kincliest feeling toward the sophomore class, but that they had made a great mistake and that they had made a great mistake and that he had no doubt they now realized it. The whole trouble could have been averted if they had been less hasty and had asked for counsel and advice before taking the rash step.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plump-ness and came out in much better health hess and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy.
