And carried the opening bud to heaven

Ere sin could harm or sorrow fade,

Angels came with friendly care,

It would be wrong to wish her back

When we know she is far better off,

And all her sufferings are at an end.

And bade it blossom there.

In this world of toil and sin,

All dressed in gold and white,

know she is an angel, fair,

With a crown upon her hair,

Shining in God's holy light. A golden harp is in her hand.

Pure joys to her are given;
