NEWS FROM WESTMINSTER.

Westminster, April 12.—We regret to chronicle the death of Capt. N. H. Jenkins, which occurred on Saturday, April 8, at 5 a. m., after a short illness from erysipelas and a bilious attack. It was known that his health had been failing since a serious spell of sickness a year ago, but as he had been able to attend to his accustomed duties on his farm no one was prepared for the announcement of his death. Capt. Jenkins was in town Thursday attending to business and the sadness of his death was a great shock to his friends. He worked on Friday and at the close of the day he was taken violently ill and soon passed from earthly scenes. Capt. Jenkins was in the 74th year of his age, having been born in this county on December 8, 1831. His home at the hickory grove on Colonel's Fork Creek is known to every one who is familiar with the road leading from Fair Play to Walhalla. With the exception of the four years spent in the Civil war Capt. Jenkins had resided on the plantation on which he died for more than half a century and had reared a family of eleven children. His wife was Miss Elizabeth McKay. They were married January 14, 1857. Eight children survive. The names of the living children are Mrs. William Ballenger, who resides in Texas; S. P. and W. H. Jenkins, Mrs. Alice Herring, Mrs. J. J. Duncan, Mrs. W. A. Couch, Misses Lillie and Coa Jenkins. Capt. Jenkins was a gallant soldier, serving in the Carolinas, Virginia and Tennessee. He received his title as Captain in the army. He was with Gen. Lee at the surrender at Appomattox court house on April 9, 1865. A remarkable co-incidence in the life and death of Capt. Jenkins is that his body was lowered in the grave exactly forty years after the surrender. A Confederate veteran informs us that Capt. Jenkins' bravery in war was evidenced by the bullet holes pierced in his garments. After a brief funeral service conducted in the Baptist church by Rev. J. I. Spinks, of the Methodist church, the body was interred in the town cemetery at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Miss Margie Stribling, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Stribling, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Maggie Fellers, at Prosperity.

We visited the Knitting Mill plant Saturday afternoon and saw for the first time how the "working man's socks" are made. That is the brand they are now manufacturing daily by the hundred dozen. When we arrived James M. Norris, the general secretary and manager, was in town and we were conducted through by J. H. Freeman, the foreman, who explained to us each machine and its work. Mr. Freeman, Henry Hamilton and Miss Nora Hamilton are new comers to our town and have considerable experience in their line of work in a knitting mill. They were originally from Flat Rock, N. C. Having devoted fifteen years of his life to the work Mr. Freeman is a valuable man to the Westminster Knitting Mills. He and his family occupy one of the mill cottages. Mr. Hamilton and sister board with Mrs. Y. E. Pitts. Miss Hamilton is teaching the girls how to operate the looper. Her brother has charge of the ribbers. Forty knitting machines are now running and they have twenty more ordered, which they will install as soon as they arrive. The operatives are learning the work and are beginning to earn fair wages. Only men's half hose are being manufactured. They completed as many as 116 dozen in one day. Mr. Norris has been quite busy looking after the construction of the plant. He is having his office fitted up inside the mill and will soon be in better shape to devote more of his time to the manufacturing details. They have already commenced filling orders and Mr. Norris thinks the "working man's sock" will prove to be a popular seller.
