Carter received a rifle ball in the thigh, and Langston a flesh wound from a rifle ball. Sam Quarles was slightly wounded by a charge from a shotgun. It is stated that Carter loaned the three men his horse and buggy to go to the mountains for whiskey, and on their return the four men became involved in a drunken row, which resulted as stated above. All are said to have been the best of friends be-fore the arrival of the bug-juice on the scene. Little River, May 27 .- Miss Lena Holden, of Keowee, made a visit to Little River the past week. Little Charley Cantrell, of Talley, spent

Morro: "Is it not time we were doing some-thing to keep the rural districts from being depopulated by people seeking better schools than they have? "Whenever rural commu-nities have been drained of their best blood and brain, and the remaining citizenship re-duced to a kind of peasantry, South Caro-lina's prosperity is at an end."—W. H. Hand. mmunications for this column should be ad dressed to Miss Marye R. Shelor, Westmin ster. South Carolina.

I was very much impressed and inspired by the success of this school. The 'Class of '07," who, "standing with rewant feet, where brook and river meet, womanhood and childhood fielt," acted cell their part.

Miss Reeder read of the lives of South Carolina's great men. The lives of great men should be studied, for we should not be ignorant of our own people. Manutitus said: "It is a shame for a man to live as a stranger in his owr country and be uninformed of her affair , geography and history." We put great stress on her great men. Why not her great women, for we caunot have great men withbright outlook for our country, for the graduates, so far, are girls.

In Westminster Abbey sleeps England's greatness, but in this Westminster is to be born greatness.

Prof. M. E. Brockman's farewell talk was very fine, and here is the synopsis: "I want the parents to catch the sentiment of it. 1 never entered the classroom without prayer. I thought only pure thoughts while with my class, for I wanted them to act well." Parents, we need more such teachers who realize that the child is as clay in the hands, to make or mar.

Rev. Geo. T. Harmon, in presenting the medals to the young men, gave them the precious words of his teacher, Dr. James H. Carlisle, who presented him his medal. The boys should follow the footprints of this man, who is a human copy of our Lord. When the young man was presented with the medal these thoughts came to me: How could he help being a scholar, for in his veins is the blood of martyrs of church and State; like Timothy, a good mother and grandmother, a pure father and wealth to give him aid, and then I thought of some --One of the most curious garden freaks that we have seen was presented to us yesterday by John W. Lee. It is a white raddish that resembles very. Much a child's foot of deformed shape. Kow hard, and if left to the freedom of the second sec their will, the brilliant Solicitor who stood there before the "Class of '07," and spoke of the "Success of Life," will see these children some day in the prisoner's dock, and will say, "If the good people had tried to reform their parents and -Rev. Geo. H. Judd was in Walhalla take the children out of the crimes, it might not have been.'

I believe in inherited greatness and in inherited evil. What is bred in the bone must co out. John Caldwell Calhoun could not help being a statesman, for his family were noted citizens. In the Journal of American History (first quarter) we find the hero of Elizabethtown was James Caldwell, an uncle of John Calhoun. Rev. James Caldwell and his wife were martyrs to the cause of liberty. Rev. Caldwell's wife was shot by the British, and in the next battle wadding for the firelocks gave out. Caldwell galloped up to his church, yelling the Psalms rest on the foe, shouting "Boys, give them Watts." Bret Hart has beautifully sung of this deed. What makes greatness? Study, refinement and a pure life, which we all owe our country,

Looked for a Race Riot.

There was considerable excitement at Rhem's, on the line between Georgetown ened race war. The Governor's office in Columbia was constantly on the lookout for trouble. It appears that on Saturday a negro boy rode up to Rhem's store and hitched his mule to an upright post supporting a shed over a platform. The animal jerked away and pulled the upright post down. Louis Rhem, son of the proprietor, rebuked the boy and the boy becoming impudent, young Rhem slapped his face. Shortly afterward, Toney Scott, the aged father of the boy, made his appearance with a large stick in his hand and started toward young Rhem. Several men in the store interrupted and took the stick away from Scott. They may have also used him rather roughly. That night Scott died. Excitement grew as news of the matter spread among the negroes and on Sunday several hundred of them, men, women and children, from all the country around, collected about Scoti's house. The women incited the men and dang The women incited the men and danger from violence began to grow. The whites also collected in considerable force and the sheriffs of Williamsburg and George, town counties repaired to the scene with posses. The Governor was kept in close touch with the situation, and was look-ing to be called upon at any moment to order out a large force of troops. He order out a large force of troops. He did authorize the sheriff of Georgetown did authorize the sheriff of Georgetown to call out the Georgetown company. It is claimed that the old negro Scott did not die from violence at the hands of the men who took the stick away from him in Rhem's store, but that his death was due to heart failure, brought on by ex-citament. citement.

Walhalia, S. C. —Last Wednesday Mrs. M. E. Johnson entertained at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Guy T. Grove, her five sisters, Mrs. Rachael Auld, of Elberton, Ga.; Mrs. Ellen McDowell, of Franklin, N. C.; Mrs. Sallie Gilmer, of Madison; Mrs. Alethia Balleuger and Mrs. J. B. Pickett, of Richland. These six sisters are the sur-viving children of the late Capt. Samuel R. McFall, who was a gallant follower of the Stars and Bars, and lost his life in defense of the Lost Cause. The child-hood of the six sisters was spent near Oconee Station, only a few miles from Walhalla, from where in later years they scattered to different parts of the coun-try. Some Giant Cabbages.

The Cordele Daily Post is making a great to-do over an 18-pound cabbage raised near that city. A few years since gentleman, then residing in Brooks county, exhibited 10 cabbages which weighed together 275 pounds, an average of 271 pounds, the largest of the lot weighing 33 pounds. The party who raised these cabbages still lives to tell the tale, but is too modest to give his name. He wrote the above statement,---Waycross Herald.
