POWERS AND HOWARD FREE.

Kentucky's Governor Pardons Men After Eight Years Imprisonment.

Lexington, Ky., June 13.—Caleb Powers and James Howard, charged with forming and carrying out a plot which resulted in the assassination of Senator William Goebel in 1900, were given full and free pardons today by Governor Willson and will be immediately released. They have been confined in prison for more than eight years.

Powers is now in jail at Georgetown, while Howard is in the penitentiary at Frankfort, serving a life sentence. Powers will go back to his old home in Knox county, where his mother has fitted up the old place for his coming. This home was mortgaged early during the Powers' fight for freedom by his mother, who did all she could to help her son.

Howard to Become Evangelist.

Howard will go to Louisville and join his family, and will become an evangelist in prison work. Governor Willson affixed his official signature to the pardons with an exhaustive study of the cases and a review of the testimony. He was aided by arguments of attorneys both for and against Powers and Howard, as well as by reading the entire transcripts of the testimony, covering four trials of Powers and one of Howard. It is said that Willson even carried briefs of the most important testimony with him to Washington two weeks ago when he went to attend the conference of Governors, in order to discuss various points with other Governors. He had been steadily working on the records since he returned.

Eugene McCarty died suddenly in Cartersville, Ga., while shaving himself. He had finished shaving one side of his face.
