

PRESIDENT-ELECT WOODROW WILSON.

WILSON CALL EXTRA SESSION To Meet Before April 16—To Carry Out Pre-election Pledges.

New York, Nov. 16.—Governor Woodrow Wilson announced last night that immediately after his inauguration as President of the United States he would call an extraordinary session of Congress to convene not later than April 15 for the purpose of revising the tariff.

The President-elect will sail for Bermuda at 2 o'clock this afternoon for a vacation and will return December 16. To set at rest in the meantime speculation as to what he would do with regard to tariff revision, he issued the following statement:

"I shall call Congress together in extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the revision of the tariff ought to be redressed as promptly as possible, but also because I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty as to what the particular items of tariff revision are to be should be removed as soon as possible."

Beyond this brief announcement the Governor said he had nothing further to say. Most of the opinions he had received from public men seemed to be in favor of an extra session, he declared.

CAN'T GET JOHNSON FREED.

Two Other Attempts to Secure Bail for Negro Pugilist Futile.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Another attempt to procure the release of Jack Johnson failed to-day. Federal Judge Carpenter denied a motion to reduce the $30,000 bond under which the negro is held on a charge of violating the Mann act. W. G. Anderson, Johnson's counsel, then said he would offer new securities later in the day.

Johnson's attorneys later in the day offered as bondsman a property holder who could qualify for $60,000. When it was shown that the proffered bondsman was to be indemnified and paid for acting he was refused.

"The government will fight any attempt to give an indemnity bond for the defendant," said District Attorney Wilkerson.

No Reason for Release.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Pointing out that violations of the "white slave" act are not extraditable, Solicitor General Bullitt filed a brief to-day declaring no reason exists why Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, confined in jail in Chicago, should be admitted to bail by the United States Supreme Court.

The solicitor general said a guilty offender might be quite willing to jump bail and escape to a foreign country.

Jealous, Kills Child for Revenge.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Police are seeking Charles Rose, aged 57, who smothered his two-year-old daughter, Beatrice, and left a note saying he murdered the child to revenge himself on her mother, who was, he said, unfaithful to him. The murder of the child was discovered by her mother. The little girl was found in the bed, pillows covering her face.

The mother said she was afraid of her husband, who had threatened to kill her, and that she remained away from home all night. She discovered the body late yesterday afternoon, Rose had disappeared. He is said to have been insanely jealous of his wife.

U. S. TREASURER RESIGNS.

Lee McClung Notified Taft—Had Had Friction with McVeagh.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Announcement of the resignation of Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States, was made by President Taft to-day. Mr. McClung tendered his resignation to the President at a conference at the Executive Mansion early to-day, and its acceptance was later announced by the President from the executive offices, with the explanation that Mr. McClung resigned voluntarily. It is believed that Carmi Thompson, now private secretary to the President, will succeed him.

Mr. McClung's resignation becomes effective as soon as his successor is appointed. The treasurer declined to discuss his retirement in any way to-day, but it was rumored that his resignation came as the result of continued friction with Secretary McVeagh.

Mr. McClung was one of the treasury officials named by Assistant Secretary A. Platt Andrew as having been in continued controversy with the Secretary of the Treasury when Mr. Andrew, in a letter accompanying his resignation, declared that the Secretary and his associates were not in harmony.

Home for Fallen Women.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 19.—A home for fallen women will be established in Atlanta, a former fallen woman will have charge of it, and the largest single contribution will be, or rather has already been made, by the same woman.

Belle Sommers, for years queen of one of Atlanta's most notorious gilded palaces of sin, and well known throughout the South as a sporting character, will take charge of a place of refuge for fallen women within the next few weeks, according to an announcement made by the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

Belle Sommers has reformed, she declares, and $2,500 of the money donated for the establishment and maintenance of the home has been given by her.

Marion Jackson, head of the religion movement, has stated that $10,000 is needed for the home. The $2,500 given by Belle Sommers is to be invested as a nucleus of an endowment for future maintenance of the Martha's Home, as the institution will be called.

Marquard Sued for $25,000.

New York, Nov. 15.—Joseph Kane, an actor and theatrical booking agent, brought suit to-day in the Supreme Court for $25,000 against "Rube" Marquard, the star pitcher of the New York Giants, alleging alienation of affections of Mrs. Kane, who is known on the stage as Blossom Seeley.

Kane signed up Marquard after the base ball season to appear in a base ball sketch in vaudeville with Mrs. Kane. It was not long, Kane alleges, until his friends told him that "Rube's" interest in "fair stage partner" was more than platonic. Kane had the pair watched and last week traced them to Atlantic City, where he and a private detective raided a hotel where, he alleges, Marquard and the woman were stopping together.

Mrs. Kane and Marquard fled down the fire escape and came to New York in an automobile, leaving an outraged husband behind in Atlantic City busily engaged in swearing out warrants against the noted outfielder.

WAS THIS GIRL POISONED?

Miss Minnie Marchman Dies in Ashburn, Ga., in Convulsions.

Ashburn, Ga., Nov. 15.—White Atlanta experts are examining the contents of the stomach of Miss Minnie Marchman to finally determine whether the death of this beautiful young girl was caused by poison, officers are searching for Tom Cleghorn, her fiancé.

At the coroner's inquest the mother of the dead girl testified that she had died after eight convulsions, during which she foamed at the mouth and gave every indication that she had been poisoned. The mother had never seen her daughter take any medicine and there was no trace of any in the house.

Preparations had been made for the burial of Miss Marchman when the family physician became suspicious as to the cause of the girl's death and ordered the funeral stopped. Cleghorn, who has been missing for four days, and the dead girl were sweethearts, it is reported, and it was commonly supposed that they would soon be married. The two visited Ashburn together some few days ago, it is reported, and while here Cleghorn is alleged to have purchased fruit and candy, which he gave Miss Marchman. After eating these she was attacked with convulsions and died in agony.

The dead girl's friends claim that Cleghorn had promised to marry her and that the visit to Ashburn was ostensibly for the purpose of getting a marriage license. It is stated that Cleghorn made some excuse for postponing the marriage and the girl returned to her home, six miles in the country. Cleghorn disappeared and the girl died four days after.

Local physicians removed the girl's stomach and forwarded it to an Atlanta chemist. It is expected that he will discover just what kind of poison, if any, killed the girl.

Minnie Marchman was one of the belles of the lumber country and the little town of Ashburn, the county seat of Turner county, is very much wrought up over the matter.

Wrecked Life, Said Girl.

Ashburn, Ga., Nov. 15.—The smoldering excitement in Turner county over the alleged poisoning of one of the most popular young women, and the strange disappearance of her fiancé, was fanned today by a statement from the mother of the girl, Mrs. Mattie Marchman, that her daughter had accused Tom Cleghorn, a few hours before she died in convulsions, of having "wrecked her life."

"I never want to lay my eyes on Tan Cleghorn again. He has wrecked my life and I want him to reap his just reward," she said, as the conversation is recalled by her mother.

But when her mother asked the cause of her strange illness, and what she meant by her statement, the girl's only reply was the sorrowful weeping which marked her demeanor up to the hour of death.

The only time that she mentioned her sweetheart, to whom she was passionately devoted, was in her dying statement to Mrs. Marchman.

The Marchman family continues certain that Minnie was poisoned, but they do not accuse any one. Every member of the family is working to unravel the mystery, and to find out who is to blame. W. J. Cochran, her brother-in-law, is waiting to lead the report of the Atlanta chemist to whom the girl's stomach was sent for examination, before he starts up to find the druggist who sold the poison and then to track down the person who bought it.

Moslems Poison Christian Wells.

Constantinople, Nov. 14.—A new danger confronts Christians in Turkey. Moslems are poisoning the wells from which Christians get their water supply, and a number of deaths have already occurred because of the absence of sanitation and medical supplies cholera and typhus are spreading and the new case each day now average over fifty. Smallpox is raging within the Turkish lines between the inner and outer defenses, although Nazim Pasha, the war minister, and other government officials are trying to keep the true situation a secret from the city.

The worst sufferers from the famine here are little children. Hundreds have fallen victims of starvation.

Courtmartials continue daily. The latest batch of victims include an officer and seventeen Turkish privates who were executed after being found guilty of cowardice at the battle of Kirk Killeshah. According to the findings of the court, they were panicked among their companions in flight.

After being shot to death, the bodies of an officer and a private soldier were suspended from a globe on the military parade grounds with the following placard appended: "All cowards may expect this end."

A silent man never has to get words.

BROWN MOVED THE PROPERTY.

Said Store Was Robbed, But Later Admits He Moved Goods.

(Greenville Piedmont.) J. E. Brown, the merchant whose store near Gantt, is alleged to have been robbed on the night of Sunday, November 3, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. This action is said to have been taken Monday and to have preceded a petition which the creditors of the merchant were preparing to file.

Judge Smith, in the United States Court at Columbia, has issued an order restraining Brown from disposing of any of his property pending settlement of the case in bankruptcy.

Detectives have been at work on the case since the alleged robbery. These detectives are said to have looted considerable merchandise, alleged to have been removed from the store, at a point about ten miles distant. It was said by an official this morning that Brown was carried to this point to-day by officials and was asked if the merchandise was taken from his store. He is alleged to have admitted that it was and to have admitted that it was taken there by himself.

It will be remembered that the claim was made that Brown's store was robbed on the night of November 3, and that $2,500 in cash was taken from the safe. This money, Brown is said to have claimed, did not belong altogether to him, a large amount being money that he had collected for fertilizer companies.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON.

FOR $1,000 LAW RISKS LIFE.

Daring Parachute Jumper Explodes Big Gas Bag With Dynamite.

New York, Nov. 16.—A big dun-colored balloon floated slowly over the Hudson from the Jersey shore toward New York Tuesday. Tens of thousands of persons watched it. On a trapeze swung below it a man was seated. The balloon was about 500 feet in the air and opposite 127th street, when—

Boom! Boom! Two loud explosions sounded. Instantly after the explosion a cloud of dense black smoke enveloped the balloon and hid the man on the cross-bar under it.

Through the thick smoke flashes of fire darted, for the balloon was in flames. As the smoke thickened and formed a huge mushroom, the man dropped from the cross-bar. For 200 feet he fell like a stone while the people nearest the shore gasped.

Then the big parachute which the man carried unfolded, and, clinging to it, he dropped gently in the Hudson.

Really it all was very thrilling and if you were not there to see it, you will be able to see it soon. For it was a moving picture stunt. He of the trapeze and the parachute was Podman Law, who for a sufficient sum of money will take his life in his hands at any time.

His balloon had been inflated with heated naphtha gas. Seated on the trapeze the daring Law held a string attached to a trigger above him—when he pulled the string the trigger set off a small charge of dynamite, which ignited the highly inflammable gas.

As Law fell into the river the tug Libble sped to him. On the tug were the moving picture machines. Their operators had been very busy, indeed, and continued to be for a while. For Law floated near the tug as if he was senseless, inanimate, dead—all very realistic, very.

Law received $1,000 to risk his life this time, but he paid his own expenses. He insisted that his demonstration had scientific value. He proved, he said, that Melvin Vaniman and his four voyagers, who were killed when Vaniman's great dirigible balloon exploded off Atlantic City, might have been saved had they taken proper precautions against such an accident. Law wore knit woolen garments saturated in a liquid which, he says, resists fire. Under his woolen hood he wore a foot ball player's helmet. A life-preserver was strapped around his waist.

"When the gas exploded," said he, "it was as if somebody had hit me over the shoulders with a base ball bat."

The backs of Law's hands were scorched. "How stupid!" said he. "I should have worn gloves."

Greenville, Nov. 16.—The $10,000 damage suit brought against T. U. Vaughn by a girl who was a victim of the self-confessed criminal while she was an inmate of the Odd Fellows' Orphan Home, near this city, and under the care and guardianship of him, has resulted in a settlement between the parties concerned.

The action was brought July 11th last, and since then until the time of settlement T. U. Vaughn's property had been under attachment.

At the time of the action it was claimed by the plaintiff that the defendant, T. U. Vaughn, owned considerable property in Greenville county. The warrant of attachment which was served July 12 alleged that the defendant has property in South Carolina consisting of $4,000 in the bank of Taylors, real estate situated on Carrier street in the city of Greenville, valued at $8,000, one automobile, valued at $1,000, at Greenville, and a $1,700 note executed to him by the Gilreath Manufacturing Company, now held by the People's Bank of Greenville.
