

AND STILL NO LIGHTS.

Another hope of lights has gone! At least for the present it seems that there is nothing in store for the people of Walhalla and community in the way of modern lighting of streets and homes. And why? Every citizen who has even a small amount of money possible of investment in a local company with its purpose the furnishing of light and power can in a measure answer the question. It is due simply to lack of confidence and lack of interest in the town. We "don't care," we lack local pride, and we are too willing to "let the other fellow do things."

We quote below a few statements contained in a recent issue of the Scientific American. They are well worthy of careful consideration, and the people of Walhalla—every one of us—may well study these facts and statements, viewing them from every angle. We quote:

The most prosperous, the most talked-of street in the western hemisphere is Broadway, New York. Electric lighting made it so. Its millions of electric bulbs stand for business enterprise, wealth, prosperity. That good street lighting means dollars and cents to a community. The city of Cleveland has demonstrated to its own satisfaction. A few years ago the north side of Euclid avenue, between East 55th and East 66th streets, installed a block of ornamental street fixtures. The result was magical. That side of the street was crowded, the other side deserted. Real estate values increased on the illuminated and decreased on the dark side. Not until both sides were equally well lighted was a commercial equilibrium established on that particular section of Euclid avenue. Similarly, Minnesota street, between 4th and 7th streets, in St. Paul, was transformed from a gloomy thoroughfare, flanked by dilapidated structures, into a prosperous street in which new buildings took the place of the old—a result accomplished entirely by street lighting.

Three hundred cities in the United States and Canada have tried ornamental street lighting and have found that it pays as a municipal investment, as well as in heightened civic pride, in greater prestige, and, therefore, in better citizenship.

Cities, like human beings, are judged by impressions. The fleeting glimpse of a town caught from the windows of a railway train that stops for a few minutes at a station leaves an indelible impression upon the traveler. If he sees nothing but forbidding gloom, punctuated by an occasional flickering gas lamp, he inevitably sets down that community as a third-rate municipality; if he catches a glimpse of a main street ablaze with light, he knows that here business thrives, gloom means dirt, squalor, stagnation; light means activity, industry, life. From the lighting of a city its character can invariably be deduced.

Do you get that? Those few statements at the end of the article appear to have "been made to order" for Walhalla. Truth is often unpleasant, but it is a mighty good thing some times to get the truth handed to us and rubbed in.

GOING AFTER DOPE FRIENDS.

A recent dispatch sent out from Atlanta announces that Georgia is to be the ground of one of the first "battles" against the dope fiends. The war is to be waged through the medium of collection of reliable statistics. We quote:

A census of the opium and cocaine users in Georgia is to be taken shortly under the direction of Congress, which is now preparing the special machinery for the work.

The opium and cocaine investigation will be nationwide, and will lay before the eyes of the internal revenue officers, as far as possible, the names and addresses of every opium smoker, morphine fiend and cocaine user who does not succeed in evading the law to satisfy his cravings.

It is anticipated from local investigation, the proportion of morphine and opium users in Georgia will be comparatively small, but that the number of cocaine users, especially among the negroes and poorer classes of white people, will be astoundingly large.

When the users of opium and cocaine are known and the amounts consumed are known, it will be easy, according to government officials, to distinguish the cases in which the narcotics are being procured for legitimate medical purposes.

It is fortunate that the investigation is to be under the control of the internal revenue department of the national government. Cities, towns and States have endeavored to get at the root of the evil, but with little or no practical results. The evil is probably the worst that afflicts a certain class of American citizens, and nothing short of a vigorous national campaign against it will ever accomplish much. The gathering of statistics as to the users and vendors will accomplish more, doubtless, than any other method looking to the extermination of the evil. The vendor is a violator of law and subject to heavy penalty if convicted; the user is invariably ashamed of his practice unless he has gone so far with the drug that he has lost all self-respect and even the semblance of manhood.

With the national government's forces aligned in a work of extermination of the narcotic drug evil, there is hope of saving many from themselves. The work by States or local government is a hopeless task.

More Bottles Sold Each Year.

It is easy to understand why an increasing number of bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is sold yearly. Thos. Verran, 286 Edward street, Houghton, Mich., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has always proven an effective remedy, quickly relieving tickling in the throat, and stopping the cough with no bad after effects." GAINES GOT FIFTEEN DOLLARS.

"One of His Legs Was Longer than It Really Ought to Be."

David Gaines, gentleman of leisure (also of color) was "thereabouts" at the recent Southern wreck near Easley. Gaines has a "powerful" limp that he carries with him at all times, and it served a good turn for him at the wreck that day. Walking out where some officials were going among the injured and seeing that they were properly cared for and sent to the hospital if necessary, Gaines put all the appearances of great pain into his limp, and was soon accosted by an "adjuster," who told him to get on the train and go to the hospital at Greenville. "I don't want to go to the hospital, boss; I want to get home," was the pitiful plea of Gaines. And the adjuster, glad to get rid of one victim, told him to "sign this paper" and he would be taken home on the next train. Gaines signed the paper, by which he forever released the Southern Railway from all liability for damages to his person by reason of the wreck at Easley, and received $15 for his signature. Just what Gaines will do with his accumulated wealth is not certain.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Agninaldo's Nephew on Trial.

Los Angeles, Nov. 1.—Louis Modeno, nephew of Emilio Agninaldo, the famous Filipino leader, is on trial here to-day on a murder charge. He is accused of shooting a negro. He is defended by Frank Dominguez, who represented Agninaldo when he was put on trial at Manila by the United States government.

9,000 Warrants Sworn Out.

New York, Nov. 3.—Nine thousand persons are named in warrants issued to-day for their arrest if they try to vote at to-morrow's election. Supreme Court Justice Gavegan held that a voter can register only from the place where he actually resides, and, under this decision, the Honest Ballot Association and the Voters' League compiled a list of names of persons they charge with illegal registration.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

The Field is Rapidly Filling With Candidates for 1914.

Columbia, Nov. 7.—While he has never made an official or private statement, yet it is known that there is one man in South Carolina who has a burning ambition to go to the United States Senate. He wants the seat now held by Senator Tillman, and he will prove strong fighting material with any man in the State.

The man in question is John E. Swearingen, at present State Superintendent of Education. He is blind, yet he has carried on the work of an office in the State government that requires more eyes than any other department. He has done his work well and has added many features to the State's educational system. He has a program which he intends to carry out in the way of educational reforms, and he does not want to give up his office for the present. He is a nephew of Senator Tillman, a native of Edgefield county, and resembles the senior member of the Senate physically.

There is another man in South Carolina who has his eyes on the toga, and this man is John Gary Evans, of Spartanburg, many times candidate, and former Governor. It is a long time before the entry books close for the 1914 fight and the name of Mr. Evans may be added at any time. He is an aggressive campaigner and is known from one end of the State to the other. He was the political heir of Ben Tillman in the Governor's office, but failed when he tried to go higher.

W. F. Stevenson, of Cheraw, has promised an announcement for next May as to whether he will be in the race for the Senate. It is too early to entirely count him out, for he may be in. Mr. Stevenson is one of the best lawyers in South Carolina and was easy the leader in debate in the last General Assembly.

The Governor has expressed himself as being pleased with the conference held several nights ago. The Chief Executive is gradually forming a State ticket, and here is the way things look at present: For Governor, Charles Carroll Sims; for Lieutenant Governor, B. F. Kelly, J. M. Moore and others; for Adjutant General, O. W. Babb; for Attorney General, Thos. H. Peebles; for Railroad Commissioner, C. D. Fortner; for State Treasurer, D. W. McLaurin.

The biggest fight before the next General Assembly will be that for State Librarian. The place has been held for twelve years by Mrs. U. R. Brooks, who was Miss L. H. LaBorde. More than thirty have announced their candidacy for the place and a fierce campaign is being waged. The political leaders might take lessons from the campaign methods the young women are employing. They are flooding the mails with campaign literature, and practically every member of both the House and Senate is pledged to one or the other of the candidates.

There will be a lively scramble for the Associate Justiceship of the Supreme Court at the next session. The place held by Judge C. A. Woods is to be filled. The name of practically every Circuit Judge in the State has been suggested by their friends for the place. The fight will be interesting.

Some lively fights will take place in the Congressional races. Wyatt Aiken will be opposed by Victor B. Cheshire and F. H. Doninick. The latter are administration men and this will make it easier for Mr. Aiken's re-election. Jos. T. Johnson will be opposed by S. J. Nichols, one of the administration leaders in Spartanburg. No opposition has developed so far to Jas. F. Byrnes in the Second District. D. E. Finley will have to face a big field of candidates. Senator P. L. Martin, of Chester, is among those mentioned as a possible candidate. A. F. Lever will not have opposition in the Seventh District.

The lines will not be drawn in the race for Governor. Religion, secret orders and the personal attractions of the candidates will play an important part in that race. The Governor has stated that he will not take a hand except to fight Richard I. Manning. Several of the candidates are supporters of the Governor, but C. C. Sims is about the only man that will openly use that as a means of gaining votes.

It is rumored in Columbia that John H. Wharton, former Railroad Commissioner and member of the Senate from Laurens, will be a candidate for Secretary of State. R. M. McCown will very probably ask for re-election.

A Maker of Health. A good, honest medicine like Foley Kidney Pills gives health to many families. Mrs. O. Palmer, 635 Willow street, Green Bay, Wis., was seriously ill with kidney and bladder trouble. Mr. Palmer writes: "My wife is rapidly recovering her health and strength due solely to the use of Foley Kidney Pills." Bell's drug store, adv.

THIS NEW FISH HAS FUR.

Polar Trout is Discovered in Far North by Explorer.

The polar trout, the only fur-bearing fish known to natural history, is the latest contribution of the arctic regions, according to John Bunker, of Northwood Center, N. H., who returned to Boston recently after a two months' exploring trip in Greenland. He brought photographs and specimens of a strange fish, which he has called a polar trout.

This peculiar denizen of the polar seas resembles a square tail trout in shape and gameness and attains ten to fifteen pounds in weight. The skin is covered with fine brownish fur, resembling the texture of mole-skin. This fur is lightly spotted with white.

Bunker caught three specimens, two in a river and one in a small headwater pond about 200 miles north of Baffin Bay.

Plot Was Carefully Laid.

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 6.—The frustrated plot to assassinate President Adolfo Diaz, of Nicaragua, and all his cabinet ministers on October 29th, was laid with remarkable care, according to details published here.

The plotters are members of the Liberal parties. They divided themselves into three groups. The first group was to kill the President and two cabinet members; the second was to assassinate the Vice President and minister of foreign affairs, and the third was to hurl dynamite into the chamber of deputies. The discovery of the conspirators when they were holding a meeting to arrange the final details was entirely accidental. Nearly all the conspirators have been lodged in jail.

Dr. Muret a "High Brow."

Atlanta, Nov. 8.—Dr. Ernest Muret, who was convicted of counterfeiting in connection with the crimes of Hans Schmidt, in New York, has become a member of the "high brow" criminal colony at the Atlanta Federal prison. A highly cultured and educated man, he will probably be put to work in the office, along with the embezzling bankers, ex-capitalists and caught Wallingfords generally. He will serve a sentence of seven years and six months, having pleaded guilty to the charges.

Dr. Muret was originally arrested on suspicion that he had helped Schmidt, the mad priest, dispose of the body of the murdered girl, but no evidence was found against him. Detectives, however, found a counterfeiting outfit in his possession, and he admitted he had been making bad money.

FAIRMEN AND FARMING. Five Years' Experience With Fall Plowing.

(By C. C. Roberts, Dixon, Miss.)

The question of fall plowing cannot be properly settled by simply stating that it is best to break all lands in the fall, nor by stating that next spring is the best time, because conditions vary and these conditions must always be given consideration.

Our mild climate and heavy rainfall, taken advantage of, with crops on the land all the time, would indeed be a valuable agricultural asset; but this same mild climate and heavy rainfall, not taken advantage of, with our fields left bare, becomes the source of our agricultural weakness and poverty.

From experience and observation the past five years I have reached the following conclusion in regard to fall plowing: If the land is level or such that great washing is not likely to occur and contains a vast amount of humus, breaking is advisable. This vegetable matter will add much to the crops the next year, as it will be decayed by spring; furthermore, the preparation can be more easily done. On the other hand, if the land washes, you had better let it alone unless breaking can be done early—October—and a cover crop planted. This cover crop can take up plant food that might be leached out during the winter rains, especially nitrogen.

The green cover crop will decay when turned in the spring much easier than the dry matter left from the previous crop—the old stalks, grasses and vines. The decay of the old crop of plants plus the green winter cover crop and the saving of nitrogen makes fall plowing valuable. v-dL2rmH

My cotton crop of 1911 demonstrated the value of fall breaking of land and sowing same to winter cover crop, and the saving of nitrogen makes fall plowing valuable. One acre which was broken with two-horse plow to a depth of six or seven inches the previous fall and seeded to rye gave me an increased yield of $12 over the other acres. All the cotton land grew peas the previous year and was practically the same kind of soil (sandy ridge land), hence a good investment. The labor and seed cost $2.50 for this acre, leaving $9.50 net profit.

The only disadvantage I am able to see in fall plowing is where the farmer fails to plant a winter crop on land that easily washes. A barren soil broken in the fall which is subject to washing and not planted in a cover crop will in most cases prove a detriment to the next crop. This was demonstrated in this section a few years ago.

Our deep plowing should be done in the fall while the subsoil is dry, with large two-horse plows and left in the rough, the only exception being with the oat crop, which should have a smooth surface for the benefit of the mower. The surface should be left—that is, broken broadcast instead of in ridges. A middle burster is a good tool with which to turn under a large amount of vegetable matter on ridge land by beginning at the lower side of the field or piece and finishing at the upper side.

The safety of the State. (Lancaster News.) The safety of the State lies in the hands of the honest small farmer, the man who works hard for his living, but who is well content with his lot. He is happier far than he knows and more independent, too, than many others are.

Tarheel Farmers and Their Money. (Charlotte Observer.)

The Observer, a few days ago, remarked on the pile of money the farmers have on deposit in the bank of the little town of Morven. Good bank accounts seem to be the order of the day in all parts of the State. The Lincoln News, referring to the bank deposits of Lincoln county, says the First National Bank of Lincoln has on deposit "subject to checks," a snug sum of $306,938.80. Much of this represents the earnings of the farmers. A little further on, in the town of Shelby, the farmers are not waiting for notes to mature, but are paying them off and leaving the balance of their crop money in the banks. All of this goes to reflect the prosperous condition of the State, and much of this prosperity is due to the fact that slipshod methods of farming are a thing of the past in North Carolina. The farmers are going into the business of farming on a business basis and are not only farming to make a living, but to make a living and money to boot.

WOMEN TO MAKE ILLINOIS DRY.

300 Cities and Villages to Hold Elections in the Spring.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—As a result of the showing made at the election Tuesday, when the votes of recently enfranchised women are said to have placed 18 out of 24 municipalities voting in the "dry" column, 300 cities and villages of Illinois will hold local option elections next spring. This was the statement yesterday of F. S. McBride, State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

"Under nominal conditions," said McBride, "as the vote of Tuesday showed, the women will be three to one on the side of the dries. Organized properly, the proportion should be four to one."

Chicago may be one of the cities to face the "wet" and "dry" issue in the spring, according to report, although it is the understanding that the Anti-Saloon League does not favor a vote in Chicago so soon. The liberals are said to be considering the advisability of bringing suit to test the constitutionality of the suffrage law in order to prevent the women from voting at the proposed option elections in April.

It is said that McManigal's destination is Havana, whence he will go to South America. McManigal was released secretly a few days ago.
