WALHALLA, S. C.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1919.

LOOKING THE ISSUE IN THE EYE.

There are one or two things about our war debt which we might as well look squarely in the eye.

To begin with, we authorized the bills; we owe the money, and it's got to be paid.

Moreover, it's going to be paid. To fight the war took money; to win, still more money—and we had to win.

We were ready to fight as long as necessary. We were ready to subscribe to loan after loan—as many as might be needed. We were willing to give—to sacrifice without stint. We had to win—at all costs, costs.

Of course we knew that the war would end some time, but no man knew when. Therefore, to make the war as short as possible, we prepared for a struggle of indefinite length. It was necessary to plan in advance—and we prepared on a stupendous scale.

This meant, of necessity, that no matter when the fighting stopped there would be bills unpaid. The fact that the war ended sooner than anyone expected does not relieve us of the obligation to pay the bills. Indeed, it should make us all the more willing, for if the struggle had continued twelve months longer our debt would have been thirty-six billion dollars more than it now is, and the toll of dead would have been frightful.

But we are not being asked to sacrifice—to give. We will not have to subscribe to loan after loan. The war has been won, and the bond issue that is being offered is not merely the "fifth" loan—it is the "Victory" loan—the one that finishes the job.

Now, there is another matter—the question of taxes.

There are only two ways by which the government can raise the required money—by bonds and by taxes. And it may be set down as a matter of certain conviction that the government is going to raise the money. It has no intention of repudiating its honorable obligations.

But every dollar paid out in taxes is water over the dam. The money is gone—for a good and proper purpose, but gone nevertheless. It draws no interest—at least none for you. No man ever yet received interest on the taxes he paid.

Money invested in bonds is still on the job. It strengthens your credit; it makes you a share-holder in your government, and day and night it is working for you—drawing interest.

Taxes or bonds—which?

Bonds, of course—Victory-Liberty Bonds. Not only because we owe the money, not only because we have won the war, but because we want to settle the bill and get it behind us.

The government has pledged its faith—
We are the government.

Want Burleson Ousted.

Brunswick, Ga., April 17. Resolutions were passed at the meeting of the Georgia Federation of Labor here to-day calling upon President Wilson to remove from office Postmaster General Burleson. The resolution was offered by the telephone operators and the Allied Electric Workers, and his removal was asked on the ground that the Postmaster General, in the capacity of wire chief, had been unfair to organized labor, and unfair to the public because telephone and telegraph rates had been unreasonably increased. A number of amendments were offered, but the resolution was adopted as introduced.

FOUR MILLIONS ARE SUFFERING

Message Comes from Bible Lands that Many are in Need.

New York, April 17.—From Bible lands Easter messages bearing a new appeal have come by cable to the national headquarters of the American Committee for Armenian and Serbian Relief in New York. These messages are supplemented by reports from relief workers in the field that conditions throughout Western Asia are very grave.

The following is from Dr. James L. Barton, chairman of the committee, who is in the near East in charge of the committee's relief work in Palestine, Armenia and adjacent countries, where nearly 4,000,000 people are reported to be suffering:

"After four years of wandering in the wilderness of persecution, hundreds of thousands of children and widows, homeless but not without hope, turn to great-hearted, benevolent America this glad Easter season with gratitude and with prayer that it become not weary in its work of mercy for a stricken but grateful people."

From Beirut, Syria, come the greetings of the children of Syria to the children of America, transmitted by Major James H. Nicol, who suggests that the children of America establish a little city for the orphans of Syria. It follows:

"Tell the children they are helping to feed and clothe 30,000 out of 110,000 people investigated and found needy; also 2,000 children in our orphanages, with supplementary diet to 2,000 more."

"Can the children of America help to establish a shelter city for 5,000 orphans, with homes, shops, schools, farms, stores, and government conducted by children under guidance, to make them a great asset to the future of the country?"

"One hundred are now having sight saved in the committee's eye clinics. Fifty thousand garments were carefully distributed in March and 500,000 more are needed."

"Children of Syria send grateful Easter greeting to the children of America."

At the same time delayed messages reached the committees from Erivan, at the foot of Mount Ararat, where the ark rested when the great flood abated, declaring that typhus was raging in that region, medicines were exhausted, and conditions were "indescribably bad."

One of the messages follows: "Food shortage terrible. Supply now in Erivan will last a few days. Every week's delay costs thousands of lives."

According to the estimates of the relief workers there were 330,000 refugees in the Caucasus alone who required aid. This is but a small section of the territory dependent on the American Committee for Armenian and Serbian Relief for help.

MAKE PASTURES FOR YOUR PIGS

Old Methods of Caring for Swine are No Longer Practical.

Clemson College, April 18.—A few years ago farm boys "slopped" the hogs or "pitched" them some ears of corn. To-day the pig club boy gives his pigs a balanced ration. He is gaining a scientific knowledge of feeds and feeding. He is learning that if we are to produce pork cheaply, a great deal of attention must be given to pasture building and to the growing of forage crops. Only in very rare cases can money be made in feeding a grain ration alone the year round. Quite often forage is the deciding factor between profit and loss, says W. C. Parsons, pig club agent. His suggestions will be of value to the pig club members and other good farmers as well.

Forages are not alone valuable for cheap feed, but they are a great aid in developing bone, muscle and constitutional vigor in pigs. A good pig, when kept in a pen, very often becomes unthrifty. Therefore, any plan of pork production which does not have in it the use of forage crops is very likely to prove unprofitable. And now is the time to plan for the production of these crops. It will be too late to do this next fall.

The hog is a grazing animal, and to be grown cheaply must be provided with pasture crops. Among the valuable pasture crops for hogs are Bermuda grass, lespedeza, the clovers and alfalfa. Plan now to have a succession of these pasture crops throughout the year.

Feeds that are rich in protein, such as shorts, middlings and tankage, so essential to the proper development of hogs, are high in price and hard to get. It is, therefore, important to have home-grown crops that are known to be rich in protein. Cowpeas, soy beans, peanuts, velvet beans, oats, rye and rape are good substitute feeds. Your county agent is anxious to tell you how to grow these crops.

But a protein supplement should be fed for economical gains. The hog makes greater and cheaper gains if he has a balanced ration. Give your pigs plenty of green feeds plus a light feed of corn, shorts, middlings or ground oats or tankage, and then watch them grow.

Good Old Mule.

"Old Ham," a mule belonging to a farmer in Southern Missouri, died the other day, aged 31 years. "But it wasn't the age that attracted so much attention," says the Altamont Times. "It was the fact that the good old mule had taken its owner to church more than one thousand times." Reminds us of what Hank Witherspoon said to an agent who tried to sell him a tractor. "I've spent nigh forty years learning the temperament of a mule. I ain't a-go'in' to waste all that experience now fooling with no tractor."

Now since taking Peruna I weigh one hundred and thirty-five pounds. All my friends said I would never get well. I was just a shadow. I have surely recommended your Peruna to many of my friends, and they are using it. I will recommend Peruna, for I am so thankful for what it has done for me." Sold Everywhere.

TUG SINKS, SEAMEN DROWN.

Returning Soldiers Witness Catastrophe in N. Y. Harbor.

New York, April 17.—The homecoming joy of 1,362 American troops on the steamer Saxonia was dashed this afternoon when the soldiers, clustered, cheering, at the rail, saw the naval tug Freehold sent to the bottom of the Hudson river by a blow from the Saxonia's propeller, as she was working to warp the big liner into her pier.

A muster of the Freehold's crew to-night showed three men missing. Rescued members of the crew said that they saw Larry Lanahan, chief machinist's mate, sink after a short struggle. It was thought possible that the other two men unaccounted for had been picked up by small boats and taken ashore.

The sinking of the tug was one of the most dramatic marine accidents that has ever occurred here. The cheers which a moment before had been echoing back and forth from transport to dock were suddenly hushed, as from the stern of the great vessel came the sound of rending steel and wood.

Quiet to Rescue.

The Saxonia's decks, crowded to the rail with returning troops, hale and wounded alike, were the scene of the greatest confusion, which lasted, however, but for an instant. Then quick-thinking fighting men, alive to the hazards of No Man's Land, put their thoughts into action. Ropes were thrown overboard, and five seamen were pulled from the Hudson.

Meanwhile the naval tug Crawford, also engaged in warping the Saxonia into her dock, went to the rescue and saved three more lives. Police rescued three others, and a row boat hastily put out from the shore brought the total of those who were saved to 11.

Sank in Three Minutes.

The Freehold was less than three minutes in sinking. According to witnesses, it was shortly before 4:30 when the tug, pulling the vessel's stern around, received its death blow.

Witnesses said that the commander of the Saxonia evidently intended to aid the tug by giving the larger craft a "kick ahead." The quick rush ahead, however, sucked the tug in under the stern and the Saxonia's 30-ton propeller blade descended like a knife on the stern of the smaller vessel.

Those on the dock hardly had time to run to the pier head before the tug's stack disappeared beneath the water of the Hudson. Only the tips of her masts remained above the surface.

Heavy Earthquake Felt.

Washington, April 17.—An earthquake of unusual severity was recorded late to-day by the seismograph at Georgetown University. The earth tremors were first recorded at 4:59 and lasted until 6:10, reaching the point of highest intensity at 5:10. It was estimated at the university that the center of disturbance was located approximately 2,000 miles from Washington, and probably in Central or South America.
