Historical Sketch of the Grubbs Family, and Other Matters.

As far as I know, John M. Grubbs and his brothers and sisters were born and raised in Anderson county, near Belton and Honea Path. About the year 1836 John M. Grubbs married the daughter of John Cox and moved to Fork township and raised a family there. His sister, Peggy, married William Cox, a brother of John Cox. I mention Aunt Peggy and her daughter particularly for the reason that I boarded with them for three months during the Civil War, and went to school. Betsy married Norris Wright, an old-time tax collector for Anderson county, at the time when the negroes and the land paid nearly all the taxes. Cena married a Robertson. Disle was married three times, the surnames of her husbands being Latimer, Tribble and Hill. Stephen Shirley, a half-brother, married a Majors and raised a family between Belton and Anderson. He was a soldier of the Civil War and was buried alive at the blow-up at Petersburg, Va. His brother, George, moved to Hart county, Georgia and settled near Shoal Creek and raised a family there. Williamston Grubbs remained near Honea Path and raised a family.

W. T. Grubbs was born in Fork township on April 5, 1841. He and his older brother, R. W. Grubbs, volunteered for the Civil War at the same time and joined Capt. J. L. Shandlin's company, Sloan's regiment. This company was made up partly from Pendleton and partly from Fork township. They boarded the train at Old Pendleton in 1861 and went to Columbia and drilled there for six or eight weeks. The regiment was then ordered to Richmond, Va. In a short time they were ordered to Manassas Junction, where the first big fight of the Civil War was expected to be fought. Early on Sunday morning, the 21st of July, the Fourth Regiment was ordered to fall in line and get ready for the fight. In the meantime Capt. Whit Kilpatrick's company was sent up the creek to guard the bridge to keep the enemy from crossing. Our lieutenant-colonel, C. S. Mattison, sitting on his horse in the rear of the regiment, said to us: "Remember, men, you are South Carolinians!" We could see the enemy crossing the creek up above. We were soon on the march to meet them. The Fourth Regiment and Major Wheat's Battalion of Tigers, from New Orleans, were the first to engage the enemy that morning. We held them in check for some time and then fell back to our regular army. They said that "we would be only a breakfast spell; that they would whip us out and go to Richmond, our capital, and have a ball that night." They got the ball so heavy at the junction that they decided to go the other way. They were routed about the middle of the evening and went back toward Washington in a panic. We had plenty of fresh troops that came in after the enemy had been routed to follow up our victory, and probably would have taken Washington city, but it was ordered otherwise, and our victory ended there.

The saddest thing that happened to our company occurred the next day while we were at camp on the bank of Bull Run. Some of the boys had been out on the battlefield and gathered up some brass shells that had not been exploded. John Lewis, one of our company, was handling one and dropped it on the ground and it exploded, and one piece of the shell hit Waddle Hillhouse and killed him so dead he never knew what it was that struck him, and another piece struck Michael Bellotte about the ankle and broke his leg. I think the leg was amputated by Dr. P. H. E. Sloan, surgeon of the regiment. Bellotte died in a short time.

At the Second Battle of Manassas my brother, R. W. Grubbs, was so badly wounded that he died in 21 days, at Warrenton, Va. My younger brother, John L. Grubbs, joined Orr's famous regiment, Capt. F. E. Harrison's company, and was severely wounded in the leg in one of the battles and went on crutches for some time. When he was able to return to his command he got a transfer to the Second Rifles, to be with his brother. At the Battle of Will's Valley, near Lookout Mountain, he was killed—the same night that Col. Whit Kilpatrick and many

"IT SURE IS FINE."

Anderson Woman Says She is Glad to Recommend It Publicly.

"I am glad to recommend Tanlac to the public, for it has done so much to give back health to my boys and girls and other relatives. It sure is no medicine," declared Mrs. Joseph Cathey, of No. 12 "H" street, Anderson, in a statement she gave May 25, 1917. Her husband, a daughter, a son and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Cathey said, had all been greatly helped by Tanlac.

"My husband suffered from indigestion, and he was troubled a lot with headaches, and also his appetite was bad. He complained frequently of being weak and run-down. My daughter Mattie had about the same trouble her father did—indigestion, nervousness and terrible headaches. Mr. Cathey thinks Tanlac is a mighty fine medicine, for it helped him so much. Now he never complains of his troubles for which he took Tanlac, and Tanlac got him in fine shape. The Tanlac just made a new person of my daughter Mattie, and soon had her in fine health. It sure is one more good remedy. One of my married boys and his wife also took Tanlac, and it helped them a lot."

other good men were killed. He was brought from the battlefield by his brother and W. E. Walters, chaplain of the regiment, and was rolled in his blanket and buried in that way. That was the best they could do, as they had orders to leave that place. My youngest brother, George W. Grubbs, joined Capt. Jones' company of sixteen-year-old boys and did service around Old Pendleton and surrounding country. He died in 1918 at his home near Jefferson, Texas. Our oldest brother, W. L. Grubbs, was a lieutenant in Capt. D. L. Cox's company, Second Rifles. He did a great deal of hard marching and fighting and was nearly all of the time with his company. He was slightly wounded once, but never left his company, and was with it at the surrender of Lee's army. I have been told that when the army returned from the Battle of Sharpsburg he was in command of the regiment, all the senior officers having been either killed, missing or wounded. He now lives in West Texas at the age of 83 years. He was presented with a fine sword by the ladies of Petersburg for his gallant service. My father also responded when they called for the ages of 50. He was orderly sergeant in Thomas H. Russell's company, from Anderson county, and did service around Charleston and surrounding country. He died about the year 1893 at his home near Jefferson, Texas.

The writer of this sketch lost his right arm at Fredericksburg in December, 1862, while being one of the color guards. The ball that took off the arm weighed 24 pounds. Capt. S. P. Dendy, who commanded the company next to the colors, said the ball tipped his hat brim before it struck my arm. The arm was dressed by Dr. O. M. Doyle in the night by the use of a piece of tallow candle held by Dr. John Doyle, of Texas. I lay on the snowy ground for about 48 hours, and was then sent to Chimborazo Hospital at Richmond, and my sister, E. J. Grubbs, came and waited on me until I got able to go home. In 1864 I married the daughter of Robert A. King, and we have been living together for 56 years—longer than any other couple of any of the Grubbs families. My brother, Lieut. Grubbs, has lived to a greater age than any of the Grubbs children.

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

FOR EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION

Of Coal to Consumers—One Ton to Household, but Not More.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 19.—Domestic consumers of coal in the South were put on a war-time basis to-night by orders issued by the coal committee of the Southern Regional Committee of the railroads' administration. Limiting purchase of coal for home use to one ton to a household.

The order followed that of two days ago cutting off manufacturers from purchases of coal and limiting supplies to the first five classes of the fuel priority list, and it was indicated by members of the committee that unless the soft coal strike situation improves shortly, and more coal is mined, much more severe restrictions may become necessary.

Say Public Does Not Realize. It may become imperative to forbid use of electricity for show windows in stores, unnecessary advertising and even for moving picture and other theatres, it was said. In the meantime the public generally was urged to conserve coal and fighting as much as possible. The general public does not realize the seriousness of the situation, members of the committee said.

To-night's order, which applies to all the territory east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, except parts of Virginia in the Pocahontas district, was addressed to all coal agents in the Southern region. It follows:

Garfield's Orders.
"We are in receipt of the following instructions from the United States fuel administrator to-day: 'Because of the great scarcity of coal for household use, it is imperative that deliveries until further notice of domestic sizes of coal from retail yards for household use be restricted to amounts not exceeding one ton per household. 'Please instruct all local agents to notify all retail dealers that the fuel administration expects them to act accordingly, and further notify them that future deliveries of coal for sale at retail will only be made to those who strictly observe this requirement.'"

The Southern Region.
The Southern region, it was said, is dependent now upon coal produced in the Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia fields, and production in these mines is less than one-third of normal. Making the South dependent on its own fields had become necessary by reason of coal for the South from the Allegheny and Pocahontas fields being diverted to the Middle West and other sections to supply public utilities and transportation lines. Southern mines, too, are sending coal to the Southwest.

Mrs. J. M. Davis Dead.

(Tugaloo Tribune, Nov. 17.)
Mrs. Julia Davis, the beloved wife of J. M. Davis, died at their home on Chauga creek, near Hahira station, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Davis had been in declining health for several months, being a sufferer from cancer. She was treated in the Steedly Hospital, Spartanburg, for several weeks and came home about a month ago. All that loving hands and physicians could do to prolong her life was done. While at the hospital Mrs. Davis underwent an operation for the malady.

Mrs. Davis was 54 years old. She was born and reared in Oconee, having been a daughter of the late Spencer Chambers. She leaves, besides her heart-broken husband, three brothers and three sisters, as follows: Samuel, William and B. E. Chambers, Mrs. Kate McGeehan, Mrs. Mary Smith and Mrs. William Carson.

Mrs. Davis had long been a member of the Holly Springs Baptist church, and her body was interred in the cemetery of that church yesterday afternoon, funeral services being conducted by Rev. Henry Blackwell.

Many friends sympathize with the bereaved husband, brothers and sisters.

GARFIELD SAYS THERE WILL BE Coal for the People of United States. Must be a Change.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Speaking with the authority of President Wilson's cabinet, Fuel Administrator Garfield told representatives of the bituminous coal operators and miners here to-day that "the people of the United States need, must have and will have coal, and as long as the government stands they will not be prevented from getting it by anything the operators or miners may do."

Dr. Garfield explained that his purpose was to furnish the conference data which he would use in determining what wage advances, if any, agreed to by the operators and miners could be borne properly by the public.

"I represent the people of the United States in a different sense from the Secretary of Labor," Dr. Garfield said. "It is part of Mr. Wilson's function to effect conciliation. It is my sole function to exercise those powers conferred on the fuel administrator to see that an adequate supply of coal is furnished the people of the United States, and to see that in times of stress, such as we are still, unhappily, in the midst of, the prices asked and received for coal are not excessive."

"The people of the United States the question now is, what is an excessive price for coal, we all agreed, but the question now is, what is an excessive price? Now will the public agree to go without this commodity. 'The people of the United States need, must have and will have coal, and they will not be prevented by anything the operators and miners may do, unless the government is dissolved into chaotic condition.'"
