-Hon. John L. Smith, of Seneca, was among the callers at The Courier office last week, and his visit was a most pleasant one, for we are always able to learn something from a conversation with him, and we enjoy hearing what he has to say. It was his first visit to us in quite a while. He was for many years one of the efficient rural mail carriers from the Seneca post office, and was thus engaged up to within the past few weeks. We were glad to learn from him that the government has recently retired him from active ser-

Cannot Insure Cotton.

Richland, Aug. 28, 1920. Editor Keowee Courier:

Please publish the following report of committee relative to the insuring of cotton:

"The committee appointed to consider the advisability of insuring cotton in the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Association of Oconee, after due consideration, were heartily in favor of ample warehouses for the storing of cotton, but deemed it unwise for the present to try to insure cotton, as no provision is made in our charter or individual policies for cotton insurance.

In the passing of Miss Addis the Poplar Springs church and Sunday school have lost one of their strongest and truest members and teachers. The large gathering of neighbors and friends and the many beautiful flowers that were laid on the grave by tender, loving hands gave testimony to the high esteem in which she was held in the community and by all who knew her.
