Camel

Sisters By KATHLEEN NORRIS

One hand propping his forehead as if it ached. "I'll stay at the club." "And as soon as I can go," Cherry added feverishly, "I shall join Martin. I'll wire him tomorrow—this is Sunday—and I'll go on Wednesday!" Peter sprang over the porch rail and vanished, walking with swift energy up the trail that led toward the mountain.

He came up to them, his glance resolutely averted from Cherry, explaining that he was homesick, assuring them that everything went well and making them laugh with an account of Justin Little's reception of the new turn of affairs.

He seemed Absolutely Dumfounded. "He looked at the paper, read it, laughed and said—in that little nervous, smiling way of his—that he felt it to be by no means conclusive." "I can hear him!" giggled Alix. "And I guess both you girls will have to come in in a day or two," Peter continued.

But at eight o'clock that evening, when she and Alix were sitting on the porch, when the last ebullient pink of the sunset had faded and great spiders had ventured forth into the dusk and the deus, there was a sudden hail at the gate, and Cherry knew that it was he!

lous, she explained, to talk over this newest development, and "whether it proved to be of any value or not," to try to find out what Uncle Lee had really wanted for them all, and then agree to do that in a friendly manner, out of court. "My first feeling, when Frenny told me," Anne, chatting pleasantly in the shade, "was one of such relief! For I hadn't wanted all that money one bit," she confessed gaily. "I only wanted to do what was fair. Only two or three nights ago I said to Frenny that it really belonged to us all, and last night we talked and talked about it, and the result was that I said that I must see the girls—we three are the only ones concerned, after all, and—Anne's old half-merry and half-pouting manner was unchanged—"what we decide is what really matters!" she finished.

and—and I don't understand much about it. As far as coming to any agreement with me is concerned, you might just as well have gone back on the train with Cherry. I hate to talk this way—but we all think you acted very—well, very meanly!" Alix finished rather flatly. "Perhaps it's just as well to understand each other!" Anne said, with hot cheeks. They exchanged a few more sentences, wasted words and angry ones, and then Anne walked over to a seat in the shade, to wait for another train, and Alix, with her heart beating hard and her color high, drove at mad speed back to the mountain cabin.

"I didn't ask her to lunch—I don't care!" Alix said to herself, in agitation. "She and Justin know they're beaten—they're just trying to patch it up before it's too late—I don't care—I won't have her think she can get away with any such scheme!" (To be Continued)

BAIL IS GRANTED TO GOSSETT.

Convicted of Rape in April, 1920—Sentenced to Forty Years.

Columbia, Sept. 21.—Kenneth Gossett, young white man of Honea Path, convicted in April, 1920, of rape at Abbeville and sentenced to forty years imprisonment in the State penitentiary, was released at noon to-day, shortly after Associate Justice T. P. Cochran, of the Supreme Court of South Carolina, after a hearing here this morning, had granted him bail in the sum of $6,000.

In his decision Justice Cochran declared that, while it was not for him to pass upon the guilt or innocence of Gossett, there were so many contradictory and inexplicable circumstances in the testimony at the trial that he could not say that in Gossett's case "the proof is evident or the presumption great," and that, therefore, he was entitled to bail.

Until he is again summoned into court, in the event that he is put on a second trial for his life, Gossett is at liberty for the first time since he was lodged in the State penitentiary nearly a year and a half ago.
