How a Quaker Punished a Thief.

A Quaker, having been disturbed by footsteps around his dwelling one night, arose from his bed and cautiously opened the back door to reconnoiter. Close by was an out-house, and under it a cellar, near a window of which was a man busily engaged in receiving the contents of his pork barrel from another in the cellar.

The Quaker approached, and the man on the outside fled. He stepped up to the cellar window and received the pork from the thief within, who, after a little time, asked his supposed accomplice in a whisper:

"Shall we take it all?" The owner of the pork said softly,

"Yes, take it all;" and the thief handed up the balance through the window and then came up himself. Imagine his consternation when, instead of greeting his companion in crime, he confronted the Quaker.

Both were astonished, for the thief proved to be a near neighbor, of whom none would have suspected such conduct. He pleaded for mercy, begged him not to expose him, spoke of the necessities of poverty, and promised faithfully not to steal again.

"If thou hadst asked me for meat, it would have been given thee. I pity thy poverty and thy weakness, and esteem thy family. Thou art forgiven."

The thief was greatly rejoiced, and was about to depart, when the Quaker said,

"Take the pork, neighbor."

"No, no," said the thief, "I don't want the pork."

"Thy necessity was so great that it led thee to steal. One-half of the pork thou must take with thee."

The thief insisted that he could never eat a morsel of it. The thought of the crime would make it choke him. He begged the privilege of letting it alone. But the Quaker was inflexible, and furnished the man with a bag, put half the pork therein and laying it upon his back, sent him home with it.

He met his neighbor daily for several years afterward, their families visited together, but the matter was kept a secret, and though in after years the circumstance was mentioned, the name of the delinquent was never made known. The punishment was severe and effectual. It probably was his first—it certainly was his last—attempt to steal.

Had the man been arranged before a court of justice and imprisoned for the petty theft, how different might have been the result. His family disgraced, their peace destroyed, the man's character ruined and his spirit broken.

What Ailed Mrs. Oldgay's Chicken.

At a school examination in Wincnester county, N. Y., the following composition was presented by a youthful competitor:

"A rooster is a male hen, whose business it is to help shout when one of the sisters lays an egg. The rooster is also made to fight. I onct had a rooster. He was wat was is called a Brawmaw. He stood eighteen inches high and weighed fifteen pounds. He was not supposed to be a fighter, but there is where they didn't know him. Old Mrs. Oldgay lives next door to us and her daughter Sallie goes to school with me, and maybe she don't know whatever was the matter with her mother's game rooster, so I am going to tell her.

"My rooster hadn't been bought more'n an hour, and didn't have time to get use to the lot, before he crowed, and Mrs. Oldgay's game flew onto the fence and crowed too. Billy (that was his name) thought he was saying howdye, so he hollered 'howdy-do' as loud and friendly as he could. But the game meant business. He flew down and sidled across the yard with his neck all stirred up, and, before Billy had time to explain, hit him an awful whack in the maw. Billy run off a little ways and talked fast, but the game run at him again and whacked him in the neck once more. This time Billy run off and stood still, like he was too surprised to think, but all on a sudden it come over him what was the matter, and then he got mad. He didn't know nothing about rules and fancy work, but he just stretched out his head and came down the slope a bulging. Yer oughter have seen them meet. Billy didn't check up a tall, but the game rolled end over end when the fifteen pounds hit him, and then laid still, exceptin' a little wiggle of the legs. Billy went up and kept a jumpin' on him till I throwed the game back over the fence, and that was what ailed Mrs. Oldgay's chicken."

The Cost of a Thief.

A woman recently arrested is supposed to have been shop-lifting and stealing in other ways for about twenty years, barring two years that she spent in prison, and her cost to the community has probably been ten times as much as the sum of what she had realized by her various peculations. The pickpocket is bad enough, although his victim loses only what the thief gains; the shop-lifter, or burglar, however, to gain $10 or $20, must steal property worth five or ten times as much. He dare not sell what he finds, so he takes it to a "fence," who disposes of it at a very low price, and pockets half of the proceeds. The thief who steals a lot of silverware and melts it, gets about one-third as much as his victim loses, while the garroter who snatches a $300 watch gets the value of the gold in the case—$40 or $50, perhaps. A man or woman, therefore, who supports a family by stealing costs the community $10,000 or more a year, and if compelled to "take care" of a policeman or two to avoid being molested, the amount is greater. And yet, in spite of the enormous expenses which thieves inflict on the community, no other evildoers are so tenderly left alone by policemen and detectives.—New York Herald.

"WHAT would you do if you were me and I were you?" tenderly inquired a young swell of his lady friend, as he escorted her home from church. "Well," said she, "if I were you I should throw away that vile cigarette, cut up my cane for fire-wood, wear my watch chain under my coat, and stay at home nights and pray for brains." The walk was finished in silence, and it is presumed that for once in his life the young man thought hard.

THE orange tree was brought from China by the Portugese about 1650. In the year 1851 451,000 boxes of oranges and lemons were imported into Great Britain, yielding to the customs £81,000.

Dead Leaves and Their Uses.

We very naturally admire growing leaves, and cannot help a feeling of sadness when they wither and fall. A casual look at the fallen leaves gives us the idea that their work is done, and that therefore He who has wonderfully created them permitted them to decay. But those who give more than a passing look find that, though their ornamental life is over, their useful life is but beginning. You pause perhaps, and for a moment wonder how dead leaves are utilized; but so many varities are used that it would be impossible to name them all, so we will only refer to the most common. Of these it is only fair to state that many of them are not allowed to wither on the tree, the reason being to preserve a larger amount of the essence of the leaf. For example, the leaves of the tea plant are allowed to grow to a certain stage, and are then gathered and dried quickly in the sun. Of course, every one knows that the death of a leaf is usually caused by the drying up of the sap, on which it depends for nourishment; so that by forcing the leaves to die more quickly than they naturally would, more of the taste or essence of the leaf is retained. And so dead tea leaves are of use to provide Dr. Johnson's favorite beverage, "tea." Of course, there are many different kinds of tea, but they are not under our consideration; sufficient is it if you consider that that most common of all commodities is simply dead leaves.

Next, let us take tobacco, as being an article in common use. This plant is a native of America, and is supposed to have been first brought to England by Sir Walter Raleigh, who taught his countrymen to smoke it. The leaves only are used, and great care is taken in its cultivation to bring these to perfection, and the drying and preparing for use is a long and difficult process; but no one looking at a cigar or the usual tobacco can for a moment doubt its being anything but dead leaves.

It would be a long and difficult task to name all the dead leaves which are used by herbalists and doctors; but many of the more simple kinds of the class of leaves known as herbs are of great use in cookery, such as thyme, mint, sage, etc.

Having mentioned these individual leaves, you will probably say these are very few; not a hundredth part of the leaves there are, and granting them to be a hundredth part, what becomes of the ninety-nine kinds left? Many leaves are allowed to drop off the trees and decay to a certain extent, and are then used for manure to enrich the ground, that it may bring forth more leaves, which all in their turn will also decay. Then, again, it is an acknowledged fact that the decayed vegetation of centuries—in fact, whole forests which have died and been replaced—go to form a large proportion of our coal.

A Modest Request.

"Darling, wake up and stop snoring," said a Detroit woman to her husband.

"Eh? Whazza matter now?" he asked as he half raised up in bed.

"Won't you please stop snoring? If you only knew how homesick it made me I'm sure you would."

"Homesick! How the deuce can my innocent snore make you homesick?"

"Why, you know, darling, that the home on the coast from which you took me, a joyous bride, was only a half a mile from a fog-horn, and every time you snore it reminds me so of home that I just can't stand it. Please lay on your side and have some little respect for my feelings."

And then the brute spread himself out on his back and in five minutes had her bathed in tears as visions of the old home crept upon her.

BY CONTRACTING a severe Cough and Cold, I was compelled to give up my daily work and keep to the house. A neighbor recommended me to try a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; it was procured and used; to my astonishment relief was instantaneous.

Why Is It?

Why is it that a drunken man has such a fancy for the railroad track? He will go miles out of his way to find one, and rarely misses the object of his search, even on the darkest night. When found he is invariably seized with an uncontrollable desire to take a nap there. There must be something peculiarly soothing in the contact of the cold iron rail as he fits the back of his neck to it, and adjusts his body between the ties in preparation for slumber. And frequently it is the last, long sleep that he takes. But what draws him there? Sober men wander about for hours sometimes, hunting the depot in daylight, but the inebriate can strike a railroad track in two minutes when it is as dark as tophet. And he generally gets there ahead of the train, too, though the train retaliates by getting a head of him before the deal is over.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING. — MIX one-quarter pound chocolate and three tablespoonfuls flour with one cup of milk smooth, add one-quarter pound fresh butter, melted, and cook all till it loosens from the pot. Add one egg, stir all together, and let it cool. In the meantime mix the yolks of seven eggs with one-quarter pound powdered sugar, adding first the cold dough, then the beaten whites of seven eggs and a little pounded vanilla. Put the whole into a buttered form and let it cook two hours. For the sauce take one-quarter quart cream, one-quarter quart milk; cook both with one-quarter pound sugar and a little extract vanilla. Add to the mixture three yolks of eggs to which have been added one teaspoonful corn starch and a little cold milk, and let the whole cook for a few minutes, stirring all the time.

Opposition.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man; kites rise against the wind and not with the wind; even a hard wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm. Let no man wax pale, therefore, because of opposition; opposition is what he wants and must have, to be good for anything. Hardship is the native soil of manhood and self-reliance. He who can not abide the storm without flinching lies down by the wayside to be overlooked or forgotten.

My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia, and a dull heavy inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over seventy years old.

A Toad Fight.

I always keep a number of toads in my orchid-house for the purpose of destroying vermin. The other morning, while watching two males, I was highly amused at seeing them have a regular set-to fight. They went at each other in a regular scientific manner, sparring and boxing with their fore paws and butting with their heads. After a while they seemed to get tired, coolly sat down and viewed each other with great complacency. From my earliest days I have been in the habit of watching the ways of toads, and never saw them fight before.—Dr. Patterson.

WARNER'S Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Sahara Not Below Sea Level.

The curious cosmographic error has has long prevailed that the surface of the great Desert of Sahara, in Africa, was depressed below the ocean level. Some have seriously suggested that a canal be cut from the Atlantic or the Mediterranean, by which the desert might be filled with water, a new sea formed, intercommunication facilitated, and commerce increased with the interior. Dr. Lenz has recently lectured in Paris on his journey from Morocco to Timbuctoo. He says the great desert is actually a plateau about 1,000 feet above the level of the ocean, and that nowhere is there such a depression as formerly imagined. The fossils found are fresh water kinds, so that the Sahara is not the bottom of a dried up sea. The timid who have apprehended that the revolving earth might be thrown out of balance by the placing of a broad, deep sea on the surface of the great desert, may calm their fears.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

GO TO French girls if you want instructions how to get even with a faithless lover. An exchange tells of how one girl was jilted by a young man who yielded to the temptations of a very large marriage portion. She laid her plans well. On the eve of the betrothal, while the affianced pair were feasting and making merry, she sent a letter to the bride-elect announcing that she had poisoned all the food which furnished forth the banquet. The grim statement was read aloud at the table and naturally caused a panic. The financee and her mother were carried out in hysterics, and doctors were summoned from far and near. One of the dishes was analyzed and found to contain no trace of poison, and after further experiment the company realized that they had been made the victims of a practical joke. But the sight of working emetics and stomach pumps cooled the young man's passion for his second and wealthier love.

COMFORT BY THE WAY.

The small boy's idea of genuine comfort and happiness was to be pitched into a pond of ice cream whose shores were made of sponge cake. His misery was the absence of these pleasant substances. That boy simply represents humanity. Comfort is appreciated by contrast—we enjoy a thing in proportion to our conception of the disadvantages of our deprivation thereof. This applies to material things as well as to immaterial considerations. The icicle, whose appearance in the wintry cold and bleakness sends the shiver of discomfort through the observer, would suggest notions of the coolest comfort in hot and sultry days of the summer season. And in both seasons—that in which the icicle flourishes best and in the one wherein its absence is conspicuous—that most uncomfortable and torturing disease, rheumatism, plentifully abounds, causing pain and agony to myriads of people. And yet it need not be thus afflictive if sufferers would only use ST. JACOBS OIL, the surest, safest and speediest remedy in the whole world for the eradication and cure of rheumatism and all painful ailments. The following from the Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel shows how some people attend to their rheumatism: "When a young husband had gone from home, and with fond solicitude telegraphed his little wife—'What have you for breakfast, and how's the baby?' he received the brief, practical and suggestive reply—'Buckwheat cakes and the measles.' We have the report of a case in our midst, not where measles was in the bill of fare, but where sciatic rheumatism confined Mr. J. Dawson, the well-known Rochester druggist, to his room for a long period. It was stated to our reporter in the following words: 'The senior member of this firm was attacked with sciatic rheumatism about December 10th last, and for four weeks succeeding Feb. 10th, could scarcely leave his room. He used ST. JACOBS OIL, and is now able to be at his place of business, feeling not much the worse for his recent affliction. The inference is convincing. The run which ST. JACOBS OIL is having is, we say, unprecedented, and the article is rapidly displacing all other rheumatic remedies as fast as its virtues become known.

"Edgar T. Paige, Esq., druggist, writes us from Chicopee Falls," says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, "that Mr. Albert Guenther, under Wild's Hotel, has used that remarkable remedy, ST. JACOBS OIL, for a severe case of rheumatism, and it cured him as if by magic."
