Bad blood is generated, and human blood flows, desolating the household, leaving widows and orphans the victims of passion, and wounded honor washed in blood smells no sweeter for the lurid ablution. These thoughts come upon reading the sad tragedy enacted recently in New Orleans. Mr. Rainey having been in business with Mr. Boyd, was dissatisfied with his management, and spoke of Boyd as a thief. Boyd called on him refused. Boyd shot and killed him ustantly, without any warning or threat. Both parties moved in respectable cir-GREEN, pow in New York, for late and cles. Boyd was a cotton press man. Rainey was the book keeper of a national bank. Has Boyd proven, by nothing else,) that he is not a thief? It he has never stolen before, has he not
