IN A CITY BUS.

[Continued from our Last.] I hailed the first cab I could find, and w rattled off to my lodgings. No conversation took glaco while we were going over the stones: but in imagination I saw before me a certain sweet tearful tace, and I felt more determined than ever to go through with the scheme, wild and preposterous as it might have seened at any other time, which had suddenly fiashed across my brain while I was following the rascal by my side up St. Martin's Lane. Having instructed my landlady to put down another cutlet, and to send out for one or two extras, we ascended to my rooms.

"In the hope, my dear sir, that our friendship will be a long and flottrishing one," said my unwelcome guest, "allow me, as a needful preliminary, to present you with my card."

He handed me, as he spoke, a very limp, and rather dirty piece of paste-board, which he had some difficulty in finding among his multifarious pockets, and on which was inscribed the name of "Mr. Reginald Tracy." "Of course, could do no less than return the compliment.

Din, "er was served a ."w minutes later ; and while it was in progress, the conversation betweep Mr. Tra. v and myself was of the most intermittent character. I gathered enough, however, to enable me to discover that he was a man of some education, and must at one time have mixed in superior society. By the exercise of what knavish arts he had contrived to forfeit the position he once held, I could not of course, tell; therein no doubt, lay hidden the great secret of his life. Poor wretch ! It was easy to see, from the style in which he got through his food, that a plentiful and wholesome meal was what he had not partaken of chair in a state of happy repletion. "Not another morsel, my dear boy," he said with a beniguant smile. "Positively, I could not. 'Let good digestion wait on apetite'-you know the rest. A bountiful meal ! But 'Providence tempers the wind to the shorn lamb!' And now for the pipe and the tumbler. - Ha, ha! I have not forgotten."

As soon as we were fairly under way with on the subject that was evidently upper- concocting such delicious drinks. When all had been robbed.

provement on this delicious toddy is possible." "We can come back to it again, if the other does not prove to our liking," I said. "And not be flouted for our inconstancy."

added Mr. Tracy, with a laugh. "So now for this Yankee nectar of yours. I grow thirsty proceeding was to insinuate my hand into each by anticipation." Two large tumblers and the various ingredients required for my purpose were quickly got together ; last of all, I went into my study and after staying there about a couple of minutes, I went back, carrying with me a packet containing half-a-dozen powders doue up in differently-colored papers. The degree of knowledge I had laid Claim to as a concocter of American drinks was by no means fictitious; and I now proceeded to mix one att: the most approved fashion, and ended by opening out whole to Tracy.

But the putting in of the powder had eviwave of the hand, he refused the proffered tumbler. "After you, my dear sir," he said. "I must really insist on your imbibing the first cellently well for me."

"As you please," I said, with a shrug. With that I proceeded to drain the first tumbler, expressing by pantomime, as I did so, my approcintion of its excellence. After this, I mixed a second tumblerful, into which, as before, I poured the contents of one of the colored unpers, and then handed the whole to Tracy. His lips having once touched the glass, stuck there till it was empty.

He gave a sigh of intense satisfaction as he put down the glass. "Ambrosia, by Jupiter !" he exclained. "The man who invented the tipple oug it to be immortalized by a statue of the whit st marble. I have no wish to be thought presumptuous, but I cannot resist askfor some time. At length, he iv back in his ing you to mix me one more potation." "One ! half-a-dozen, if you like," I replied, "and all of them different. Unless your taste differs very much from mine, you will find No. 2 an improvement on No. 1." He refilled his pipe while I was mixing the second tumbler, but still kept a watchful eye on my proceedings; not that he was any longer suspicious of my good faith, but because he our first tumbler, Mr. Tracy broke ground was desirous of taking a lesson in the art of with a tremendous oath, and declared that he larcony.

In silent triumph, I held it up on the tip of my finger for the sergeant's inspection.

> "Hurrah! that's jolly, and no mistake !" shouted the guardsman, with a wave of his pipe. "How will Mr. Slyboots feel when he wakes up ?"

We were not left long in doubt on that point. Mr. Tracy began to yawn and stretch. und pull himself together. It was a peculiariv of the narcotic I had given him that its efi et, when administered in small doses, was of very short duration, and I knew that Tracy's stupor would not last above half-an-hour at the most. To assist his recovery, I held a vial of strong-smelling salts under his nose. He opened his eyes, sat up, sneezed, and stared vacantly around.

"Good-evening, governor," said the sergeant. You seem to have had quite a refreshing little shooze."
