edt ,osso sint of Erratment ...

Our Yenders will please zotice an error in the arrangement of the Sections in the proposed Constitution, as appearing on our first page. -Article. I, constituting the Declaration of Rights, consists of Hatyland sections. Section 27 can be found in the sixth column of the NEWS, just after Section 37 of Article -Thouce, down to Article III, in the same colrunn, should be rost as the continuation of Attite Ipafter Setton 26.

While von this subject, we would commend to our readers, the necessity of a careful perusal of this instrument, and the preservation of the copies of the News containing it. We will publish the rest of it next week.

Lecture by Rev. W. G. Connor.

During the recent war, in the passage of Sherman's army the Library of the Roy. W. G. Connor was consumed by fire: and he suffered the loss of many valuable theological and standard works, which he has been unable to replace, during the "hard times" of the past

Under these circumstances, it has been sug gested by his friends, that a Popular Lecture upon an instructive subject, would be the best means of obtaining the necessary funds for the purpose of repairing the mischance of war, and of laying the foundation of another collection of books. Acting upon this suggestion, he has prepared such a lecture, choosing as his theme one of the most popular of the Poems of speak advisedly, when we say that the highest reputation acquired by Rev. Mr. Connor az; divine, will be fully sustained by him in this ngy field of Oratory, and we are prepared to promise, to an appreclative audience, a literary treat of a high order.

The lecture is announced for Monday evening of Court Week, at the Old College Hall.

The Southern Home Journal.

This is a weekly, published by John Y. Slater, No. 293 Baltimore Street, Baltimore. We have perused its columns with great pleasure, and find it just such a literary and family paper, as Southern households need. The terms are $3,00 per annum.

Report of the Charleston Cotton Market for the Week Ending March 26.

Reported for the Orangeburg News by W. WALTON SMITH, COTTON FACTOR. Our Cotton market during the past week has been dull, and while holders have been firm and only offering their stocks at very full prices, buyers generally have been holding off, and unable to operate at the prices demanded by holders. The sales for the week amount to some 1800 bales, and the quotations now inally unchanged.
