EDITORS SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR :- I desire to call your attention to a few items which I think affect the interest and prosperity of the South. Among the first is, to unite upon some plan by which we can be freed from the detestable bureaus kept up in the South. If our country was freed from these excrescences, we could enact laws that would bear equally upon white and black. The negroes would learn to observe their contracts in good faith, and avoid the consequences of vagrancy, &c.; and in planning our crop, we could calculate with some certainty on its

Again, exert your influence to have judcious game laws established throughout the South. We could then render those straggling negroes to some extent powerless for harm, by depriving them of the privilege of shooting our stock upon our own premises.

Is there not enough generosity and philanthropy left, amidst the debris of our once glorious country, upon which to build at least an independent and happy country? I would like to see every farmer resolved to pay wages to their laborers. The condition of our farms will very soon demand such a course as a matter of necessity. No thinking man can for a moment deny this fact, if he will take a stand point from any portion of the South, and witness the universal dilapidation upon every farm-barns, gin-houses, cribs stables and fences, all crumbiing into ruin. Nor will it be otherwise, so long as we continue to give a portion of our crops to the negro as his hire. All contracts have failed to induce negroes to repair your plantations, and will fail so long as he is interested in the crop only for his hire, I care not how cautiously or how strong the obligation may be drawn, nor can you force him to discharge those obligations through those pestilential negro bureaus of the South.

Further, I fear the universal use of improved agreultural or labor saving implements, foreign or artificial manures, will be greatly retarded, so long as they are the objects of speculation, as at the present. Can this state of things not be changed to the advantage of the farmer and the country? Suppose there was an organization in every locality in the South to supply its members with all the necessary improved and labor-saving implements, manures, seed, and stock, to select an agent or agents, to act under a reasonble salary, whose duty it was to purchase those articles from first hands and ship to the county depot, which should be located at the most eligible point for transportation, and each planter or merchant to receive his articles at the depot, paying for them only cost and transportrtion. Each member specify all the articles he wants, and replace, in the hands of the agent moneys cotton, or any commodity sufficient to pay cost and transportation. I presume the railroads would discriminate in favor of those articles. By this, or some organization, we could be supplied with all the necessary improved and labor-saving implements, genuine manures. improved stock, seed adapted to our soil and climate, and that too, at greatly reduced prices. We, as a people, scarcely know how to plant, much less to farm. We must shake off the ruinous lethargy which hangs over us like a mighty incubus, adopt the motto, fewer hands and larger products, avail ourselves of all the truly improved and labor-saving implements, make what manures we can and buy only what we cannot make and raise. Let every member of our organization communicate, to the society, the result of his plans, and the secretary of our society epitomise the matter and supply the Southern Cultivator with such results as may be of benefit to the masses. The present prices, of the necessary means for our advance in agriculture, will scarcely justify the planter. In entering largely upon this scheme, we must mature some plan by which the farmer may invest at no risk, but with a certainty of sucess. All persuasions predicated upon theory, to induce emigration of industrious laborers to our country, will prove abortive until we establish the fact, that our climate is congenial, and our soilremunerative; then ther cwill be no necessity for emigrating societies south. Please bestow some thought upon the subject and mature some plan for our adoption, by which we will be enabled to board, clothe and educate our children, and prove to the world that we can, and will, be a happy and independent

Very respectfully, H. M. HUNTER. M. D. Eufala, Ala., April, 1868.

We commend the suggestions, of our correspondent, to the careful consideration of our readers. We are satisfied that much good would result, to the farming interests of the country, from the formation of agricultural societies, in every county or neighborhood, in the South. We should be most happy to publish, in the Cultivator, all points af interest developed in their discussions .- Combination, for the purchase of implements, manures, de. is also a most admirable suggestion; it would work particularly well at the present time, when our people are so poor, that few are able to undertake any enterprise requiring much capital .- EDS. So. CULT.

THE FEMALE SPY.

A STORY OF CHARLESTON AND THE WAR.

J. WITHERSPOON ERVIN.

N the issue of the YORKVILLE ENQUIRER for the 4th of JUNE, will be commenced the publication of the above thrilling and interesting nouvelette, written expressly for its columns, by one of the most popular authors of this state. The principal scenes of the story are laid in Charleston and vicinity, and the story cannot fail to prove interesting to all who are familiar with the events which occurred in that locality during the late

One of the most painful circumstances connected with the heroic defence of Charleston, during its three years of siege, is to be found in the fact, that during all this time, there were persons in the city, "in high life," who were engaged as spies in sending information to the besiegers. Drawings of the ing information to the besiegers. Drawings of the fortifications were furnished, weak points noted, and the movements of troops indicated as soon as begun, and the fleet notified of the time of arrival and departure of blockade running vessels. So cautiously did these emissaries of the ensmy conduct their work, that for along time the skill of the most eminent detectives was baffled in their endeavors to break up the illicit correspondence. These spics were the source of extreme annovance These spies were the source of extreme annoyance to the Commanders in Charleston, and the informa-tion they were enabled to furnish, often thwarted their best matured designs upon the enemy. As a proof of the completeness of this conspiracy, it may be remarked, that the daily papers of the city where frequently read on board the fleet, the same day of their publication.

The author of "ISOLETTE, OR THE FEMALE SPY," has taken the principal characters and incidents in this affair, and under assumed names, has presented them in the form of a thrilling, and well written romance, historic and imaginative. The circumstances of the story are detailed as beginning on James Island, and in connection with the South Carolina Regiments stationed there. After many thrilling adventures in which the "female spy" figures largely, the heroes of the plot follow their regiment to Virginia, before the walls of Petersburg. The surrender of General Lee's Army in 1865, finds them again among the Santee hills, where the narrative closes.
