The Rolling of the Ball.

Come all ye gallant Democrats, Come patriots, one and all, And join with your united strength To roll our mighty ball; And while the ball is rolling With shouts we'll read the air: Three cheers for Statesman Seymour And the warrior, General Blair. (Three cheers.)

From Georgia's green savannas, To the icy shores of Maine, We'll hurl the bounding missile forth O'er mountain, field and plain; And while the ball is rolling With shouts we'll read the air: Three cheers for Statesman Seymour And the warrior, General Blair. (Three cheers.)

From old Manhattan's million To Western prairies grand, Our ball shall bear a greeting, All round the sunny land; And while the ball is rolling With shouts we'll read the air: Three cheers for Statesman Seymour And the warrior, General Blair. (Three cheers.)

Across the Rocky Mountains Our hurling ball shall fly, Till California hails it, A meteor in the sky; And while the ball is rolling With shouts we'll read the air: Three cheers for Statesman Seymour And the warrior, General Blair. (Three cheers.)

HUMOROUS.

A Distant Relation.

An incident occurred some time ago at Cincinnati, on board the steamer Buckeye, just as she was about to depart for New Orleans. A tall countryman, carrying a pair of saddle-bags on his arm and covered with perspiration, and who looked as though he couldn't tell his head from a bunch of shingles, rushed into the cabin, calling at the top of his voice: "What is Col. McIntosh? Is Col. McIntosh on this boat?" No one answered. "Well, then, what is the cap'n? I must see Col. McIntosh."

On being informed that the captain was on the hurricane deck, our inquiring friend passed through the crowd in that direction. "Haul in the planks and shove her off!" sounded in his ears just as he reached the deck. "Stop her, Cap'n—stop her! I am not going to New Orleans."

"Run out the plank? Ashore with you, then, quick!" shouted Captain Hartshorn. "I say, Cap'n, I want to see Col. McIntosh. I must see him."

"I don't know him, sir," quickly answered the old sea dog. "We can't wait—go ashore. Haul in the planks, I say."

"Oh, Cap'n, I must see the Kernel—he's a distant relation of mine, and I never saw him in my life."

Now Captain H. is a warm-hearted man, as every one knows. The last appeal touched his feelings, and he kindly inquired: "How near of kin are you to the gentleman that you are seeking?"

"Why, Cap'n, he is the father of my first child."

"Cast off that hawser and let her go," were the last words heard. And the boat and the man that was in search of his relative wended their way to New Orleans.

Bluffing a Peddler.

A well known tin-ware peddler traveled up town to dispose of notions to such as were willing to bargain. He was a persevering trader and never would be bluffed off with a short answer. From one house in particular he received continued rebuffs and assurances that nothing was wanted—they never bought anything in that way. Nevertheless he made his calls steadily with each regular round, till he became a regular pest, and in reply to the information that it was useless to call, made known his purposes to do so just as often as he pleased.

One bitter cold day the bell rang, and the good lady hastened to get her hands from the dough in which they were busy to answer the call; when she reached the door, there stood the over-laying peddler.

"Any tin-ware to-day, ma'am?" "Have you any tin kitchens?" "Yes, ma'am," and away he goes to bring the samples, chucking at the idea that his zeal was so successful at last.

"There's nothing," muttered he, "like hanging on, anyhow."

A gentleman having engaged a bricklayer to make some repairs in his cellar, ordered the ale to be removed before the bricklayer commenced his work.

"Oh, I'm not afraid of a barrel of ale, sir," said the man.

"I presume not," said the gentleman; "but I think a barrel of ale would run at your approach."

A Democratic meeting was held in Atlanta on Saturday night, at which General Gordon and others spoke. General Gordon declared that the South would acquiesce in the result of the Presidential election, whatsoever side may win.

The veto of Governor Warmouth on the Negro equality bill, has been sustained by the Louisiana House of Representatives, and a modified substitute for the bill has been introduced.
