POETRY.

Contented John.

One honest John Tompkins, a hedger and ditcher, Although he was poor, did not want to be richer.

Though cold were the weather, or dear were the food, John never was found in a murmuring mood.

"For why should I grumble and mumble?" he said "If I cannot get meat I'll be thankful for bread."

And though fretting may make my calamities deeper, It never can make bread and cheese to be cheaper."

John was afflicted with sickness or pain, He wished himself better, but did not complain.

And thus honest John, though his station was humble, Passed through this sad world without even a grumble;

And 'twere well if some folk, who are greater and richer, Would copy John Tompkins, the hedger and ditcher.

Liberty of the Press.

Around her waist I put my arm— It felt as soft as cake, "Oh, dear," says she, "what liberty you printer men do take!"

"Why, yes, my Sal, my charming gal, (I squeezed her some, I guess,) Can you say aught against The freedom of the Press?"

I kissed her some—I did, by gum; She colored like a beet; Upon my living soul she looked Almost too good to eat.

I gave another bus, and then Says she, "I do confess I rather kinder sorter like The freedom of the Press!"

CHINESE LABOR.—The Shoemakers at Stonington, Conn., have passed resolutions disapproving of the introduction of Chinese laborers into the United States, and have prepared a petition on the subject to the President which is to be signed by all the laboring men of the country.

This just what every thinking man might have foreseen. The laboring men of the country, of all classes and colors, will be found arrayed in deadly hostility to the Chinese whenever the latter reach here in any considerable numbers.

Have we not discordant elements enough in this country without introducing such a firebrand as Chinese coolies or laborers!

A few months ago we were told the Chinese would be delighted to work on our rice fields at ten cents per day. Mr Koopmanschapp (or whatever his name is) now says they must have $8.00 to $12.00 per month and rations. Still we do not propose to combat the argument that the Chinese will work for reduced wages; for we believe if they should overrun our country they would find it necessary to do so on account of competition. But we can only see in this wild scheme another source of trouble and disaster. Perhaps experience may prove the reverse. But let us give somebody else the pleasure of trying the experiment.

Providence, R. I., refuse to license any liquor chops this year.

A Yankee Lecture.

Respected friends, I am about to galvanize your ideas, and warm up your sensibilities on the subject of the "tender passion," so called, though it strikes me that he should have a tough nature who has anything to do with it. Do any of you poor miserable creatures know what love is? I do not mean the love of self, h aven, or sugar candy, but the real, pure, right down love of woman, which is as much superior to all other kinds of love as I am to anybody else in this village.

Love is a dreadful thing when it once gets a hold of you—no mistake. It is neither to be used up nor coughed down, bamboozled, nor squamfedled—no, it isn't. It is worse than Greek fire, or oil of vitrol, or stinging nettles. It burns, it maddens, it sickens, it makes people get intoxicated, and, what is worse, write poetry. My immortal friend, Billy—I mean Shakspeare—ought to have known something about it, for he went into philosophic rhapsodies and poetical conceptions about the loves of Venus, an ancient lady who was born in the sea—I don't know what sea, probably the Red, for that is the color of love. When a man loves brandy his nose becomes red. When a man loves books he is said to be deeply read. Radishes are red, and I love them.

The poet says the course of true love is rough as a grindstone. And so it is. It is up, and it is down; it is here, and it is there; it unites us for business, and makes us lose our appetite; and what with sighing, suing, looking sweet, and looking sour, it fairly makes fools of us. I was never in love, so do not take me for a fool. I am no such person.

Now I recollect it, I was in love once. You recollect Squire Popkin's daughter Louisa. That's the one. I courted her, early and late, for a matter of six months, and then I turned over a new leaf. What did I leave her for? Ah, there you touch me. I had given her all the luxuries world contains. I had bought her a bran new shawl, morocco shoes, and ice-creams without number. I had even ate her mince-pies, and praised her beauty, though one went against my stomach, and the other my conscience. I had taken her to lectures, fought with all my rivals, snored in church with her, but Louisa was ungrateful at last, just because I wouldn't cut off my whiskers, these beautiful fellows. Then I found out she was after my money, and not me; and if I didn't bid her a wholesale good bye, there are no forks in lightning. Louisa took on terribly, and wet three or four handkerchiefs, but it was no use. Love was no go, and I took up my profession.

Mr. Fred. Appelbaum, a disappointed lover, committed suicide by hanging himself near St. Louis on Friday last week. The French societies of Detroit are preparing to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Napoleon Bonaparte.

A Sacramento pomologist gave Seward, as a parting gift, a "twig" three feet long, on which was nine pounds of plums. The receipts of the recent great celebration of the German Singing Associations held in Baltimore fell some six thousand dollars short of the expenses.

The New York Herald says: "Consumers should keep a sharp watch on the manoeuvres of coal dealers. There is an evident desire to 'bull' coal up to ten or twelve dollars a ton his fall."

Hope Markins, of Marysville, Ky., is the colored mother of five children at one birth, and is now hunting through an almanac to find names for them.

A number of percussion primers were mailed in Indiana recently, and an explosion accompanied the stamping of the letter. If such a practice is continued, the postoffice clerk had better be mailed.

A boy who heard the quotation "A little learning is a dangerous thing," wished to stop going to school because he was afraid he should not live long enough to get past the dangerous point.

"Papa, what is humbug?" "It is," replied papa, "when mamma pretends to be very fond of me, and puts no buttons on my shirt till reminded of it a dozen times."

They are building an air ship in New York, on the model of the California inventors; its owners announce that they will complete it within two months, and they expect it will take them to Europe in fifteen hours.

Few but the oldest inhabitants can remember the old-fashioned drink called "perry," which was made from the juice of the old button pear, now nearly extinct. This drink, up to a certain point of fermentation, was more exhilarating than champagne.

A wag has truly said, that if some men could get out of their coffins, and read the inscriptions on their tombstones they would think they had got into the wrong grave.

"Miss," said a high-strung swain to a rural dulcinea, "let us walk in yonder beautiful meadow where the clover is in blossom and the amorous zepheers play." "Oh, darn the amorous heifers," she replied, "I see enough of them over on dad's farm."

A Whiff of Exultation.—Our smoking editor—for it would seem that every daily paper, however well regulated, is doomed to have one smoker on its editorial staff—our smoking editor has been shut up in measureless contentment since Saturday last. The day which brought thrilling recollections of our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor—being the Fourth of July, as heretofore observed—brought with it also a Yacht Club Pipe from the great house of Lorillard, in New York City, per U. S. Express, addressed to the fumigating journalist aforementioned, and by him welcomed with double-leaded transports of joy. Lorillard is the Napoleon—nay, the Grant, of the tobacco business; and this pipe, even the Reverend George Trask would be compelled to admit, is an immaculate beauty.

The smoking editor is ordinarily at the bottom of the heap. The other editors outnumber him and are down on him. They would the policy of the paper and compel him to clip from his exchanges articles breathing a deadly hostility to the flavorous weed, which he does with helpless submission, gazing tearfully through a cloud of tobacco smoke at the self-convicting extracts. But on an occasion like the present, he wildly throws off the yoke of their dominion, flashes his lucifer in their very faces, and burns incense to the beneficent Lorillard. Against all remonstrance he closes his resolute lips upon his amber mouth-piece, and his only response is a silent but significant whiff, as he consigns these paragraphs to the copy-box, and calmly abides the issue.—Springfield Daily Republican, July 8, 1869.

A GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.—The "Sunday School Journal" suggests the following as essential qualifications for a good Sunday School teacher: 1. Piety: Love to Christ should always precede work for Christ.

2. Spiritual intelligence. The teacher must be divinely taught to "know" the doctrine he teaches.

3. Thoughtfulness. Frivolous teachers never succeed. The true teacher gives his brain, as well as his heart to his work.

4. Adaption. He must know how to adapt his manner, and his ideas, to the mental standing and habits of his pupils.

5. Watchfulness. As the horticulturist watches the development of a favorite flower, so must the teacher watch for the signs of gracious feeling in his scholars. He is a watcher for souls.

6. Devotedness. A teacher whose soul is not given to his work is an automaton. A true teacher gives himself to his work.

7. Patience. The time often seems long between the sowing and the reaping hour. The true teacher knows both how to labor and wait.

8. Expectancy. A true teacher expects fruit and is not disappointed.

9. Prayerfulness. Prayer is the teacher's strength. The more prayer the greater power, both with God and the children.

These qualifications form a beautiful cluster. Do they ornament your character, O teacher? If so, go on with your work as David went to combat the Philistine in the spirit of faith; if not, seek them earnestly. How can you do less.

TYING A KNOT!—A young fellow was taking a sleigh ride with a pretty girl, when, meeting a Methodist Minister, who was somewhat celebrated for tying matrimonial knots on short notice. He stopped him, and asked hurriedly: "Can you tie a knot for me?" "Yes," said Brother B., "I guess so; when do you want it done?" "Well, right away," was the reply; "is it lawful though, here in the highway?" "Oh, yes, this is as good a place as any; safe as in the church itself."

"Well, then, I want a knot tied in my horse's tail to keep it out of the snow," shouted the wicked wag as he drove rapidly away fearing lest the minister, in his wrath, should fall from grace.

That minister, no doubt, soliloquized thus: "Now, as I am a minister of the Gospel, of course I don't 'cuss,' but if I were a cussin' man, and had that d—d rascal by the throat, I'd teach him that I know how to do other things besides tie knots."

Three years ago, seven sisters, the youngest fifteen and the eldest twenty-five, with invalid parents, emigrated from Ohio to Minnesota, where two years ago, under the homestead law, they secured 160 acres of land at Big Woods, some sixty miles from St. Paul. These girls last year sold 900 bushels potatoes, 500 bushels corn, 200 bushels wheat, 250 bushels turnips, 200 bushels beets, 1,100 heads cabbage, and $200 worth of garden stuff. All the clearing, grubbing, ploughing, harvesting, &c., was done by them, and they have at present forty acres cleared and in crop.

A Mrs. Dixon shot and killed her husband at Rockford, Ill., last week, while he held her new-born infant in his arms.
