The Commercial and Financial Chronicle of New York.

OFFICE OF A. C. KAUPMAN, No. 25 BROAD STREET, CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 9, 1871.

I cordially commend to those gentlemen of business, Baakers, Brokers, Merchants, etc., here and elsewhere, whose notice The Chronicle as a financial and commercial monitor may have escaped, to look carefully into the merits of this paper, even now accepted by many as the standard Journal of America in matters pertaining to finance and commerce -its extended and extending circulation being the strongest testimony in its favor. I would here take occasion to remark, in passing, that its editors, (personally known to myself.) are gentlem of intelligence, refinement and culture. This accounts somewhat for the paper being conducted on the exactest principles of honor and integrity, and with an ability, vigor and independence seldem equalled and never excelled.

So generally known is this paper that no Banker's or Merchant's, Library throughout the length and breadth of this vast country is musidered complete without it. It can be found on almo every desk, alwas a faithful companion. friend, and guide. I do not pretend to argue the merits of this paper, but simply ask the skeptic to read and he convinced

I have been requested by the pub-lishers to not for them in this section, and have consented, in consideration of the many courtesies they have extended to me. I will receive subscription meney to some ($10 per annum) and shew
