

The New Street.

Lucy bought a brand new dress And washed it in the garden; Just as soon as it got dry She named it Dolly Yarden.

In the New Street to promenade, Escorted by Mr. Darden, When in a shower she was caught, Which wet her Dolly Yarden.

So Lucy then, of course went home, And thought her heart would harden, Because she spoiled her pretty dress, The so-called Dolly Yarden.

Caught in New Street in mud and shower, Washing with her dear, dearest Darden, Kinky snows, once clear of this, She'll never wear another Dolly Yarden.

State News.

Rev. R. H. Reid is lecturing on Temperance in Spartanburg.

Two United States soldiers were jugged in Sumter Monday night, for raising a row.

There was no case tried at the criminal term of the present session of the Court at Sumter.

There is more corn planted in Barnwell county than usual, and the report of the cotton crop is fair.

The Catholic Church of Sumter, has been presented with a new organ, through the efforts of Miss Ellen Bogin.

The exhibition of the Sophomore Class of Wofford College will take place in Spartanburg on next Tuesday evening, the 4th of June.

The Marion Star says: From the most reliable information we can get, the coming political campaign will be a hot one in this county. Madam Rumor announces ninety-seven candidates for clerk of the court; one hundred and seventeen for sheriff, forty odd for judge of probate, and four hundred and forty-one for seats in the Legislature.

The Carolina Spartan says: The following persons have been arrested within a few days past, and released on bond: D. De Webber, Richard Vincent, John McClure, J. L. Clary, Hosea Troller, Harry Griffin, Holden Bogin, Abner Waters, John S. Ezell, Rufus Tillotson, D. Cudd, Frank Wyatt, D. H. Grambling, Elias Belcher, Volney Spratt, William Grogan, Z. Walker Walls, John McMillan, W. H. Cantrell and J. J. Ezell.

The following parties charged with the killing of Mr. Low, at Silver Bluff Landing last summer, were tried at Blackville on Saturday, namely: Wm. Simons, O. L. W. Smith, Peter Allen and Samuel Jenkins. These were all colored men, as was every man on the jury that tried them. Three of the parties were defended by Mr. G. W. Croft, of Aiken, and one by Mr. W. J. Whipper, of Beaufort. The jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the cases of the accused.

OUR COLORED FIREMEN.—The long looked for parade of the hand engines came off on Monday last. At 9 o'clock the procession formed at the Citadel Green and moved down King to Hazel and through to Meeting, down Meeting to Market and through to State street, down State to Broad, and thence pass the City Hall, where the line was reviewed by the Mayor and Aldermen. The procession kept on down Broad street to Logan, where it counter-marched, and the engines awaited their turn of running. The contest commenced a little after twelve o'clock and the following is the result of the award of prizes:

First prize, consisting of a richly chased silver pitcher, waiter and goblets, for the best time, to the Union Star. Second prize, silver ca-tor, with bell attachments, for the second best time, to the Comet Star. Prize for the best time leaving the ground, silver goblet, to the Niagra. Visitors' prize, consisting of pitcher, waiter and goblets, similar to those constituting the first prize, but not chased, for the best time made by a visiting company, to the Heston, of Georgetown.—Charleston Referee, May 22d.

Twenty two years ago, the remains of Louis Philippe, ex-King of France, were laid to English ground, in the vault of the palace-chapel at Claremont. Twenty-six years before that, Louis Philippe—then Duke of Orleans—built a chapel in the old Castle of Dreux, which he intended for a family burying place. The improbable happened when Louis Philippe died called and forgotten, while the star of Prince-President Louis Bonaparte was climbing toward empire. The improbable has happened again when, as the cable tells us, President Thiers has permitted the remains of his old master to be brought to the family vault at Dreux. The sailor son of Louis Philippe brought the body of the Great Emperor from St. Helena to Paris, over thirty years ago. The Prince de Joinville will be now called upon to assist at a less imposing pageant than that which attended the interment of the conqueror of Austerlitz; but, having already seen three revolutions, two monarchies, one empire and two republics in France, he may find matter enough for reflection as the vault at Dreux closes upon all that remains of the Citizen King.

THE ORANGEBURG NEWS

AUGUSTUS B. KNOWLTON, EDITOR.

GEORGE BOLIVER, FINANCIAL AND BUSINESS MANAGER.

Official Paper of the State and of Orangeburg County.

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1872.

For President: Ulysses S. Grant.

That Street.

Whether we shall have it, is the great question of the day. There is a difference of opinion upon the subject. The Town stands divided on the momentous issue of 'street' or 'no street.' Seventy citizens have signed a petition to the Town Council, urging that honorable body to knock the project in the head. But everybody else seems to want the street, and so do we. And as petitions are generally signed as a mere matter of courtesy—and as we haven't the slightest idea that the petition in question represents the feeling of the great body of our citizens—we hope the Council will lay it gently and kindly, but very firmly, on the table.

Russell Street is the only street running through the Town to the Railroad. If it is intended that Orangeburg shall grow, we absolutely need one or more streets running parallel with Russell. Orangeburg is growing and is bound to keep on growing, unless she is so laced in at the sides and stunted at both ends as to be forced to die at the middle. We don't believe in tight lacing, or old fogyism, but we do believe in progress of all kinds. So far as the grave yard is concerned we are inclined to think that the new street will run over the toes of more live corpses than dead ones.

In the course of an article upon the sale of delinquent lands to be made next Monday, by County Treasurer Greene, the Times remarks, with evident reference to that gentleman: "How men, claiming to be honest, can individually, either officially or otherwise, assist in such robbery, and still claim exemption from blame is to us inexplicable."

The band are robbers from first to last in our eyes. Mr. Greene was appointed Treasurer of this County. He has solemnly sworn to do his duty as such Treasurer. One of his duties as such Treasurer is to make the sale in question. We deprecate the necessity resulting from the law as sincerely as any one, but we have yet to learn that the private character of a gentleman is to be assailed for no other reason than that he has honestly performed his public duties.

Mr. Greene has enforced the requirements of the Tax Law with a courtesy and a kind consideration which have won him the good will and respect of all classes and parties. His private character is spotless. Such articles injure the Times. They are also painful to many good men. They have no other effect.

The Supplemental Treaty.

The New York Sun has the following editorial: The supplemental treaty for the settlement of the Alabama controversy really contains nothing but the abandonment by the Government of the United States of its demand for indirect damages. This abandonment should properly be the act of the President alone. He made the demand for these indirect damages before the tribunal at Geneva without consulting the Senate, and he has the same power to withdraw it as he had to make it. There is no need for any supplemental treaty, or for going to the Senate with the subject. In short, the only purpose of this supplemental treaty is to relieve General Grant of the responsibility of undoing his own act and retracting his own indecent blunder by putting upon the Senate the responsibility of advising and consenting to the retraction. As the demand for indirect damages was inserted in the treaty without any expectation that it would be allowed by the arbitrators, or that any money would ever be received on account of it, and as it is no longer denied that this demand was a mere piece of pottfogging buncombe, a sham and a humbug, so this supplemental treaty, with the ceremony of its submission to the Senate, is another piece of buncombe, another sham and humbug. If the President sees, as he virtually confesses that he does see, that the case which he presented at Geneva is bad and unjustifiable, why doesn't he withdraw it squarely and manfully, and why does he attempt to implicate the Senate in the face of this supplemental treaty?

[General Grant has in this matter followed a course sound in principle and sanctioned by precedent. Lawyers may have mistaken the law, but Grant has not mistaken the practice.—Ed News.]
