

An African Cooking Stove.

It is the most perfect and durable little house keepers, says the Health and Home will have to prepare for the table such things as morrels as an elephant's trunk and feet, or the foot of a hippopotamus. But they may like to know how the Africans, who consider these things as delicacies, prepare them. You may be sure the Africans have no cooking stoves or ranges like those on which our dinner is cooked. They have an entirely original invention of their own.

When a cook has to prepare the tempting delicacies we have named, he digs in the ground a round hole, about four feet in diameter, with perpendicular sides, like a well. In this hole he kindles a fire, and keeps burning for four hours, a fiercely glowing fire. At the end of this time the sides of the small well will be red hot, and the bottom will be covered with a mass of glowing embers. Directly upon these coals the cook places the pot, which is protected by their thick, tough skins, will not burn. He then covers the top of the hole by laying across it long sticks of green wood, and lays over them a few armfuls of wet flags, which he gathers for the purpose from the banks of some neighboring stream. He next spreads mud thickly over, and on top of the mud he piles earth and sods, closely beating them down. This is to retain all the heat within the curious oven, an important point, as thirty-six hours are required to properly bake the enormous feet of the elephant and hippopotamus.

When, at last, the anxious cook thinks his viands are ready, he carefully removes the sods. Under these he finds the coating of mud perfectly hard, like a thick crust, while beneath this the flags have retained sufficient moisture to prevent them from burning, although the oven is heated to steaming.

The cook has now to get the assistance of one or two others to lift out the heavy and hot feet, which they lay upon a mat covered with green reeds instead of on a dish.

The great black feet do not, at first, seem very inviting, but after the shoes—that is, the skins—have been removed, a perfectly white and very tempting-looking meat is exposed, which is said by those who have tried it, to be delicious, and so appetizing in appearance as to be a substitute for horses.

All absorbing horse question has reached that point, where from discussing the proper remedy for the disease, we advance to the consideration of what means may enable us to escape in future the delay and inconvenience attending the withdrawal of many horses from service. We find in Hen. Erastus C. Benedict's interesting work, "A Ride Through Europe," the following account of the use of oxen in Italy. What is there to prevent such an employment of them here?

"I noticed here what I do not remember to have ever seen in a city before. I have seen oxen used more variously than in any other country. In crossing the Apennines, a yoke of oxen was added for an extra pair of the leaders to take our diligence up the mountain steep, which was a little odd. In Italy I had often seen an ox harnessed sometimes with a horse and sometimes with a donkey—but here in Trieste oxen appear to be the usual basis of labor for the dray service of the streets—and what struck me as a useful economy for the draymen of small means was the practice of working a single ox to work a single horse in the cart, or the service of our cities. A single ox hardly costs a quart of the price of a good horse, will draw quite as large a load—even more reliable and trustworthy—be maintained at less expense—is more steady and patient, and when his life ceases to be useful his death brings back to the price of beef all his original cost. How they have crossed with the buffalo. You see them lying down at their dry, and showing the end all about the public squares. The single ox is harnessed in between the shafts of his dray, and in solitary usefulness moves solemnly through the streets and along the wharves, pulling his four wheeled dray the wheel of which is eighteen inches in diameter and the wagon body often a vast wicket. Loads of peeled willow twigs like string and spacious.

Ayer's Ague Cure,
For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

No one remedy is so loudly called for by the necessities of the American people than a cure and safe cure of Fever and Ague. Such a cure was never enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it would eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of the miasmatic poison. This "Cure" expels the miasmatic poison of Fever and Ague from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of everybody; and in bilious districts, where Fever and Ague prevails, everybody should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and prevention. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittent fever, is that it contains no Quinine or mineral; consequently it produces no quinoline or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Biliousness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and derangement of the stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "Cure" expels the miasmatic poison, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants and persons traveling or temporarily residing in malarious districts. If taken occasionally or daily while exposed to the infection, that will be exerted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure; and few will ever suffer from Intermittent fever if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver to healthy action, and producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines fail.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by every body as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures the most obstinate cases of Biliousness, Headache, Sick Headache, Stomachic, Stagnation of the Liver, Constipation, Colic, Bilious Fever, &c., and that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures the most obstinate cases of Biliousness, Headache, Sick Headache, Stomachic, Stagnation of the Liver, Constipation, Colic, Bilious Fever, &c., and that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other.

They operate by their powerful influence on the natural tendency to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action; remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the system; restore their regular action to health, and by correcting whatever exists, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Many directions are given in the wrapper on the box for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:
For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, which causes a fullness and loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore the healthy action of the system.
For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Stomachic, Stagnation of the Liver, Constipation, Colic, and Bilious Fever, they should be taken in large doses to correct the diseased action, and remove the obstructions which cause it.
For Dysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.
For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, &c., they should be taken in large doses, and should be continued, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With each change these complaints disappear.
For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large doses, and should be continued, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With each change these complaints disappear.
An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the regular action of the system, and invigorates the system. Hence it is of great advantage where no serious derangement exists. One who feels generally well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive system.
