TO BE DECIDED LATER .- Judge Greene, of the State of ----, is a good lawyer, and somewhat of a stickler for the niceties of pronunciation. Ex-Judge Dennison, in arguing a motion before him, had occasion to refer to Browne on Torts, and pronounced the author's name as though it were spelled "Browny." The judge passed the first mis- the poison which the fever spreads is almost take without notice ; at the second he shrug- entirely contained in the discharge from the ged his shoulders ; at the third he said, "The bowels. name is Brown, not Browny, Brother Dennison

"But it is spelled B-r-o-w-n-e," said the counsel, in his very deep and measured tones; "and if that does not spell Browny, what does it spell ?"

"'Brown,' of course," sharply answered the judge, whose patience was becoming ruffled. "My name is spelled G-r-double en-e, but you would not call me "Greeny," would you ?" Mr. Dennison turned to his books, saying, apparently to himself, but loud enough to be heard all over the court-room : "That will depend upon how your honor decides this motion." Judge Greene loves a joke too well not to lead in the laugh that followed.

A certain evangelist was conducting a religious revival in a Georgia town when one of the biggest sinners in the place made a profession of religion and joined the church. There was great rejoicing among the brethren and sisters over this wonderful reclamation. One old lady, who had always regarded the convert as one of the most hardened sinners and utterly past redemption, called the preacher to one side and said :

Brother B., you can adjourn this meeting. There is no longer any use of your services here."

"Why ?" exclaimed the minister in some "Because you have converted the devil himself.'

New England began to break the good old Congregational barrier, and make incursions into the sheepfolds of the regular clergy, a reverend divine, a man of good sense and good humor, encountered an irreglar practitioner at the house of one of his flock. They had a pretty hot discussion on their points of difference, and at last the interloper wound up by saying, "Well, doctor, you'll at least allow that it was commanded to preach the gospel to every critter ?"

"True," rejoined the doctor-"true enough. But then I never heard it was commanded to every 'critter' to preach the gospel."

of wrath for him when he should return. "So you're home at last," she said, as she let him in ; "it's a wonder you've got home at all." "No diff'erly gittin' home," he said, "moon's full." "There's more full than the moon, I'm afraid," she said. "Yes, were all "What !" she exclaimed, growing scarlet with indignation. "Jus' as I say. We're all full. Moon's full, and I'm full, and you're beautiful." "Well," she said, with a faint smile, "I suppose I'll have to forgive you, as usual.
