- Lord Dunraven, the principal owner of the Valkyrie, has no higher ambition in life than to carry back to England and present to his queen, the Valkyrie, and made a speech in which he promised to pay each man a life pension of 30 shillings a week, in the event that by reason of their seamanship the Defender should be beaten. There seems to be but little danger at this time that his lordship will have to carry out his promise; but if he does, it will cost him in the neighborhood of $300,000.

- A horrible accident occurred in Louisville, Ky, last Wednesday morning. The Grand Army of the Republic is holding its annual encampment in the city, and there are present more than 50,000 visitors. The First Kentucky artillery was about to fire the morning salute of 34 guns. With the first gun, a caisson, containing 66 pounds of powder exploded. Four artillerymen were instantly killed. Their bodies were literally blown to pieces and scattered in small bits over an area of several hundred yards. Several others were badly injured, and the artillery horses were so mangled that they had to be killed. The accident occurred at daylight and there were but few people on the street. Had it been a little later in the day, the number of killed would no doubt have been far greater.
