- The Massachusetts legislature has struck upon a bright idea for the disposition of the woman suffrage question. The matter is to be left to the women themselves. If a majority of them say at the polls that they want to vote, then woman suffrage will go. If a majority of them vote against the proposition or fail to specify, that will settle the question.

- Quite a lively fight has been inaugurated by the various religious bodies of Washington against the hop growers of the State. The religious bodies characterize hop growing as an unholy business, and many of the farmers engaged in it have been turned out of the church. The hop growers remind the religious bodies that hops are not only used for making beer, but also for making bread, and the business is, therefore, as legitimate as the raising pearance. The main points in Washington's speech may be summarized as follows:

"Ignorant and inexperienced, it was natural for the Negro, when he first got his liberty, to try to start at the top of the ladder and seek seats in the legislatures and in congress, rather than in the various lines of industry.

"Whatever may be the sins that the South may be called upon to answer for, it must be remembered that when it comes to business pure and simple, this is the only section that has ever given the Negro a man's chance.

"The wisest among the Negroes see and realize the utter absurdity of the proposition for social equality. In matters social, the Negro is as separate Mr. Talbert moved to postpone the as the fingers on the hand and in matis as one as the hand itself.

COTTON IS BOOMING.

There was a wild spurt in the Yorkville cotton market yesterday and the buyers were almost tumbling over each other in their eagerness to pick up everything in sight.

The market started at 8 cents and by noon went up to 83. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, two of the buyers were predicting that before night somebody would be paying 81 cents, if anything especially fine should be offered.

The reporter asked several of the buyers as to whether the New York market had gone up, or all the buyers had gone crazy. He could get no satisfaction. The huyers just smiled, looked wise, and went off after more cotton. Between 60 and 75 bales were sold during the day.

For this morning, we are instructed to quote the market at from 8 to 83, though a real good article may bring 81 cents.
