

ISSUED SEMI-WEEKLY.

L. M. GRIST & SONS, Publishers.

ESTABLISHED 1855.

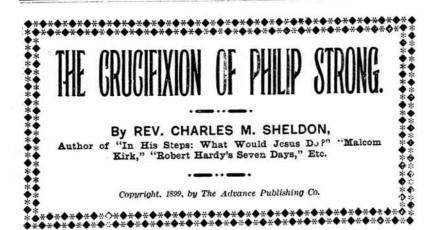

A Samily Newspaper : For the Promotion of the Political, Social, Agricultural, and Commercial Interests of the People.

sermons were both strong and effect-

TERMS-----$2.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. SINGLE COPY, FIVE CENTS.

YORKVILLE, S. C., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1899.

NO. 103.

CHAPTER I. Philip Strong could not decide what was best to do.

The postman that evening had brought him two letters, and he had just finished reading them. He sat stead of what they like? You never with his hands clasped over his knee. please yourself."

out through his study window. He was evidently thinking very hard, and the two letters were the cause of it. Finally he rore, went to his study door and called down the stairs: "Sarah, I wish you would come up here. I want your help." "All right, Philip, I'll be up in a minute," responded a voice from below, and very soon the minister's wife came

'What's the matter?" she said as the year and to about 80 refined, scholshe came into the room. "It must be something very serious, for you don't call me up here unless you are in great distress. You remember the last time you called me, you had shut the tassel of your dressing gown under the lid of your writing desk, and I had to cut you loose. You aren't fast anywhere now, are you?"

Philip smiled quaintly. "Yes, I am. I'm in a strait betwixt two. Let me read these letters, and you will see." So he began at once, and we will copy the letters, omitting dates:

CALVARY CHURCH. MILTON.

Rev. Philip Strong: Dear Sir-At a meeting of the Milton Calvary church, held last week, it was voted unanimously to extend you a cull to become pastor of this church at a salary of $2,000 a year. We trust that you will find it in accordance with the will of the Head of the church to accept this decision on the part of Calvary church and become its pastor. The church is in good condition and has the hearty support of most of the leading families in the town. It is the strongest in membership and the town. It is the strongest in membership and financially of the seven principal churches here. We await your reply, confidently hoping you will decide to come to us. We have been without a settled pastor now for nearly a year, since the death of Dr. Brown, and we have united upon you as the person most eminently fitted to fill the pulpit of Calvary church. The grace of our Lord be with you. In behalf of the church, WILLIAM WINTER,

Chairman of the Board of Trustees. "What do you think of that, Sarah?" asked Philip Strong, as he finished the letter. "Two thousand dollars is twice as much as you are getting now. Philip." "What, you mercenary little creature. do you think of the salary first?"

"Now, Philip, I don't see why, in a choice of this kind, you don't do as here, but since it took place I have been preachyou feel inclined to do and accept the ing as a supply, pending the final settlement of call that pleases you most. Why should ministers be doing what they ought in-

"Well, Sarah," replied Philip good leaning back in his chair and looking naturedly. "this is the way of it. The church in Elmdale is in a university town. The atmosphere of the place is scholastic. You know I passed four years of student life there. With the exception of the schools, there are not a thousand people in the village, a quiet, sleepy, dull, retired, studious place. I love the memory of it. I could go there as the pastor of the Elmdale church and preach to an auup stairs into her husband's study. dience of college boys eight months in > arly people the rest of the time. could indulge my taste for reading and writing and enjoy a quiet pastorage there to the end of my days." "Then, Philip, I don't see why you don't reply to their call and tell them you will accept, and we will move at once to Elmdale and live and die there. It is a beautiful place, and I am sure we could live very comfortably on the salary and the vacation. There is no vacation mentioned in the other call." "But, on the other hand," continued the minister, almost as if he were alone and arguing with himself and had not heard his wife's words, "on the other hand, there is Milton, a manufacturing town of 50,000 people, mostly opera tives. It is the center of much that be longs to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in the stirring life of the times in biddle to the stirring life of the times in the stirring life of the stirring tives. It is the center of much that bewhich we live. The labor question is there in the lives of those operatives. There are seven churches of different denominations, to the best of my knowledge, all striving after popularity and power. There is much hard, stern work to be done in Milton by the true church of Christ. to apply his teachings church of Christ, to apply his teachings to men's needs, and somehow I cannot in the membership of almost any church in this help hearing a voice say: 'Philip Strong.

go to Milton and work for Christ. Abandon your dream of a parish where you may indulge your love of scholarship in the quiet atmosphere of a uni-ship in the quiet atmosphere of a uni-versity town and plunge into the hard. disagreeable, but necessary work of this age, in the atmosphere of physical trime and depravity almost unparalleled in mulabor, where great questions are being the calls he had received, refusing the call to Elmdale and accepting the one to Milton. And so the strange story of a great hearted man really began. When he had finished writing these tion except his wife. two letters, he wrote another, which "No, I thought you did splendidly. 1 throws so much light on his character and his purpose in going to Milton that queer gestures, and once you put one we will insert that in this story as beof your hands in your pocket. But your ing necessary to its full understanding. This is the letter: My Dear Alfred-Two years ago, when we left

ive. I am sure the people were impressed. It was very still at both servthe seminary, you remember we promised each other in case either of us left his present parish ices." he would let the other know at once. I did not Philip was silent a moment. And his suppose when I came that I should leave so soon, but I have just written a letter which means the wife went on: "I am sure we shall like it here, of a new life to me. The Calvary church in Milton has given me a call, and I have Philip. What do you think?" accepted it. Two months ago my church here practically went out of existence through a union "I cannot tell yet. There is very with the other church on the street. The history of that movement is too long for me to relate much to do." ing?"

"I am opnvinced that I must go to Mil-ton."

affairs, and so I was at liberty to accept a call elsewhere. I must confess the call from Milton was a surprise to me. I have never been there (you know I do not believe in candidating for a place), and so I suppose their church committee came up here to listen to me. Two years ago came up here to listen to life. I we years ago nothing would have induced me to go to Milton. Today it seems perfectly clear that the Lord says to me, "Go." You know my natural inclination is toward a quiet, scholarly pastorate. Well, When we me me here a noise distu manufact othing Milton is, as you know, a noisy, dirty, manufac turning town, full of workingmen, cursed with saloons and black with coal smoke and unwashed humanity. The church is quite strong in memberteading ramilies in the place. What I can do in such a church remains to be seen. My prede-cessor there, Dr. Brown, was a profound sermon-izer and generally liked, I believe. He was a man of the old school and made no attempt, I understand, to bring the clurch into contact with the masses. You will say that such a church is a poor place in which to attempt a different work. I do not necessarily think so. The church of Christ is in itself. I believe, a powerful engine to country to accomplish wonderful things for hu-manity, and I am going to Milton- with that faith very strong in me. I feel as if a very great work could be done there. Think of it, Alfred1 A town of 50,000 workingmen, half of them for-cigners; a town with more than 60 saloons in full

so intense a craving for the love of his fellow men as I possess, and yet I am conscious that I self, and yet, dear chum, there is not the least

It is the noblest of all professions. I feel

It was characteristic of Philip that

CHAPTER II.

ple?"

fear, Sarah. I'm not going to try to change everything all at once." His wife looked at him a little anxiously. She had perfect faith in Philip's honesty of purpose, but she sometimes had a fear of his impetuous desire to reform the world. After a little pause she spoke again, changing the subject. "What did you think of the congrega-

Interference."

of the minister."

think so?"

tion, Philip?" "I enjoyed it. I thought it was very attentive. There was a larger number out this evening than I had expected." "Did you like the looks of the peo-

"They were all very nicely dressed." "Now, Philip, you know that isn't what I mean. Did you like the people's faces?" "You know I like all sorts and conditions of men." "Yes, but there are audiences and audiences. Do you think you will enjoy preaching to this one in Calvary church?

he said it in a tone that might have meant a great deal more. Again there Philip Strong, with a smile and a sigh, ing. Did you think I was nervous? shall try to be entirely loving and just just the right thing to do ap] especial to the one with Mr. Bentley. He had took up his pen and wrote replies to Did I preach well?" Philip was not and courageous in giving what I be- ly for a church member. But when not been able to see Mr. William Winvain in the least. He simply put the lieve Christ himself would give you if Philip pressed him to give up the whole ter, the chairman of the trustees, as he question to satisfy his own exacting he were the pastor of Calvary church iniquitous revenue and clear himself had not returned home until very late demand on himself in preaching. And in Milton today. So, during the talks, I of all connection with it the property Saturday night. Philip saw him come there was not a person in the world to wish you would, with me, try to see if owner looked aghast.

whom he would have put such a ques- you think Christ would actually say what I shall say in his place. If Christ what you ask? Two-thirds of the most were in Milton today, I believe he regular part of my income is derived telt proud of you. You made some would speak to us about a good many from these rents. It is out of the questhings in Milton, and he would speak tion for me to give them up. You are very plainly, and in many cases be might seem to be severe. But it would be for our good. Of course I am but human in my weakaess. I shall make in the church who isn't deriving some mistakes. I shall probably say things Christ would not say. But always go- part of your salary is paid from these ing to the source of all true help, the very rents. You will get into trouble spirit of truth, I shall, as best a man if you try to meddle in this matter. 1 may, speak as I truly believe Christ don't take offense. I think you have and Modern Society." His subject this would if he were your pastor. These done your duty. And I confess it talks will be given on the first Sunday doesn't seem exactly the thing. But, of every month. I cannot announce as society is organized, I don't see that "How do you like the church buildthe subjects, for they will be chosen we can change the matter. Better not as the opportunities arise." try to do anything about it. Mr. Strong. "It is an easy audience room for my

During the week Philip spent several The church likes you and will stand by voice. I don't like the arrangement of hours of each day in learning the facts in giving you a handsome support, but the choir over the front door. I think concerning the town. One of the first men are very touchy when their prithe choir ought to be down on the platthings he did was to buy an accurate vate business is meddled with." form in front of the people, by the side map of the place. He hung it up on the wall of his study and in after days and his face grew whiter and he "That's one of your hobbies, Philip. But the singing was good, didn't you He spent afternoons walking over the town. He noted with special interest spoke in a low voice: "Yes, the choir is a good one. The and earnestness the great brick mills congregation didn't seem to sing much. by the river, five enormous structures and I believe in congregational singing. with immense chimneys, out of which even when there is a choir. But we poured great volumes of smoke. Somecan bring that about in time, I think." thing about the mills fascinated him. "Now, Philip," said his wife, in some They seemed like monsters of some alarm, "you are not going to meddle sort, grim, unfeeling, but terrible. As with the singing, are you? It will get one walked by them he seemed to feel you into trouble. There is a musical the throbbing of the hearts of five creacommittee in the church, and such comtures. The unpainted tenements, ugly mittees are very sensitive about any in their unfailing similarity, affected Philip with a sense of almost anger. "Well," said Philip, rousing up a lit-He had a keen and truthful taste in tle, "the singing is a very important matters of architecture, and those part of the service. And it seems to boxes of houses offended every artistic me I ought to have something imporand homelike feeling in him. Coming tant to say about it. But you need not home one day past the tenements, he found himself in an unknown street, and for the curiosity of it he undertook to count the saloons on the street in one block. There were over 12. There was a policeman on the corner as Philip reached the crossing, and he inquired of the officer if he could tell him who owned the property in the block containing the saloons.

"I believe most of the houses belong to Mr. Winter, sir."

"Mr. William Winter?" asked Philip. "Yes, I think that's the name. He is the largest owner in the Ocean mill yonder.

toward home. "William Winter!" he exclaimed. "Is it possible that man will accept a revenue from the renting of his property to these vestibules of hell? That man! One of the leading members in my church! Chairman of the board of trustees and a leading citizen of the place! It does not seem possible!"

But before the week was out Philip "I think I shall," replied Philip, but had discovered facts that made his mind heart burn with shame and his mind rouse with indignation. Property in into the church that morning, just as the choir rose to sing the anthem. He "Why, Mr. Strong, do you know was a large, fine looking man. Philip admired his physical appearance as he marched down the aisle to his pew, which was the third from the front, ditoo nice in the matter. All the proprectly before the pulpit. erty owners in Milton do the same When the hymn had been sung, the thing. There isn't a man of any means offering taken, the prayer made, Philip stepped out at one side of the pulpit revenue from this source. Why, a large and reminded the congregation that, according to his announcement of a week before, he would give the first of his series of monthly talks on "Christ morning, he said, was "The Right and Wrong Uses of Property."

He started out with the statement, which he claimed was verified every where in the word of God, that all property that men acquire is really only in the nature of trust funds, which the property holder is in duty bound to use as a steward. The gold Philip sat listening to this speech, is God's. The silver is God's. The cattle on a thousand hills, all land and found occasion to make good use of it. clinched his hands tighter as the man water privileges and wealth of the went on. When he had finished, Philip | earth and of the seas belong primarily to the Lord of all the earth. When any of this property comes within the con-"Mr. Bentley, you do not know me if you think any fear of the consetrol of a man, he is not at liberty to use it as if it were his own and his quences will prevent my speaking to alone, but as God would have him use the members of my church on any matter where it seems to me I ought to it to better the condition of life and speak. In this particular matter I be make men and communities happier lieve it is not only my right but my and more useful.

From this statement Philip went on duty to speak. I would be shamed before my Lord and Master if I did not to speak of the common idea which declare his will in regard to the uses of men had that wealth and houses and property. This question passes over lands were their own to do with as from one of private business, with they pleased, and he showed what which I have no right to meddle, into misery and trouble had always flowed the domain of public safety, where I out of the great falsehood and how have a right to demand that places nations and individuals were today in which are fatal to the life and morals the greatest distress because of the of the young men and women of the wrong uses to which God's property town shall not be encouraged and al | was put by men who had control of it. lowed to subsist through the use of It was easy then to narrow the arguproperty owned and controlled by men ment to the condition of affairs in of influence in the community and es. Milton. As he stepped from the generpecially by the members of Christ's al to the particular and began to speak body. My brother," Philip went on of the rental of saloons and houses of after a painful pause, "before God. in gambling from property owners in whose presence we shall stand at last. Milton and then characterized such a use of God's property as wrong and am I not right in my view of this matter? Would not Christ say to you just un-Christian it was curious to note the effect on the congregation. Men who what I am now saying?" had been listening complacently to Mr. Bentley shrugged his shoulders and said something about not trying to Philip's eloquent but quiet statements, mix up business and religion. Philip as long as he confined himself to dissat looking at the man, reading him tant historical facts, suddenly became Philip thanked the man and went on through and through, his heart almost aware that the tall, pale faced, resolute and loving young preacher up there bursting in him at the thought of what was talking right at them, and more a man would do for the sake of money. At last he saw that he would gain than one mill owner, merchant, real estate dealer and even professionnothing by prolonging the argument. He rose, and with the same sweet al man writhed inwardly and nervfrankness which characterized his ously shifted in his cushioned pew opening of the subject he said: "Broth- as Philip spoke in the plainest er. I wish to tell you that it is my in- terms of the terrible example set tention to speak of this matter next the world by the use of property Sunday in the first of my talks on for purposes which were destructive to 'Christ and Modern Society.' I be- all true society and a shame to civilizalieve it is something he would talk tion and Christianity. Philip controlled his voice and his n anne

"If I did not think of it once in awhile, I doubt if you would have a de-

REV CHARLES M. SHELDON. cent meal or a good suit of clothes." replied the minister's wife, looking at him with a smile

"Oh, well, that may be, Sarah. But let me read you the other letter," he went on without discussing the salary matter:

CHAPEL HILL CHURCH, ELMDALE. Rev. Philip Strong:

Dear Brother-At a meeting of the Elmdale Chapel Hill church, held last week Thursday, it was unanimously voted to extend you a call to become pastor of the church at a salary of $2,000 a year, with two months' vacation, to be selected at your own convenience. The Chapel Hill church is in a prosperous condition, and many of the members recall your career in the college with much pleasure. This is an especially strong cen-ter for church work, the proximity of the boys' academy and the university making the situation one of great power to a man who thoroughly understands and enjoys young men, as we know yo do. We most carnestly hope you will conside this call not as purely formal, but as from the hearts of the people. We are, very cordially hearts of the people. We a yours, in behalf of the church,

PROFESSOR WELLMAN, Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

"What do you think of that?" asked the minister again.

"The salary is just the same, isn't it ?"

"Now. Sarah." said the minister, "if I didn't know what a generous, unselfish heart you really have, I should get very vexed at you for talking about the salary as if that was the most important thing."

"The salary is very important, though. But you know. Philip, 1 would be as willing as you are to live on no salary if the grocer and butcher would continue to feed us for nothing. I wish from the bottom of my heart that we could live without money."

"It is a bother, isn't it?" replied Philip, so gravely that his wife laughed heartily at his tone.

"Well, the question is, what to do with the letters," resumed the minister. "Which of the two churches do you prefer?" asked his wife. "I would rather go to the Chapel Hill church as far as my preference is concerned."

"Then why not accept their call, if that is the way you feel?"

"Because, while I should like to go to Elmdale, I feel as if I ought to go to Milton."

discussed and the masses are engrossed in the terrible struggle for liberty ed in the terrine struggle for merty and home, where physical life thrusts condition of things in Milton ever since you and itself out into society, trampling down I did our summer work in the neighboring town the spiritual and intellectual and demanding of the church and the preacher the fighting powers of giants of God why the call comes to me to go to a place and take up work that in many ways is so distasteful to restore in men's souls a more just to me. In one sense I shrink from it with a senproportion of the value of the life of sitiveness which no one except my wife and you man on earth.

"So, you see. Sarah." the minister sometimes impossible for me to do the work that went on after a little pause. "I want to man. It almost kills me to know that I am critigo to Elmdale, but the Lord probably cised for all that I say and do. And yet I know wants me to go to Milton." that the ministry will always be the target for criticism. I have an almost morbid shrinking from the thought that people do not like me, Mrs. Strong was silent. She had the utmost faith in her husband that he that I am not loved by everybody, and yet would do exactly what he knew he would do exactly what he knew he ought to do when once he decided what it was Philip Strong was also silent a moment. At last he said, silent a moment. At last he said, "Don't you think so, Sarah?"

"I don't see how we can always tell exactly what the Lord wants us to do exactly what the Lord wants us to do How can you tell that he doesn't want you to go to Elindale? Are there not to Milton with all this complex thought of mygreat opportunities to influence young great opportunities to influence young student life in a university town? Will not some one go to Elmdale and be-forget myself, and then the work will stand out come pastor of that church?"

prominent as it ought. With all my doubts of myself 1 never question the wisdom of entering the ministry. I have a very positive assurance as "No doubt there is a necessary work to be done there. The only question is. A up 1 the one to do it or is the call to what can a man ask more? I am not dissatisfied Am I the one to do it or is the call to with the ministry, only with my own action with-Milton more imperative? The more I think of it, the more I am convinced in it. It is the noticest of all protessions. I teer proud of it every day. Only it is so great that it makes a man feel small when he steps inside. Well, my wife is calling me down to tea. Let me know what you do. We shall move to Milton next week, prohably; so, if you write, direct that I must go to Milton." "Then," said the minister's wife, rising suddenly and speaking with a next week, propage, there has ever, your old chum. PHILIP STRONG. mock seriousness that her husband fully understood. "I don't see why you called me up here to decide what you had evidently settled before you called in this letter he said nothing about his me. Do you consider that fair treat- call to Elmdale and did not tell his colment, sir? It will serve you right if lege chum what salary was offered him those biscuits I put in the oven when by the church at Milton. As a matter you called me are fallen as completely of fact, he really forgot all about everyas Babylon. And I will make you eat thing, except the one important event half a dozen of them, sir, to punish of his decision to go to Milton. He reyou. We cannot afford to waste any- garded it, and rightly so, as the most thing these times." "What," cried Philip slyly, "not on had apparently decided the matter very $2,000 a year.' But I'll eat the biscuits. quickly it was, in reality, the result of They can't possibly be any worse than a deep conviction that he ought to go. those we had a week after we were He was in the habit of making his demarried-the ones we bought from the cisions rapidly. This habit sometimes bakery, you remember," Philip added led him into embarrassing mistakes hastily humiliating reversals of opinion, so "You saved yourself just in time, that people who did not know him then," replied the minister's wife. She came close up to the desk and in a dif- thought he was fickle and changeable. In the present case Philip acted with ferent tone said, "Philip, you know I his customary quickness and knew believe in you, don't you?" very well that his action was unalter-"Yes," said Philip simply. "I am sure you do. I am impulsive and im- able. practical; but, heart and soul and body and mind, I simply want to do the will of God. Is it not so?"

"I know it is," she said, "and if you vourself '

"Yes Then shall I answer the letter tonight?"

help, of course."

And as for the biscuits"-"As for the biscuits," said the minis- were sharp and frosty.

out me, too, if I don't go down and see ed his wife.

nicipal annals-surely such a place presents an was silence and again the minister's opportunity for the true church of Christ to do some splendid work. I hope I do not overestimate wife was the first to break it.

"There was a place in your sermon tonight, Philip, where you appeared the least bit embarrassed, as you seem of Clifton. If ever there was missionary ground in America, it is there. I cannot understand just sometimes at home when you have some writing or some newspaper article on your mind and some one suddenly interrupts you with a question a good way from your thoughts. What could understand. You know what an almost ridiculous excess of sensibility I have. It seems was the matter? Did you forget a point?"

"No, I'll tell you. From where I stand on the pulpit platform I can see through one of the windows over the and would not be back until Saturday front door. There is a large electric lamp burning outside, and the light fell directly on the sidewalk across the street. From time to time groups of people went through that band of light. Of course I could not see their faces very well, but I soon found out that they were mostly the young men and women operatives of the mills. They were out strolling through the street, which, I am told, is a favorite promenade with them. I should think as many as 200 passed by the church while I was preaching. Well, after awhile I began to ask myself whether there was any possible way of getting those young people to come into the church instead of strolling past? And then I looked at the people in front of me and saw how different they were from those outside and wondered if it wouldn't be better to close up the church and go and preach on the street where the people are. And so, carrying on all that questioning with myself, while I tried to preach, causing a little 'embarrassment,' as you kindly call it, in the sermon."

"I should think so! But how do you was true that he rented several Louses know, Philip, that those people outside in a certain block where saloons and involved that it will certainly alienate were in any need of your preaching?" Philip appeared surprised at the man looked at Philip, turned red and being compelled to lose your place as question. He looked at his wife, and her face was serious.

serious step of his life, and while he "Why, doesn't everybody need preaching? They may not stand in they ought to have some preaching. and once in a great while resulted in ought to be done."

will be blessed. Don't you think so?"

ing the power of Christianity to do great things. Within a week Philip Strong had moved to Milton, as the church wished simply meant, not Philip Strong, but my brother?" go to Milton it will be because you him to occupy the pulpit at once. The Christ in Philip Strong. To deny the made everything look very homelike. treason. The first Sunday evening after Philip "Yes, if you have decided, with my preached in Milton, for the first time, this announcement to the people: he chatted with his wife over the "Beginning with next Sunday morn-know I could not settle it without you. cheerful op n fire in the large grate, monthly talks on 'Christ and Modern It was late in the fall and the nights Society.' It will be my object in these has should be used in clean and honest and frankly, in his presentation of the

the town which was being used for saas I think he would."

loons, gambling houses and dens of wickedness was owned in large part by several of the most prominent members of his church. There was no doubt of the fact. Philip, whose very nature was frankness itself, resolved to go to these men and have a plain talk with them about it. It seemed to him like a monstrous evil that a Christian believer, a church member, should be renting his property to these dens of vice and taking the money. He called on Mr. Winter, but he was out of town night. He went to see another member who was a large owner in one of the mills and a heavy property owner. It was not a pleasant thing to do, but Philip boldly stated the precise reason for his call and asked his member if it "Is it right, my brother?"

"My dear brother," said Philip, with a sad but winning smile, "you cannot replied, "Get thee behind me, satan!" need of my preaching perhaps, but imagine what it costs me to come to He said with himself, he might as you about this matter. In one sense it well let the people know what he was ip extended. And I cannot help thinking of what is may seem to you like an impertinent at the very first. It was not necesthe duty of the church in this place to meddling in your business. In another sary that he should be their pastor if the great crowd outside. Something sense it is only what I ought to do as they would none of him. It was necpastor of a church which is dearer to essary that he preach the truth boldly.

"Philip, I am sure your work here me than my life. And I have come to The one question he asked himself you as a brother in Christ to ask you was, "Would Jesus Christ, if he were "I know it will," replied Philip, with if it seems to you like a thing which pastor of Calvary church in Milton tothe assurance of a very positive but Christ would approve that you, his day, speak of the matter next Sunday spiritually minded man. He never disciple, should allow the property and speak regardless of all consethought his Master was honored by which has come into your hands that quences?" Philip asked the question by the agents of the devil while you said, "Yes, I believe he would." It is And always when he said "I" he reap the financial benefit. Is it right, possible that he might have gained by want to do his will more than to please parsonage was a well planned house power and worth of that incarnation put made the usual excuses, that if he have pursued that method and still next the church, and his wife soon was, to his mind, not humility, but did not rent to these people other men have been a courageous, would, that there was no call for the But this is the story of Philip Strong, > would lie empty at a dead loss, and so When Sunday morning came, he went into his pulpit with the one about in public, and I will rably, but he drove the truth home and spared not. His voice at no time rose "You must do your duty, of course, above a quiet conversational tone, but Mr. Strong," replied Mr. Bentley, someit was clear and distinct. The audience what coldly, and Philip went out, feelsat hushed in the spell of a geuine sening as if he had grappled with his first sation, which deepened when, at the dragon in Milton and found him to be a very ugly one and hard to kill. What close of a tremendous sentence which swept through the church like a redhurt him as much as the lack of spiritual fineness of apprehension of evil hot flame. Mr. Winter suddenly arose in his church member was the knowl. In his pew, passed out into the aisle edge that, as Mr. Bentley so coarsely and marched deliberately down and put it, his salary was largely paid out out of the door. Philip saw him and of the rentals of those vile abodes. He knew the reason, but marched straight grew sick at heart as he dwelt upon on with his message, and no one, not the disagreeable fact, and as he came even his anxious wife, who endured back to the parsonage and went up to martyrdom for him that morning, his cozy study he groaned to think could detect any disturbance in Philip that it was possible through the price from the mill owner's contemptuous withdrawal.

that men paid for souls. When Philip closed with a prayer of "And this because society is as it is!" he exclaimed, as be buried his face in tender appeal that the spirit of truth his hands and leaned his elbows on his would make all hearts to behold the desk, while his cheeks flushed and his truth as one soul, the audience remainheart quivered at the thought of the ed seated longer than usual, still under filth and vileness the money had seen the influence of the subject and the and heard which paid for the very morning's sensational service. All through the day Philip felt a certain desk at which he wrote his sermons. But Philip Strong was not one to strain on him, which did not subside even when the evening service was give way at the first feeling of seeming defeat. He did not too harshiy over. Some of the members, notably condemn his members. He wondered several of the mothers, thanked him at their lack of spiritual life; but, to with tears in their eyes for the mornhis credit be it said, he did not harshly ing message. Very few of the men condemn. Only, as Sunday approach- talked with him. Mr. Winter did not ed, he grew more clear in his own mind come out to the evening service, alas to his duty in the matter. Expe- though he was one of the very few diency whispered to him: "Better wait, men members who were invariably You have only just come here. The present. Philip noted his absence, but people like you now. It will only preached with his usual enthusiasm. cause unpleasant feelings and do no He thought a larger number of strangood for you to launch out into a cru- gers was present than he had seen the Sunday before. He was very tired sade against this thing right now. There are so many of your members when the day was over.

The next morning as he was getting gambling houses were numerous. The their support and possibly lead to your ready to go out for a visit to one of the mills, the bell rang. He was near the finally said it was a fact, but none of pastor if it do not drive away the most door and opened it. There stood Mr. induential members." Winter. "I would like to see you for a few moments, Mr. Strong, If you can To all this plea of expediency Philip spare the time," said the mill owner, without offering to take the hand Phil-

"Certainly. Will you come up to my study?" asked Philip quietly.

The two men went up stairs, and Philip shut the door, as he motioned Mr. Winter to a seat and then sat down opposite.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Becoming a British Subject.

It is an easy thing to become a British subject. All that an alien has to do is to declare his intention to reside within the British dominions on leaving his own country, and forthwith he waiting or by working with his memtakes out his naturalization papers, issued to him by the secretary of state upon his taking the oath of allegiance. These papers invest him with the rights and privileges of a Britisher, except that he is barred from becoming a privy councilor or a member of parliament and also barred from accepting office under the crown. But if an alien be naturalized by special act of parliament passed for his own benefit asking him for small things or doubt- you may use it for his glory and the honestly, and after long prayer and building up of his kingdom to be used much communion with the Divine he The man to whom the question was bers in private. Another man might

The Sunday following Philip made property by other parties and if it were not of another man, and this is what not rented to objectionable people it he did:

"Of course, you foolish creature, you events of the day as they sat before a ing. I shall give the first of a series of forth. To all of which Philip opposed the plain will of God, that all a man thought in mind that he would simply ways, and he could never sanction the subject, use the language and the spirone speaking to modern society on its getting of money through such im- it of his Master. He had seen other then he becomes as much a British out me, too, if I don't go down and see ed his wife. to them." She hurried down stairs, and "Yes, the day has been rather try-

Philip's business.