From the best information obtainable, the cattle are not actually scarcer than usual; but the proportion fit for use is smaller. Scattered about through the county there are quite a number of people who have for several years past been giving more attention to cattle feeding, and while several of these have on hand a good many head, ou account of the scarcity of feed that has prevailed since last fall, the cattle are not in as good condition as at the present time in former years. The situation has in it a pretty strong hint as to what might be accomplished in this line, and there ought to be those who will be able to profit by the lesson.

If there is anything in signs, the fruit crop ought now to be considered reasonably safe. Experience has long since shown that the peach does not know enough to keep from budding until after all danger from frost is over. This is generally believed to be because the peach is from Persia, where there were no frosts, and the trees have ever since been in the habit of shooting out their buds, at the slighest coaxing of warm weather. As the result, in this part of the country, the peach gets fooled about as often as it makes a safe hit. It got pretty badly disfigured week before last; but was not entirely killed.
