a new church, Mr. Wylie presented them with a most suitable site and contributed most liberally to the building fund. Not only has his immediate religious sect felt the blessings of his generous heart; but the city of his home has always received its full share of his generosity. Only two years ago he presented Chester with a beautiful piece of property for a public park. This park bears his name, as also does the new Wylie mill, of which he was a large stockholder. Joseph Wylie was a citizen whose death the whole state may mourn. His influence for good and his noble deeds were felt in other sections of the state besides Chester county.

His remains were interred in Evergreen cemetery this afternoon, the funeral services being held from the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church, of which he was a devoted member.
