A Samily Newspaper: Sor the Promotion of the Political, Social, Agricultural, and Commencial Interests of the People.

TERMS---$2.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. SINGLE COPY, FIVE CENTS.

ESTABLISHED 1855.

YORKVILLE, S. C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1901.

NO. 82.

The Story Teller.

Frau Berger's Story.

BY CELIE GAINES.

OU look very happy this afternoon, Frau Berger!" "Why not?" she answered. "My man is coming, you know." Frau Berger was a typical old German lady, very "thick" as to proportions and very rosy as to complexion. Her hair, which had evidently been blond, was now perfectly white, and the knitting in her fat little hands was the brightest of scarlet stockings. We were sitting on the plazza awaiting the arrival of the stagecoach. Her blue eyes sparkled so pleasantly behind her eyeglasses that I involuntarily drew my rocking chair nearer. "How pretty she must have been as girl!" I thought. Perhaps she read my thoughts or something in my expression suggested confidence, for she presently smoothed out her knitting meditatively. "Ach, ja! I have been in America 40 years, and I have also been married 40 years, fraulein." "How did you happen to come?" inquired eagerly, and with the funniest little accent she began: "I tell you bout that-something very strange. One day I met my husband next day I love him, next day I marry him! You laugh? We also laugh about "It was the first day of June. The winter had been a time of much sick ness in Germany, and my father and mother had both died in less than three months. I had no brothers, no sisters, and I was but 18 years old. "We were not rich people, and I kney not what to do at all.

"One of my cousins was married, and I went to her house, but her husband was an old man and very cross. She was so kind as a sister to me, but he was jealous that she loved me so much and seemed always to be angry to me. I helped take care of the children and worked what I could, but he did not like me, and I was so unhappy. Many times I thought I would go away, but did not know where to go.

"One day I walked out with the little girl. She was running ahead of me, but all at once she stumbled and fell. I hurried to pick her up, but be fore I reached her I saw a young man stoop down and lift her up. She was generally a very shy child, but her little head lay quite quietly on his shoulder as he comforted her. I was frightened, but something in the way his great, strong arms held her little form gave me courage, and I tried to thank him. "'Your sister?' he asked, glaring from her to me. "'No,' I replied; 'my cousin. Shall ! not take her? And I beld up my arms -so. But she only buried her face on his shoulders and would not look at me. But he looked at me very hard. I knew my cousin's husband would scold because I had let the child fall, and I was so miserable the tears just came into my eyes and ran down my face. He saw it, I know, but he turned to the little girl again.

"'What is your name, little one?' he

"'Lottle Muller,' she answered. "'And where do you live?'

"'I show you!" And when he put her down she took hold of his hand and pulled him after her, for it was not far. "Now you know, fraulein, there are so many Mullers in Germany like there are Smiths in America, but when we came to the house he said, 'Why, here lives my friend Muller!'

"And, sure enough, we all went in. Then I heard his name, Carl Berger, for Herr Muller had known him since he was a little boy and was very glad to see him. They talked a long time, and that young man laughed and seemed to be so happy. 'In two days,' he said, 'I am leaving the fatherland to go to America. I seek my fortune there. A young country is better for a

"i had thought many times of America myself, and it seemed to me for a minute as if he was an angel sent to tell me about it. " 'Oh, sir,' I cried, 'please tell us some more about America!' "'What have you to do with America?' asked Herr Muller, frowning. 'Some day I may go there,' I said. " 'Nonsense!' he answered crossly and seemed angry that I had spoken. But the young man smiled and said, 'So, fraulein, you would like America, you think?' And then be told much about it, and by and by my cousin got some wine, and we all drank his health and luck and a good voyage, only I was very quiet afterward, because I dare not speak any more.

"And my face was burning so much because I had been spoken to so unkindly before a stranger that I left the room and went out into the little garden in front of our house. Pretty soon I heard them saying goodby and knew that he was going. I hoped he would go through the garden without noticing me, and so I turned my face away and began to break off a rose from a small bush But he must have seen me at once, for he came just up to where I was standing and held out his hand. "Will you not say goodby to me, fraulein? he asked. Then like a foolish child and not knowing at all what to say I put into his hand the rose which was in mine. "'Ah, little one,' he said, 'that is a very sweet goodby, but let us say instead, Auf wiedersehen, yes? But suddenly his jolly, laughing face grew serious as he whispered earnestly: 'Are you not happy here, fraulein?' I tried to answer, but my lips were trembling so I could not, and I turned and ran quickly away into the house, but as I went into the door I looked back and ger.

"You know, I was but 18 years old, and joys and sorrows were all very great to me-very real, indeed. Am tiring you?" asked Frau Berger. "Please go on," I begged. "I am afraid the coach will come before I hear the

"It is really not much of a story. In truth it was far too short. Well, the next morning I was dusting, when suddenly the bell rang. Herr Muller was just going out, so he opened the door. "I stopped and listened. I knew that voice. Had I not been dreaming of it all night? It was his. In a moment the veranda near where the low winthey would both come into the wohn- dows of the library opened from it stube. Ach! I remembered the rose were Lisle and her mother, Thomas O. of yesterday and was so ashamed. Thomas of Kansas City and his daughthat? Was it very wrong? Why did with his long legs dangling over it, he come back after saying goodby? A Craig Thompson. hundred thoughts' like that went a high backed, old fashloned one.

"'Come in! Come in!' I heard Herr Muller saying. 'Very friendly, I am sure, to come to see us again before you go.

"Ab, how I had wished to see him seen the whole German army come inand was quite out of sight.

"Then they took seats and began to talk. Every word they said I remember like it was only yesterday.

ask you. "'So? What you want ask me, eh?' And that young man answered, '1 your wife's cousin, if she will marry such a fool!" "Then I heard that young man laugh little. 'I understand how you think man in love is called a fool, but I canthe world. Since yesterday I have have not much money, but so long as I hered to hab ts which had become sechave two hands she shall want for nothing. "By and by my cousin come in and talk a long while. His family, she said, were old friends of hers, and she knew he was a 'very fine young man also,' but America was such a very far country, and I was very young. Oh, how my heart beat there behind the sofa on my knees! It seemed to me that they must bear it almost.

"I nearly tried to stop my breathing, I was so still-so afraid they would find me, you know.

"After awhile I heard young Berger say: 'All I ask is that you allow me to speak to her. If she will not marry me now. I will go and work alone, and after a few years I will come back for her. for of one thing I am entirely sureonly with her can't be happy."

"Then my cousin went to call me and she called and called, but I made no answer, and Herr Muller became angry.

"'Where is she gone?' he asked. 'She is never there when you want her. What a crazy harum scarum that girl

"Then he called very loud, and at last be ran out into the garden, where I often used to go, to seek me. I was trembling all over, but I peeked out from behind the sofa, and there sat my poor Berger with his elbows on his knees and his face in his hands. I got up very softly and came out. The first thing I noticed was that he had a faded rose in his coat. I stood quite still for a moment looking at him, and presently he sighed and raised his face and saw me. Ach, I don't know how that was any more now, but when my cousin and her husband came back into the wohnstube Herr Berger's arm was around my waist, and, somehow, I was afraid of nothing-not even of Herr

"Well, the next morning after that we got married. Yes, it is true, it was very quick, but you see he had bought his ticket already, and he must go. I had not indeed much-what you call trousseau. I had some linen of my mother's, like every German girl have, and my cousin gave me some more

"Berger laughed, and I thought he looked so nice when he laughed. "'The greatest travelers,' he said to things.

me, 'always have the least luggage to bother them. Everybody will think we are old travelers.'

"But it all seemed like one dream to me until we stood on the deck of the big ship and I saw Deutschlagd and my cousins' faces growing farther and farther away every minute and at last could see them no more, and the ocean and the life before me seemed so strange, so wide.

"But my husband's arm was around me, and I tried to look up at him and smile, although the tears would come into my eyes, and I was so glad when he said I was a brave girl."

"Thank God, I can say now, when am a white haired old woman, that a better man never lived, and we have also had very good luck. At first we both worked hard, but now we have thing that I could ever say to my children is that they should try to be like their father."

"Ah, here is the coach!" And in another moment all my romantic imaginings were shattered by beholding my ertion and delight, towing into the hotel a huge, corpulent, florid faced, baldheaded and very jolly looking German, the millionaire brewer, Mr. Carl Ber- an officer in the discharge of his duty, he still stood in the same place holding the flower in his hand.

By Frederick Van Rensselaer Dey.

Author of "The Brotherhood of Silence," "The Quality of a Sin," Etc. Copyright, 1901.

CHAPTER XVII.

"NOT LIKE OTHER WOMEN EITHER!" HE scene changes once more to Nevada-to the ranchbouse where Lisle passed the years of her youth. Gathered upon What if Herr Muller should know of ter and, sitting upon the balustrade,

A year had passed since that same through my mind in a moment. What party, with the exception of Mrs. Barcould I say? Where could I go. I rington, was assembled there a year was standing near the sofa. It was that had meant much to Lisle and in fact to them all. Craig was just the same old Craig, not a whit altered except by the disappearance of the beard, which he had not again permitted to grow and the fact that he wore his hair shorter than formerly. In other again, and now I would rather have respects he was the same. He had resumed his western manner and habits to that room as that same pleasant with his western dress, and, if the young man, and just as the door open- truth be told. Lisle liked him better so. ed I fell on my knees behind the sofa There was something incongruous and unfamiliar about him while he was in the east, and, after the trip abroad, during which he accompanied Lisle and her mother, they all elected to re-"'Herr Muller, I have something to turn to Nevada, at least for the summer, and Erna and her father were invited to join the party. Regarding the reunion of mother and want you to let me ask the fraulein, daughter at that time one year ago, when, with Craig. Lisle had left the "Thunder weather!" roared Herr presence of her lawyer to call upon her Muller, which in the German language mother, very little need be said. To is an extremely bad swear. 'What look upon them now, side by side, one man! You will go to a strange land to seemed to be the counterpart of the make your fortune, and now you want other, with the difference wrought by to take that "kind," that child, with years alone, for, although Lisle had reyou for your bride! You can never be sembled her father, she certainly was "the image of her mother."

The two ranches were combined into one, and both were under the manageabout it,' he said. 'Most always a ment of Craig Thompson, who had lived the free western life so long that not help it. I love her more than all be preferred it to any other and who also clung to his western name with thought of nothing else. It is true, I the same tenacity with which he adond nature to him.

"Tell you what, Lisie," he said when the conversation lagged somewhat, "people who live in the great cities of the east don't know what life is. You can't live to please yourself in such a place, no matter how hard you try, and out here you can't help it. The only times in my life when I feel independent of all creation are when I have got my legs a-straddle of a good horse, with a coiled riata on the pommei of my saddle, a pair of forty-fours in m belt, a cool breeze from the peaks of the Sierras filling my lungs and my eyes roaming over a bunch of cattle that stretches away just as far as I can see. That's the life for me, and I'm going to live it to the end of my days. You and your mother can go poking round the world seeing things all you want to, but I'll stay here and see that the bank accounts don't dwindle and keep my account with the Lord straight, too, for I don't believe I could do it in the east."

"You ought to marry, Mr. Thompson," said Erna. "You wouldn't be so lonely when Lisle and her mother are away.' "Well, I don't know about that. May be you're right, and maybe you're wrong. I can't tell, though, what I would do if you were a little older or I were a little younger. Perhaps in that case I'd ask you to marry me."

"It might be that the difference in our ages would not be objectionable to me," said Erna mischievously, "You might ask me anyhow. It is the only way to find out."

"No, it isn't. There is another." "What is it?"

"Never to ask at all. You see, Erna. don't want you. I never would be contented anywhere unless I was boss, and if you made me stand around the way you do your dad I'd be the unhappiest fellow out of jail, and anyhow you're spoke for, so Tom tells me."

"I might give the other fellow the mitten for your sake," she retorted. "Then I wouldn't have you anyway," be answered. "A gal that'll go back on one fellow for another will never be true to anybody, and I wouldn't give 2 cents for her-not if she was the prettlest critter this side of kingdom come. Come on, Tom. Let's go over to the corral and see the horses. As they moved away Mr. Thomas murmured in an undertone: "What a lovely woman Lisle is!"

"You bet!" replied Craig. "Tonight reminds me of the first time that I ever saw her," continued Thom-"She was a man theu, but even as. then I noticed that she was not like other men."

women either. She's got enough of both in her to make the finest woman on top of God's green earth, and that's what she is." After that they changed the subject

"No, and now she ain't like other and talked horse.

THE END.

Not Entitled to Reward. Governor McSweeney has received all that we could wish, and the best Motte, of Berkeley county, in regard empannelling of grand or petit juries." the matter of being a candidate for to the killing of a Negro desperado. The magistrate advised the governor that having had a warrant for the Negro, he sent his constable out to arrest shall be enacted." him. The Negro resisted arrest and the constable shot him dead. There Dean vs. Spartanburg and Nance vs. fat little heroine, panting with the ex- was a reward for the capture of the Anderson it was very plain what was man and the magistrate wrote to in- the construction of the supreme court son of Schley they have found a candiform the governor of the killing and as to special legislation. In the Dean date who might go a great way toward Miscellaneous Beading.

ON TO THE GAME.

Sumter County Farmers Refuse be Duped by Politicians.

"Whereas a call has been issued for business organization is desired and be exempt from its entire operation." politics is not to be permitted-in order to remove all doubts of selfishness in the Alliance officials and to inspire confidence and trust, we respectfully ask that a committee of one be appointed by this meeting to send President Efird. Organizer Wilborn, and Lecturer Elder the following pledge for their signatures: 'We solemnly pledge ourselvretary." The above apparently innocent resolution was passed today by a small body of farmers who assembled in the what had been actually done. court house here for the purpose of resurrecting the defunct Alliance, which has been dead in this county ever since

When the meeting was organized this full discussion was unanimously adopt-

Until the terms of the resolution are complied with no further effort will be made to perfect the organization, nor sion passed the "Healing act," instead will any other county meeting be held of changing the whole law, so as to until some time in November.

The gentlemen referred to in the resare the state officials who are reorganizing the state, county by county, and the work has been proceeding systematically. Remembering how the Alliance was used as a political step-stone in the early '90s the farmers of Sumter county do not intend to allow themselves to be used by politicians again, and have taken today the initiative to test the faith of their would-be leaders. It is not known what action will be taken if these gentlemen refuse to comply with the conditions imposed; but it was intimated that an independent county organization would be organized, which shall be "a non-political southern cotton growing organization." Even today it cropped out in debate that some imperative action must be taken to fight the cotton oil trust which has fastened its fangs upon the state and is buying up the cotton seed at their own prices. On this point the farmers are aroused all over the state and Alliance or no Alliance some orranization will be perfected. They begin to realize the true value of their cotton seed and do not intend to part with them for small prices.

The decisive action of the meeting today in making their leaders declare themselves may be the means of inducing other counties to take the same step.-Sumter special of Friday, to the Columbia State.

JURY LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Judge Gary Makes a Ruling That I of Far Reaching Effect. Judge Ernest Gary has given the existing jury laws of the state a paralytic stroke. He has, in effect, decided that Aiken county is the only county in the state that has a jury law that !s worth anything. The question has been mooted for some time, but Judge Gary cut the knot at the recent tern of court in Cherokee county. His ruling may not be that of any other judge in the state, and may not be sustained by the supereme court, but it is a precedent, and if agreed to by other circuit judges will play havoc with the courts for the next few months, or until the general assembly can remedy the trouble, unless the state supreme court can and does disagree with Judge Gary. The point is that Judge Gary has declared Act No. 183, approved February 19, 1900, to be unconstitutional, and has further declared that the "Hearing act" passed at the recent session of the general assembly is not effective as a "Healing act," and cannot heal, that which, was in his opinion, originally illegal and unconstitutional. The jury act of 1900 repealed the county government act as to jury law, except for Aiken county. Under the his career as a member of the senate. That resolved to do or die act of 1900 Aiken county is exempted If they admired him greatly and wished from the provisions of the act, and it is to honor him they would have left him The good people of Fort Millspecified that so far as Aiken is concerned it shall draw its juries under the provision of the county government

Then for Charleston county there is another act, applying to countles with cities of over 40,000 people, and Charleston county is not covered in any way by the act of February 19, 1900. No mention at all is made of Charleston county. Edgefield county seems to have two modes being in the act in question.

tually done.

whom afterward learned to know as reward offered. The constable being prisoners different in the various counvarious warring elements. They point ties was unauthorized and illegal. is of course not entitled to the reward. In the Nance case Judge Gary held no political record and could safely question.

and, while it may contain special prothe reorganization of the Alliance, in vision, making its effect different in which we are informed that a purely certain counties, those counties cannot

The act of 1900 provided an entirely separate and distinct plan for Aiken county and made no mention of Charleston, and provided two plans for York. Aside from their literary merit, appreciates the rural mail delivery. It Edgefield, and so Judge Gary held that it could not pass the test provided by the supreme court.

The Charleston fight on the jury law was pretty much on the same line, but Will," and is "Dedicated with inexes as officers of the Alliance, not to be in that case it was held that the mere candidates for any political office, either attack of the statute on the grounds county or state, during the approaching that it was unconstitutional would not political campaign.'-(Signed) R. M. do, but that it would have to be shown Cooper, chairman; E. W. Dabbs, sec- what had been actually done which do may ever command: was wrong, and that no proof or facts were presented, but in the Cherokee Creeps Catawba river calmly case there was an agreement as to Court is about to meet in Columbia and there is already talk of attacking the jury here, and if Judge Watts takes the same position as does Judge Gary Which make famous far Fort Mill. the jury here, and if Judge Watts takes there will be no jury cases tried here resolution was first presented and after and so will it be through all the circuits of the judges who hold that view until the general assembly or the supreme court, takes a different view.

The general assembly at its last sesmake it uniform for the state, and In the winter issues heat;—
Judge Gary held that the "Healing Find there fun, but never fool'ness olutions are Messrs. D. F. Efird, of act" was as bad as the act of 1900, as it Lexington; John C. Wilborn, of York; attempted to remedy that which could 'Neath the neat and clean-swept paveand W. N. Elder, also of York. These not be legally remedied.-August Kohn in News and Courier.

WILY POLITICS.

Rather Suspicious View of the Colonel Jones Proposition.

Greenville News. The Savannah Morning News is a close observer of South Carolina politics and it invariably puts its finger on tics and it invariably puts its finger on right, the spot, when it undertakes to analyze Monsters menaced; bade them fix our frequent political complications. Commenting upon the proposition recently made by Colonel Wilie Jones, one of the innumerable caravan of seekers of McLaurin's senatorial seat. that all the candidates withdraw in favor of Wade Hampton, The Morning News says: "Looks like a Tillman plan!

"We are not, of course, in the secrets of the politicians of South Carolina, but to an outsider it looks as if the proposition for all factions of the Deproposition for all factions of the Pe-mocracy to unite and send General Wade Hampton to the United States Marion! and his marching ben! Laurin, were a plan to shelve McLaurin, and not to honor General Hamprin, and not to honor General Hamp-ton. Senator Tillman does not appear Knows her children care for her would not be at all surprising if he All their sons for liberty: were the originator of it. If it did not "Life is not to us worth living, originate with him, it doubtless has his Unless we can live it free," approval. It would never have been Said she, and through revolution made, in all probability, unless he had Rose up forts upon her hills; been consulted in respect to it.

Does this proposition mean that Senator Tillman is a little apprehensive of the result of an effort to "down" Mc-Laurin? There appears to be some ground for thinking so. It is our un derstanding that those who are behind this proposition never had any great amount of love for General Hampton. That being the case why should they come forward at this time with a proposition to send him to the senate unless they have some motive for doing so To the mill for granulation, other than that which is given to the public? Questions like this are no Gained such victory and glory doubt suggesting themselves to the people of South Carolina.

But would General Hampton accept the senatorship under the circumstances? It would naturally be supposed. that his consent had been obtained be- Never found a truer bill! fore the proposition was given to the public; but it is doubtful if it had. As- By our fathers who are dea suming that it had not, it is by no means certain that General Hampton would accept the senatorship, coming to him in the way proposed. The men making the proposition have never posed as his friends. It is our recollection Swift yet cry, "God save the State!" that it was Tillman and his followers who pushed General Hampton out of By the faithful of Fort Mill, the senate a number of years ago. If Than was none by Carolina now they want to put him back, it would seem it was not for the purpose would seem it was not for the purpose And the Act to Nullify, of giving him a chance to round out Law made, heading the procession, in the senate when he was there. The outcome of this move on the political chess board of South Carolina will be awaited with a great deal of interest."

THE PERSECUTION OF SCHLEY .- Albert Halstead, the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, sends his paper the following of inter

It would not be surprising if, before long, some one should spring a boom for Rear Admiral Schley for president Judge Gary said that he regretted on the Democratic ticket, however very much to have to declare the jury short-lived such a move might be. The laws in question unconstitutional, but popularity of Schley is unquestioned, there was nothing else for him to do and whatever may be the decision of after the issue had been made and the the court of inquiry, many people will facts agreed to as to what had been ac- look upon him as the real naval hero at Santiago. But heroes do not always Under section 34 of the rights of the make good political candidates, as in general assembly it is especially pro- the case of Admiral Dewey, for exam vided that one of the things that the ple. It would be hard to find an ob general assembly shall not do is to pass servant person who believes that Adan official report from Magistrate special legislation as to "summons and miral Schley would seriously consider It is further especially provided that president, one paramount condition be-"in all other cases where a general law ing the chaotic condition of the Democan be made applicable, no special law cratic party at present, and the extreme uncertainty of Democratic suc-Judge Gary held that in the case of cess in the next presidential election. Still, there are many enthusiastic Democrat who believe that in the per ask if his constable was entitled to the case it was decided that a per diem of uniting the party and harmonizing the to the fact that the naval officer has that the supreme court gave unmistak- stand on any platform that the Demoable evidence of its views and that it cratic convention might adopt. They applied directly to the jury laws in further insist that there is no other entirely satisfactory Democratic possibil-The court in that case held: "In order ity for president, and that Schley would that a law may be general it must be be a safe compromise. Schley would of force in every county in the state hardly give any encouragement to the use of his name in this connection.

FORT MILL.

Mention was made some weeks ago of the poems of James Hampton Lee, the United States free delivery system, formerly of Fort Mill, now of New that will appeal to every farmer who these poems are possessed of local interest, especially the following pretical history of a York county town. It is entitled, "Of a Fort and Mill, If You ment with regard to the establishment pressible gratitude to my most conscientious teacher, Prof. John A. Boyd, to any credit or honor which anything I

PROLOGUE. Crossing Carolina's land;— I invite you now most warmly On Catawba's banks to stand; To view with me where Indian nations Worked and wandered at their will; Come! in Fort Mill, Carolina

'Tis not long between the drinks; For she drinks—now don't malign her-What will help, not hurt, she thinks. A "dispensary's" established In the center of the town;

And to go in means go down. In the summer comes forth coolness, 'Cause there comes from forty feet ment

Water only!-Mother earth Free dispenses, no depravement Can invade her home and hearth: If sin should make monstrous visit, 'Twould be buried at its birth!— Speaking of this water, is it Not worth more than whisky's Carolina called her children Up one day in '76;— Told them that their home and birth-

'Round her castles, firm and frowning, Forts from which to fiercely fight. will be a glorious crowning, If the day is won, at night," Said young Marion's Morion mother, And he said, with hundreds more: "If you crown us, Carolina,

We will crown you too, before! So the swamp-fox, swift as sunshine, Swept by British dogs of war: Laughed while listening to their barking. Slyly scratched them with his paw, Bringing blood which brought on battle senate, as the successor to Senator Mc- Down towards Cowpens, from her hilltops, Carolina sees the stir:

> And her dozen sisters, giving Forth they fired for constitution

> While to feed them moved the mills. "White's old mill" much meal grinding For our fort's defenders' bread; Bushels boosted bullets; blinding Blazes burst 'gainst coats of red! Scarlet oft blood-red was turning!-(Though some guns were logs of pine, Painted, their designer's earning Fame yet-1899).

Mill and fort co-operation Farmers forcing sacks of corn Whence the fort was fed each morn That the folks for miles They'd one city make; did so they, And they christened it "Fort Mill."

By that fort that flamed with fury, By that old revolving mill; Didn't they name it right? Grand jury We've the name and we're the people

As you may perhaps have read, There are few of such who've wanted In some rare redeeming trait: Men like Marion e'er undaunted Deeds are done today diviner, Years ago, when she said NIL To the Northmen and Secession, They're the cream of Carolina-

And though some have chased

And though some of some of them are Than the others, most have still Blood just like the "Grand old Rebel" Had who fought a million foes; And they'll pay back double-treble To the tramplers on their toes.

Yet their bravery when defending

All that's great, that is, that's good, In the way of love unending Has not in one instance stood Long and lovingly we linger Round this region so renowned; Picks up pebbles from the ground. See those bullets bruised and beaten, Huddled in that tiny hand?

They sweeten every furrow of the land:-Glorious land our soldiers camped on, Who were kind enough to kill, Under men like Marion, Hampton, Fiercest foes of fair Fort Mill.

Through men's hearts they ploughed;-

Ah, the cream of Carolina re the folks of fair Fort Milllought can break the kindred tie nor Waste my wishes that no ill Evermore shall touch the cradle Of my childhood's holy hopes; Touch the love-land where I stayed till Swept from off its sunlit slopes. But my destiny's designer! Uncontaminated still Keep the cream of Carolina Fortitudinous Fort Mill.

Though I'm nevermore among you, have well, sincerely sung you .-Now I reach the northern pole of-Of my poem-and the whole of: Fort Mill holds the heart and soul of -James Hampton Lee. FREE RURAL DELIVERY.

Good Roads Are an Absolutely Necessary Pre-Requisite. The Journal has before called the attention of the farmers of Georgia to the necessity for good roads, and, in season and out, has urged the wisdom of paying greater attention to this most important matter. But here is a point brought out by Col. A. W. Machen, superintendent of is fully explained in an article in The Louisville Post, which says:

The policy of the postoffice departof the service has changed. At first rural free delivery was an experiment, and the restrictions were not regarded whom will always belong a share of will be put in pending the improvement of the roads. No route will be permitted to open until all the roads upon the route are in good condition. The mail carrier is not to be forced to make his way through mud hub deep and almost impassible, as in some cases during former winters and wet seasons. The policy of the department is to see that the roads are good before free delivery of mail is granted to any community. The policy of the department, more than that, is to see that those routes now in operation, pending improvements of roads by landowners, are not neglected by those who are pledged for their betterment. If it is found that roads remain unimproved a reasonable time, the rural carrier will be called off the route, and the daily mail service will be abandoned on the neglected

The officers in charge of the rural free delivery system are as much interested in good raods as is the good roads bureau of the agricultural department at Washington. Good roads are a necessity where the rural ca: rier must pass. If a county does not possess good roads, that county will in future have a hard time securing routes, and will have a harder time keeping routes that may now be operating over poor roads. Poor roads make the mail service very unsatisfactory, and it is the tendency to blame the service and the department rather than to lay the blame at the proper door. The following letter was recently written to the Hon. Geo. W. Steele, congressman from the Eleventh district, of Indiana, from the Hon, A. W. Machen, general superintendent of the free delivery system. It is official and will be read with interest: MR: MACHEN'S LETTER.

The temporary suspension of service last winter and spring on a number of rural free delivery routes in the western states on account of the impassible condition of the roads brought forcibly to the attention of the department the necessity of good roads in connection that time the local authorities were informed that unless the roads were im-proved before the return of winter here would be danger of a permanent withdrawal of the rural free service. Reports show that the advice of the department has been heeded in many instances. In one locality, which recall, favorable action was taken by the township trustee by appropriating an amount of money for the improve-nent of roads over which the rural carrier travels. "While the actual suspensions of ser-vice on account of impassible roads were few comparatively speaking, there were a great many cases in which the poor condition of the roads made it very difficult to provide an efficient service and in which the service was performed only by dint of perseverance on the part of the carrier, backed up by the deter-mination of the department to deliver mail whenever it was possible. It is readily seen that the condition of the roads becomes a very important consideration in the establishment of rural free delivery. Where the roads are good a route 27 or 30 miles in length may be more easily served than another route of 18 or 20 miles over poor roads.

"In the first case more people are served, the service is performed more expeditiously and with much more ease by the carrier and his horse. The carrier, too, can establish a regularity of service enabling the farmers to know just about what time every day he will arrive in front of their premises. "In the second instance, with the short route over bad roads as much time is consumed in serving a smaller number of patrons, the regularity of the service varies with the changing con-

trying on both the letter carrier and ditions of the roads, the work

his horse, and unsatisfactory to the patrons, especially when it becomes necessary to suspend the service on ac-count of impassible portions of the "Reports from all parts of the country indicate clearly that the people are waking up in order to obtain the establishment of rural free delivery, and in this way it is seen that the rural service becomes a great factor in the good roads movement, which of late years has been agitated in many of the pro-

The letter of Mr. Machen brings out the policy of the postal department by intimation rather than by direct assertion. Rural free delivery will go to where the people either have or are willing to provide good roads. It will take several years to spread the delivery system over the entire fairly well copulated portions of the country. Those portions which have at all times or at centain times of the year such roads which make the service expensive, will be denied the luxury of having the mail brought to the house every day. Daily the representatives in congress are being more strongly impressed with this fact. When a good case is made out in favor of a certain route, the department acts upon the report of the special agent, and "bad roads in the spring" is certain to cause the petition to be held up for a time or sometimes for good. It is understood that the department will enforce a rule to the effect that carriers report their inability to cover a route on account of the condition of the roads, it will be abolished and mail service be given from the village postoffice.-Atlanta Journal.

The only way to be in fashion nowadays, is to be a little different from everybody else.