

Mrs. Jenkins was married to the brilliant Confederate officer, Micah Jenkins, in 1856. His four sons survive her. Her death at this time is rendered peculiarly sad by the fact that she was on her way from West Point, N. Y. where she had spent many months with her youngest son, Captain J. M. Jenkins, U. S. A., to Charleston, in order to be present on the occasion of the presentation of a sword by the president to her oldest son, Major M. J. Jenkins, of the regiment of Rough Riders. Her cultured intellect, her gentle manners, and beautiful features will preserve her memory sweet and fresh in the hearts of the host of friends.

The Yorkville and Tirzah Road.

The change put in such work as the weather permitted last week, on the "Robinson hill" at Fishing creek, and although it cannot be said that the work amounted to more than a good start, enough was done to suggest the wonderful improvement that will be made at this place. People at all familiar with the Robinson hill recognize it as one of the most desperate of all the desperate sections of road in the county. The hill, especially on the east side of the creek, is long, steep and rough. It is covered with a slaty stone, which does not improve the road bed. Such work as was done last week developed the fact that this slaty stone is present in sufficient quantity to macadamize the road on the east side of the creek. The grade stakes have been set on both sides of the creek in accordance with the surveyor's profile. The bridge is to be 14 feet above the water level in the creek, and when the road is finished at this point, it is safe to predict that a team will be able to trot over it with a loaded wagon. On Monday work was resumed on the Robinson hill, the change being made from the removal on account of the rough weather that had been prevailing.

SOUTH CAROLINA NEWS.

The Spectre of Coosaw: Columbia special to The News and Courier: Much interest is taken in the probable action of the senate in regard to the Virginia-Carolina Chemical company. It seems that senators now realize that it would be an economical blunder to force the company to cease doing business in the state and a compromise measure is looked for. Indeed such a scheme has been presented to the judiciary committee, but the report has been delayed. It is stated, on account of the fact that a bill has not been perfected which meets exactly the views of the majority of the committee. It is said that the compromise will be in the nature of a requirement that the Virginia-Carolina company become domesticated under the laws of the state within a certain time. Some details of the plan have yet to be worked out and hence the delay in the report.

From the West Indies.

Exposition News: A vampire bat hangs in a cage in one of the exhibits in the Palace of Commerce, with its head always down. It is a most remarkable looking animal and likely to haunt one's dreams. If you touch one of the attenuated claws by which it grasps a bar of the cage, it silently and swiftly unfolds a pair of large black satiny wings which make it resemble a broken umbrella in a gale of wind more than anything else. Then just as silently and swiftly it gathers its sombre wings together, and hangs with its head up, folds these like a mantle in the tragic manner of the dramatists, and looks at you reproachfully out of a pair of strangely intelligent eyes. The head of the beast has not the rat-like effect which belongs to other species of bats, and though covered with what might almost be called fur, it seems to resemble no known animal.

Tillman Playing For Even.

Charleston Post: Tillman never forgets an enemy. He is again illustrious in his position as senator to the confirmation of J. F. Richardson as postmaster at Greenville, under the appointment of the late President McKinley. Mr. Richardson is one of the proprietors and has been for many years business manager of the Greenville News, which first applauded and afterwards bitterly assailed Tillman, learning among the first that the Editor had been elected to the position of senator after all. For a long time the Greenville News has been a consistent and powerful opponent of Tillman, and has been especially violent in the last year since its espousal of the McLaurin cause. Now Tillman holds up the appointment of Mr. Richardson as postmaster because of his paper's attitude. It is doubtful if the opposition will avail to defeat the nomination, since it is based on personal objection only, yet it is possible that it will, and such deference to senatorial prerogative is not without precedent. Senator Hill, of New York, was able to defeat the nomination of two of the most distinguished members of the New York bar for places on the supreme bench, because of his personal objection to them, both having fought his political interests. Tillman, however, is very different from Hill, and it is possible that he may not be shown the same consideration as the New York senator. This would not be regrettable, not only because the designated postmaster for Greenville is a very excellent fellow and would give the people real service, but also, because the practice of sacrificing good public servants to the interests of politicians through the much abused senatorial courtesy, should be broken. It is a bad business, without regard to the personality of its application.
