Latest From Flood District. Spartanburg special of Thursday to Columbia State: The conditions at the wrecked Clifton mills today are as satisfactory and encouraging as could be expected. All calls for relief are being promptly attended to by the authorities in charge and there is no reasonable dissatisfaction apparent. All efforts are now directed towards getting away from Clifton the idle operatives. Transportation is being furnished all who apply, but the difficulty is to gather up their household goods and get them on board the cars, as there are only a few wagons available for this purpose. The relief committee proposes to take up this feature of the work right way and as soon as the operatives realize that there is no use to remain at Clifton they will begin to seek and accept work elsewhere. As it is, mill men who have been there to employ hands for factories elsewhere have found a disinclination among the operatives to leave and some have given up, for the present at least, their efforts to get operatives from Clifton. When President Twitchell went to Clifton this morning he was importuned by the operatives who stood on the river banks as he walked from the ferry to the office. They begged him not to send them away; to let them stay at Clifton. Mr. Twitchleave since there is nothing for them to do there. He has been busy today arranging transportation details and holds out to the operatives no hope of on the same day, commencing at 12 work under six months. Lieutenant the court house, and kept open until 5 Hearn, U. S. A., today visited the scene with Congressman Joe Johnson. This afternoon he stated that in his opinion the situation can be well handled by the relief committees, but as which the trustees will recommend to a matter of abundant precaution he will leave at their disposal the carload of 4,000 army rations which arrived yesterday. An expert mill man who today went over the wrecked factories for the second time, said this evening Are YOU that he now believes that at least 40,-000 spindles can be saved from Nos. 1 and 2, and that by rushing work a mill with that equipment can be operated within six months. The destruction of No. 3 is so complete that corporation and the prospects of rebuilding cannot be known.

Look Before

You Leap!

TT goes without saying that the wise and successful business man in-tends to apply sound business principles to his every business transaction whether only a few cents or hundreds of dollars are involved. This principle applies to almost every transaction except the purchase of life insurance. When he has decided to insure he is just as liable to buy a poor policy in an extravagantly managed, reckless company, as a policy that will protect every interest in an economically managed, conservative company that has no other intention than to treat every policy holder fair and square both in prosperity and adversity. There is no reason in the world why every reader of the Enquirer should not have absolutely the best policy in the best company in the world, because I have demonstrated time and again in these columns that the Mutual Benefit is the best company and issues the best policy to be had. All that is ne-cessary for you to do in order to pro-tect your interests when you get ready to insure is to call at my office or write for proofs. In other words "look before you leap." I do not claim to be as "smart" as some insurance agents but have enough gray matter to know that unless I convince you that my wares are better for you than are those of the other fellow I will not get your application.
