

Humorous Department.

Where He Always Was Going. A well known Virginia clergyman, one-time president of William and Mary College, was married three times, and on each occasion the ceremony was performed by his brother, an even more renowned bishop. When the first marriage took place the bishop had to refuse a tempting invitation from an old friend, because—so the letter ran—"I am going up to Williamsburg on that date to marry my brother George."

The same friend happened to be on the train with him, years afterward, when he was traveling to the second ceremony. "I am going to marry my brother George," the bishop explained benignly, after the business of greeting was over. Again many years passed, and the same journey was taken once more for the same purpose. By a strange coincidence the identical friend ran into the bishop as he hurried through the station to their respective trains. "Where going, bishop?" the former sang out as they grasped hands and dashed by each other.

"I am going where I am always going," the answer came back ponderously, "to marry my brother George."—Harper's Weekly.

STRATEGY.—Patrick Brannigan had contracted to dig a well in the sandy part of the town, and he had dug down some forty feet when, on coming to work one morning, he found that the last twelve feet of the well had caved in and would have to be dug out again. He set down by the well to wait for his helpers, when a happy thought struck him. He arose, took off his coat, hung it up in plain sight, hid his tools, and walked away.

A few minutes later his helpers came, and finding Pat's coat and seeing that his tools were gone, came to the conclusion that their boss was buried under the fallen sand, and with the help of all the neighbors immediately set to work to dig him out. Not till all the fallen dirt was taken out did the men in the least suspect that they had been hoaxed into doing just what the boss was trying to dodge.—Harper's Weekly.

A TURN COAT.—The late Gov. Parsons of Alabama was one of those few southerners who espoused the Union cause during the civil war. After the establishment of peace he was rewarded for his fidelity by being made provisional governor of his state. At the time of secession, however, he was a member of the Alabama legislature, and, to the indignation of his southern friends who had elected him to office, he voted against secession. Soon afterward he wrote his wife that, as his supply of shirts was exhausted, he desired her to send him more as soon as possible. Mrs. Parsons, a zealous southerner, answered in a note remarkable for its brevity and point. "Without prelude or formality she wrote: 'You have turned your coat; you must turn your shirt.'—Philadelphia Ledger.

FAIR WARNING.—Mrs. Wilson's husband was often obliged to go to New York on business and frequently did not reach his home until the arrival of the midnight train. Mrs. Wilson had been in the habit of sleeping peacefully at these times without fear, but a number of burglaries in the neighborhood during one of her husband's trips to New York had disturbed her calm. On the night of his return Mr. Wilson was stealing carefully up the front stairs, as was his wont on such occasions, so that his wife would not be awakened, when he heard her voice, high and strained. "I don't know whether you are my husband or a burglar," came the excited tones, "but I am going to be on the safe side and shoot, so if you are Henry you'd better get out of the way!"—Youth's Companion.

ENCOURSED.—A popular after dinner speaker rose to respond to a toast. "Gentlemen," he said, "the unexpectedly flattering manner in which your toastmaster has introduced me this evening reminds me of a story which strikes me as being appropriate to the occasion. By the way, how many of you have heard the story of the Pennsylvania farmer and the young wolf he bought for a 'coon dog'? Will those of you familiar with it from having listened to it half a dozen times or more please raise their hands?" An overwhelming majority of his auditors raised their hands. "Thanks, gentlemen," he said. "I shall not inflict it upon you."

With their rapturous applause still ringing in his ears, he sat down. He made the hit of the evening.—Chicago Tribune.

HIS TOOTHPIECES.—Mr. Corson, owner of the sawmill, had his eye on every stick of timber in the county, and the owner of every poor little stump and grove had his eye on Mr. Corson and the rising prices of lumber. George Wales cut his thin squad of pines, trimmed the logs, and piled them in his front lot by the road. Then he waited for the time when he should accidentally be visible on the place and Mr. Corson should drive by. The encounter took place in due time. Mr. Corson rattled past in his wagon, took a sidelong look at the pile of logs, and called, "Say, George, don't you know it ain't polite to throw your toothpicks round the front yard?"—Youth's Companion.

News and Comment Clipped From Neighboring Exchanges. LANCASTER.

News, October 12: The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Cuthbert, of Charlotte, died at their home in that city Wednesday night, of meningitis, aged about 17 months. The remains were taken Thursday to Heath Springs, the former home of the parents, for burial. The fire alarm was sounded here Wednesday morning, about 8 o'clock, but it turned out no building was afire, only the burning out of a chimney at the residence of Mr. R. H. Riddle, in West End. . . . We have published some remarkable achievements by boys in cotton picking this season, and here are some extraordinary figures. Last Tuesday Frank Jack and Ernest Sims, sons of the late Henry J. Sims, of the eastern portion of the county, picked 1,561 pounds of cotton, Frank picking 532 pounds; Jack, 526, and Ernest, 503. The cotton was ginned at Mr. J. E. Bower's gin, and it made a bale weighing 522 pounds. . . . Manser Shaver, a lad about 16 years old, an orphan, met with a painful accident last Wednesday afternoon. His left hand was caught in the Hagins gin at Elgin and so badly crushed that amputation was necessary, the operation being performed by Drs. Poovey and Funderburk. All the hand was cut off except the little finger. . . . Ex-Auditor John A. Cook, now manager of the People's Supply company, and also secretary and treasurer of the Lancaster Publishing company, was successfully operated on for appendicitis Wednesday afternoon at the Pryor hospital in Chester. He was taken ill last Saturday, and went over to Chester Wednesday morning. His friends, who his name is legion, will be pleased to learn that he is getting along very nicely.

CHESTER.

Lantern, October 11: South Carolina Division of U. D. C. will hold their annual convention in Chester Dec. 3 to 5, 1907. Following are the officers: President, Miss Mary B. Poppenheim, Charleston; 1st vice president, Mrs. Reed Stony, Columbia; 2nd vice president, Mrs. W. L. Coleman, Johnston; 3rd vice president, Mrs. Julia K. Campbell, Chester; 4th vice president, Mrs. W. H. Fowler, Yorkville; recording Sec'y., Mrs. August Kohn, Columbia; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. P. Lynch, Cheraw; treasurer, Miss Mary McMichael, Orangeburg; auditor, Mrs. A. B. Hames, Jonesville; chairman historical committee, Mrs. R. D. Wright, Newberry; recorder, Mrs. Thomas W. Keitt, Clemson College; register, Mrs. E. C. Graham, Greenville. . . . Wednesday, the Rev. J. S. Mills, now of Due West, Mrs. Jane Mills Stitt, of Taylorsville, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bigham, of Wellridge, their son, Rev. J. M. Bigham, of Huntersville, N. C., and J. T. Bigham dined together with the three Misses Bigham on Columbia street. Seven of the group, children of brother and sister, grew up on adjoining farms on Little Rock Creek, and were intimately associated. . . . The younger days, before the family was broken, and had not all been together since. The others were related and had grown up as neighbors. In a sense, it was a meeting that recalled precious memories. . . . The Rev. J. H. Simpson, when in Charlotte a few days ago, had a little time to spare, and being in front of the mint, felt inclined to go in. After some conversation with the man in charge, he said, "You look and talk just like a man I know in Oklahoma," giving his name. The other replied, "That is my brother, and I returned from a visit to him only last week," and went on to tell about seeing Mr. Simpson's daughter and other friends. Mr. Simpson thereupon became more interested in the man and the report of his visit than in the gold in the mint. . . . A small blaze on the roof of Mr. R. G. Smith's house on church street caused some excitement this morning. The fire company responded promptly, but before they arrived on the scene the blaze had been extinguished. Only a small hole was burned in the roof. The Rev. J. H. Simpson, who was at Dr. McConnell's, ran with a ladder that happened to be at hand, and got some water, and with the help of a colored man, put out the fire. . . . Adjutant General J. C. Boyd has notified Capt. J. S. McKeown that he will be here on the 23rd inst. to look over the regimental rifle range. Invitations have been extended to Col. W. Lewis and Lieut. Col. J. R. Lindsay, of Yorkville, and Capt. T. E. Spratt, of Fort Mill, all of the first regiment, to meet General Boyd here and go over the proposed site with him. It is hoped that the regimental range of this regiment will be located at Chester. This is about the center of the regiment and is a very convenient point for the other companies to come here and practice. General Boyd and the other visitors will be met by a committee and taken over the proposed site for the range. The entertainment of these distinguished visitors will be made later.

GASTON.

Gastonia Gazette, October 11: There was a lively fox hunt on Crowder's place, the postoffice at Crowder Creek will be discontinued. All patrons of this office living north of the postoffice will be served by the carrier on route one from Gastonia. Those living south of the postoffice will be served by the carrier on route one from Bowling Green. . . . Ed Sheehan, the white man who Sunday night shot his wife at the Clara Mill, and then attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a knife, was taken to Dallas and committed to the county jail Wednesday. Constable J. Madison Kendrick took him next term of court for attempted murder. He is rapidly recovering from effects of his self-inflicted wounds. His wife is still suffering considerably but is improving and will, it is thought, recover. . . . Mr. W. Oates, of route two, Bessemer City, was in Gastonia, Wednesday, and paid the Gazette office a pleasant call. Mr. Oates tells of a rather remarkable experience he had two or three weeks ago. While engaged in roofing a house he found a live rattlesnake in a bundle of new shingles. It had one rattle and was not very large, but was very much alive. How long the snake had been confined between the shingles he did not know, though it is presumed the snake crawled in the bale after it was placed on the ground for use. . . . All of the $7,000 necessary for the construction of the new Pisgah Associate Reformed church has been subscribed and work on the building is scheduled to begin March 1st next. At that time it is expected that all the money subscribed will be in hand. The new edifice will stand near the site of the old church. It will be the most costly and the handsomest country church in Gaston county when completed, one of which the Pisgah congregation will have just cause to be proud.

WANTED THE GIBBETS.

An Incident of Revolutionary Days in South Carolina.

There are innumerable stories of Revolutionary days in Charleston. The old ladies used to tell with glee how, when the British were supposed to be coming home to dance with them, a message would go to the nearest cousins and friends and a supper be cooked. It might be only rice and bacon, but it was good to hungry men, declares Charleston's historian, Mrs. Ravenal. The dance and the feast would continue until the stars grew pale.

Often these merry makings were disturbed by the enemy, but there was always a negro or two on the watch, and the harsh note of the screech owl or the cry of the whippoorwill would give the alarm, then "partings in hot haste," a rush for the horses, a sharp scurry, a hot pursuit and perhaps a prisoner taken. The young men had odd adventures. One young fellow betrayed himself by his appetite. He was pursued and had taken shelter at Mrs. Motte's place, on South Street. She rolled him up in a carpet and, pushing it against the wall, told him to keep quiet until the enemy had gone and she could release him. Unluckily he heard through the open window his hostess giving directions to the cook about the chickens which were to be dressed for the dragons' dinner. He could not bear to be left out and thrust his head from the carpet chrysalis and cried out, "Keep the gibbets for me!"

The soldiers heard, and he was at once caught and carried off to repent at leisure of his indiscretion. "What do you mean by sitting out there fiddling in the face of death?" demanded Crockett of the rescued stranger. "Well, colonel," said the fiddler, "I am a student of human nature. When I found I had missed the ford and needed help, I set out to get it. I might have shouted myself hoarse and no one out there would have paid the slightest attention to me. But there was a man west of the Mississippi who wouldn't come running at the sound of a fiddle in the woods." "And he was right," said Davy, "for there were, the lot of us, our horses all of a lather, for running to satisfy our curiosity about that squeaking fiddle in this out of way place."—Youth's Companion.

NEW HUMAN NATURE.

Logic of the Man Who Fiddled in the Midst of a Flood. When Davy Crockett was on his way from his Tennessee home to Texas to fight for the new republic he rode overland with some chance friends from Little Rock to Fulton. One day they were startled by hearing the high notes of a distant violin playing a rollicking air. Putting spurs to their horses, the men hastened toward the sound and soon observed several riders running through the fields in the same direction. At last they came over the crest of a ridge in view of the river and beheld the fiddler seated in the middle of the flood in an almost submerged buggy playing as fast as he could shake the bow. "Hello, there! Turn back!" shouted the men who came through the field. "I can't," replied the fiddler. "But you've missed the ford. You'll drown!" "I've known that for half an hour." "What are you going to do?" "Sit here till you chaps come out and turn my horse the right way."

The horse was with difficulty keeping his footing and seemed about to be swept away. One of the men who had been attracted by the fiddling waded out and by a precarious way reached the ford and back to the bank, the passenger fiddling all the way and windling up with a merry jig. "What do you mean by sitting out there fiddling in the face of death?" demanded Crockett of the rescued stranger. "Well, colonel," said the fiddler, "I am a student of human nature. When I found I had missed the ford and needed help, I set out to get it. I might have shouted myself hoarse and no one out there would have paid the slightest attention to me. But there was a man west of the Mississippi who wouldn't come running at the sound of a fiddle in the woods." "And he was right," said Davy, "for there were, the lot of us, our horses all of a lather, for running to satisfy our curiosity about that squeaking fiddle in this out of way place."—Youth's Companion.
