A Chester Farmer Talks of an Event of the Long Ago. Editor Yorkville Enquirer. As Bill Arp would say, I have been ruminating. I recall that this is the fiftieth anniversary of the great hail storm that visited the western portion of York county, on Sunday night, the 16th of May, 1859. I think this was the heaviest hail that ever visited this section without any exception. Crops of wheat, oats, corn and cotton being totally destroyed. The hail was rafted in the hollows ten feet deep and covered with mud and leaves, remained for eight weeks or nearly; if not quite, through July.

I well remember the morning after the storm being at Jas. L. Guy's "Coln place," where the dwelling was blown down and two old white ladies were caught by the timbers, one being killed and the other so badly injured that she died in a few weeks. Do not imagine, because I remember this that I am an old man, for I was of very tender years then, being less than five years of age. then, being less than five years of age.

Of all the men living in that immediate section then, I do not recall that more than five or six are there now. Among them Messrs. J. L. Rainey, J. M. Sherer, J. P. Blair, W. J. Blair and our venerable friend, Andrew Hafner. I would like for you to look your files and republish the account of this storm, as doubtless some correspond-ent from there gave your paper an ac-Perhaps you can tell us whose washpot was carried by the flood from the spring, was it to the Atlantic ocean? The stands of cotton in this section The stands of cotton in this section are generally poor. A great deal of replanting having been done. Where proper judgment was exercised and the seed covered shallow, the stand is good, but where covered too deep it is very defective. I have long since learned that cotton seed under no circumstances should be covered more than one inch deep and generally one-but inch is deep enough. If covered than one inch deep and generally one-half inch is deep enough. If covered too deep the vitality of the plant is so much exhausted in getting out of the ground as to render it at best a puny plant, and if a heavy rain should fall in the mean time, the chances are very much against its ever getting up.

York County is unquestionably growing in prosperity. Our farms are being cultivated along intelligent lines. Lands that were supposed to be worthless four or five years ago are well terraced and prepared and the yield per acre is many times what it was. The value of real estate and farm lands is daily increasing. Our cities and towns are growing larger and larger. Our manufacturing enterprises are rapidly increasing in numbers and our old manufacturing enterprises are being remodeled and their production greatly increased. All around us we see improvements in every line of business.

The Management of The NATIONAL UNION BANK is determined that it shall at all times be well up to the front of the procession and well apace with the times.
