who was but a short distance away, and who had been attracted by her screams. Darby warned the two "not to betray him," she said. The witness to betray him," she said. The witness was put through a grilling cross-examination by the Hon. C. M. Efird, leading counsel for the defence, but she stuck to her story in the main, although it varied somewhat from what she had sworn to at the preliminary a week previous. The defense contended that it was a case of blackmail, growing out of the arrest of her son. Ralph Clarke, along with two other young men, for breaking into the store of Mr. M. E. Rutland, at Batesburg. In support of this contention they assertof Mr. M. E. Rutiand, at Batesburg. In support of this contention they asserted that, although the assault was alleged to have been committed on the 7th of February, the warrant was not issued until the 29th of May, more than three months afterwards. The warrant was her reason for not issued until the 29th of May, more than three months afterwards. The woman gave as her reason for not having the warrant issued earlier, that she was advised by her attorney to withhold the warrant. The next witness was Ralph H. Clarke, son of the woman in the case. He corroborated the statement of his mother. There were two other witnesses for the state. The defendant denied every allegation of the prosecution. He denied having seen her on the night in question. He stated that he had never touched the woman in his life. He stated that he was attending services at the Baptist church on Sunday evening, February 7th, at the time the alleged assault is said to have been made. The Rey. W. T. Hundley and the Rev. S. O. Cantey were put on the stand, and both testified that Mr. Darby was in the church from 7.30 until the services were concluded. A number of other witnesses corroborated their testimony.
