He thinks Poverty a Crime Bernard Shaw, a picturesque Irishman, who according to himself, has written greater plays than Shakespeare, has recently attracted considerable attention by some new pronouncements regarding money and poverty.

Instead of taking the Scriptural view that the love of money is the root of all evil, Mr. Shaw says the universal regard for money is the one hopeful fact in our civilization, the one sound spot in our social conscience.

It is only when it is cheapened to worthless for some and made impossibly dear to others that it becomes a curse. The crying need of the nation is not for better morals, cheaper bread, temperance, liberty, culture . . . but simply for enough money.
