Good Marksmanship.—Bill Jones was an eccentric character, a local justice of the peace in a South Caroling town, He was exceedingly tall-so attenuated, in fact, that but for his hat he would not have cast a shadow. One night a number of fellow bonvivants joined him in a symposium, and many mint juleps were consumed. One of the party unsteadily produced a revolver. It was accidentally discharged and a bullet struck Bill Jones in the leg.

UNCLE SAM'S PAY ROLL.

Coming to be an Enormous Burde

For Country to Bear. It is well that the people of this coun try should realize what a burden their government is coming to be. We know what vast sums have been spent and are being spent for army and navy and pensions, but we do not always realize how great has been the increase in the ordinary expenditures.

It was pointed out during the last campaign that almost 100,000 names had been added to the nation's pay stranger?' said the tough, hunching up roll during the administration of President Roosevelt. This involved an increase of salaries of $70,000,000. The crease was exceeded, the number of new employees being 22,000. And the "'Drat yer elephant!' he growled, 'I'll figures are still climbing. NEPTUNE CONQUERED.

Lusitania's Wave Would Have Crush

ed Smaller Ship. Was it a last despairing protest o Old Ocean when he lifted his giant hand in the blackness of the night of January 10, and smote the Lusitania blow which racked and splintered her lofty bridge and pilot house, 75 feet above the sea, and crushed down her forecastle deck and decks beneath, giving them a permanent depression of so very long ago, when the sea was the dals of his wrath and send his league long rollers across the deep, the proudhis bidding, if she did not indeed turn and run before the fury of the blast. Of late years, man, by virtue of his knowledge and mechanical skill, has building in ever-increasing lengths and breadths, and with such ceaseless enlargements of bunker and boiler-room: he has so multiplied horse-power, and has called to his aid so many ingenious contrivances for speed and strength and safety, that old Neptune must for many a decade past man hats, which caused lots of fun for have foreseen the humiliating day when the bold sea voyager in his hand, and thus slowly shalt thou go." Following the hint of the ultimate victory which was supplied by the Lusitania and Campania, came that wonderful ship of the Hamburg-American line, the Deutschland, and the even larger and more powerful Kaiser Wilhelm and Cecilie of the North German Lloyd: and with the advent of each giant vessel man's growing mastery of the ocean was shown in ever-increasing speed and a closer approximation regularity of transportation on land. It was reserved for the steam turbine to supply the last mechanical device which was to give to man in his agelong struggle with the elements a weapon of complete victory; for in the combination of size and strength and power afforded by the latest turbine liners there has been developed a ship which has demonstrated its ability to drive at full speed and all day long into the heaviest seas that the stormy North Atlantic could pile across her path. The writer will not soon forget a nota from a gale to a full hurricane, aver aged for the twenty-four hours a speed of between twenty-six and twentyseven land miles an hour. During the tumult of that tremendous struggle, ten-ton anchors were shifted, it is true and steel derrick booms were swunz athwartship and twisted as if the were no stouter than a boy's tin whistle. Yet the ship steamed into port practically intact, and with not a rivet started in the whole fabric of her hull. Ordinarily a transatlantic liner will drive her way against a westerly gale, voyage after voyage, with no more serious hurt than the bending of a stanchion or the breaking of a pane of glass in the pilot house. But, once in a long while, there may come a combe riding down one wave, with her bow buried deep, and her forecastle deck awash, just as her stem drives into a

The ship itself was running at half rom 12 to 13 knots. When the mass struck the breastworks and pilot house. the stout steel framing between the windows was forced several inches into the pilot house. The sea swept on ward, driving a piece of the woodwork bodily through a hardwood casing containing a portion of the fire-fighting apparatus. The quartermaster was borne back against the bulkhead behind, carrying in his hands the wheel. which was torn from its standard. The mass of water then swept into the officers' wardroom and staterooms, filling them breast high with water-and this, be it remembered, at an elevation of 75 feet above the normal sea level. Now, since the ship is some 80 feet broad at this point, and the distance from the pilot house to the stem must be at least 150 feet, and since, in order to roll over the pilot house, the waves must have ben some 35 feet in height. at least 4.000 tons of water must have swept over the forecastle deck-as any one with a pencil and pad may easily figure out for himself. It cannot be ossible that the wave fell with much vertical impact, or the decks would have crumpled up like an egg-shell; but the momentum was sufficient to crush the forecastle deck and the three decks below a few inches down into the body of the ship, leaving them with a permanent set. Dramatic evidence of the enormous stresses to which the ship was subjected is afforded by the stanchions and solid steel bulkheads below the deck; which, in some places, buckled out of the vertiabove. Had the Lusitania not been cal as they yielded beneath the load built of special strength to stand such buffeting as this, the results might easily have been very serious indeed;

Those Who Think Congress Can Do Anything Might Test Theory. In spite of the recent extraordinary

econciliation between this country and Great Britain, there are certain things British which we cannot endure with complacency and which must be ended or amended. We refer to the British sparrow, long domiciled on our shores. Like the negro, he came unasked, by force in fact; but, unlike the negro, he has prospered out of all proportion to the good of the rest of the community. The English sparrow is a pest. He must be destroyed.

Uncle Sam has taken up the matter in great earnest. He has published a book, which is entertaining and instructive. It also contains some unconscious humor. We should think a comic opera might be based on this book. Imprimis we remark that the several inches? For time was, and not British sparrow was brought to this country for the definite purpose of eatundisputed master of the ship, and ing up the caterpillars which were dewhenever Neptune saw fit to open the stroying the trees in city parks. He eats cherries and spoils apples and other fruits He destroys blossoms just at the fertilizing period, and he drives away other large, but less courageous birds who are wholly beneficial in their aspects. In short, the sparrow is a liar. a thief, a burglar, and a murderous

He must be gotten rid of at all costs. and Uncle Sam tells us many ways to do it: Shoot him, destroy his nests, trap him, poison him, eat him. He should not be eaten after he has been poisoned, but at all costs, get rid of him. The damage he does is estimated at so many millions that, if incorporaed, the sparrow would be one of the greatest and most odious trusts. We are much impressed with the advice and counsel given in this monumental work. As we understand it, a mental work. As we understand it, a my body. Upon learning of Doan's man who devotes all his time and Kidney Pills, I obtained a supply and money to ridding his yard of sparrows will thereby reduce the number considerably, but it seems impossible to annihilate them if we are to pay any attention to the meat trust, the Standard Oil trust and a few others.

We think the sparrow should be abolished simply by legislation. Some people seem to think that congress can do anything by flat of law. Here is a chance to test the theory.-Philadelphia Inquirer.
