

Humorous Department.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

One of the old time editors of the south, sometimes imbibes too freely of Kentucky's famous product, and when he so refreshes himself he forgets to go home at a reasonable hour, and sometimes awakes at 3 a. m.

Who's there? The genial colonial tried to straighten himself and answered authoritatively: "It's your husband, madam. Whom were you expecting?"

Another time he was in the same happy mood and returning home at an early morning hour, wondered what he would do to explain his delay to a wife. Passing through the hall he had a glad thought. He gathered under himself an umbrella from the hall tree. Proceeding upstairs he sat down upon the foot of his wife's bed and raised the umbrella over him.

Awakened suddenly, she met with this bewildering apparition and exclaimed in horror: "What are you doing? Are you mad?"

"I'm merely waiting for the coming storm, my dear," Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

A Test For "Quality Folks."—No observer of men is half so shrewd and accurate as the old-time negro. He knows "quality folks" by sight; searches them out by a mysterious intuition, and never goes wrong. An adventurer may happen along and deceive the master; but the cook and the butler shake their heads and mumble to themselves.

"Dat sho' is one fine gent'um," remarked Uncle March, smacking his lips in pleasant retrospect; "he jes' handed me de glass to help myself. He looked out de window whilst I was 'mountin' my drink." True, the gentleman knew that Uncle March would dislike to appear hogwash, and yet would hate to set down a deceiver of good whisky. So the kind-hearted giver turned his head and thus relieved the old negro's embarrassment—an act which was in itself the essence of comprehension and the pink of courtesy.—Everybody's.

Judge Knew Her Worth.—The native with a stogie met the native with a pipe. "Howdy, Zeb?" quoth the stogie native. "Hear 'bout th' fuss down to th' court house?"

"Nope," drawled the man with the pipe. "What was it about?" "Why, Jim Simpson has been suing Abner Haylow for alienation th' affections of his wife, an' Judge Musgrave told th' jury to bring in a verdict for six cents damages, 'cause he thought that was all the damage was worth to Jim. An' Jim's wife got mad an' threw a chair at th' judge, an' he had her arrested an' put in th' cooler."

"But didn't fudge her a leetle too far when he fixed her value so low?" "Not at all, not at all. 'Yee, he was her first husband."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Boy Wanted.—A certain business man of Rochester is of opinion that he has an exceedingly bright office boy, and nothing pleases him better than to tell how he acquired the youngster's services.

A notice had been posted in the man's shop window, which read as follows: "Boy wanted about 14 years."

A lad of that age, with little that was prepossessing in his appearance, came into the office and stated that he had read the notice.

"Do you think you would like to have the position?" asked the merchant, patronizingly, as he gazed at the lad over the rim of his spectacles.

"Yes, sir," was the reply; "I want the job, but I don't know that I can promise to keep for the full fourteen years."—Lippincott's.

Another Tradition Exploded.—Two Englishmen were resting at the Red Horse Inn at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a low, tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born."

"That's his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend, exhibiting equal surprise and called a waiter, who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"Ton my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously, "I thought he was born in a maner!"—Success Magazine.

Speaking With Authority.—One of the briefest and no doubt one of the most sincere addresses ever delivered on the subject of capital punishment was made in Worcester county, Mass., more than two generations ago.

A notorious character by the name of Charles James, standing on the gallows with the noose properly adjusted, was asked before the cap was drawn over his face if he would like to say a few words.

"Ladies and gentlemen—beg pardon, gentlemen," he said. "Standing where I do, I am unalterably opposed to capital punishment."—Everybody's Magazine.

A Plausible Excuse.—Another story credited to the late Justice Brewer is that while he was judge in a minor court he was presiding at the trial of a wife's suit for separation and alimony. The defendant acknowledged that he hadn't spoken to his wife in five years, and Judge Brewer put in a question.

"What explanation have you," he asked severely "for not speaking to your wife in five years?"

"Your honor," replied the husband, "I didn't like to interrupt the lady."—Everybody's.

The New One.—The gentleman cautiously opened his front door at 2 a. m., but notwithstanding the wife of his bosom hears him.

"What in the world kept you out so late?" she demands.

"Well, my dear," he explains laboriously, "Patterson took me for a flight in his new biplane and the steering gear got out of order, and we had to coast down eight miles from town and wait for a trolley to bring us in."—Chicago Post.

FROM NEIGHBORING EXCHANGES

News and Comment About Things In and Around the Country. Gaffney Ledger, August 12: Rev. E. G. Ross, pastor of the Victor and Franklin churches in Greer, has received a call to the McLenore Avenue Baptist church of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Ross will probably accept. Mr. Ross is a Gaffney boy, who has overcome obstacles and ploughed his way through the hard ground of excommunication to the more fertile field of fellowship with God through sheer force of character.

The Ledger is pleased to see his efforts rewarded and his worth recognized, and he confidently expected to hear of his mounting still higher rungs on the ladder of progress. In a fast but interesting game, Gaffney defeated Rock Hill last Friday by the score of 9 to 7. The game was won by the hard hitting of the Gaffney boys.

It was singularly fortunate for Candidate Blessie that the only case tried before Mayor Little this year for violation of the whisky law should fall on the very day that he was in town. It gave him an opportunity to prove that prohibition in Cherokee is a farce according to "Doc" Blessie's way of thinking. "Doc" let everybody know that whisky happens to own a foot or two of land so crazy about the prospects of the town and ask absurd prices for what they have to sell. Be content with a reasonable price and thus encourage the buying of property by outsiders. Over in the third ward is a section called "Hell's Half Acre," the derivation of the opprobrious appellation arising from the tough character of the inhabitants. The police had reason to suspect that even individuals were unlawfully dealing in liquor and a trap was set and the unsuspecting walked right into it. They were tried, convicted and sentenced to pay fines or work on the chaingang. They were given until yesterday morning to raise the cash and being unable to do so, Policeman Lloyd Austell yesterday escorted all the men to the chaingang, and the women were turned loose with the understanding that they take up their abode elsewhere. Thus it is that a very undesirable citizenship is removed from our presence, at least for the present.

Rock Hill Herald, August 12: Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Kaykendal have returned from a visit to Winnsboro, Ridgeway and Yorkville. Mrs. Sam Mitchell and children left Friday for their home in Corsicana, Tex., after a visit to Mr. W. H. Mitchell. The following left this morning to join the party leaving Spartanburg today for a trip to Canada over the C. C. & O. railroad. Stops will be made at Cincinnati, Detroit and other important cities, and a delightful trip is anticipated. Those going from his party are: Messrs. V. B. McFadden, Roy McCreedy, and Mrs. Lottie McCreedy, and Mrs. Moore. Walter, the 1-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brice of the city, got hold of a can of kerosene oil and drank some of its contents. Drs. Carothers and Biggers were summoned at once and they attended the child. As we go to press, the child continues to be quite sick. Mr. Brice, the father of the child, who is out of town, has been telegraphed for and he is expected in the city this afternoon. On Thursday on his farm at Smith's Turnout, Mr. T. L. Johnston gave a picnic, and barbecue to the tenants on his farm. About 150 "hands" of men and women were present and all enjoyed immensely the fine soup, barbecued beef and mutton provided for them. The feast was finished in true banquet style with cigars. On the same day also, Mr. J. M. Cherry gave a picnic and a fish fry at the river to his tenants. Mr. Cherry's generosity made the day a happy one for the good crowd which was in attendance. Mrs. Samuel W. Jackson of Newport, celebrated her 72nd birthday on Friday, August 5th, with a splendid dinner. The children and grandchildren present numbered thirty-three. All of her children were present except Mrs. L. H. Dye, who was absent on account of the sickness of Mr. Dye. J. Edgar Ross, the real estate merchant of Rock Hill, was fortunate enough to be a guest. The in-laws were all present except Mr. J. P. Hyndman of Atlanta, and Mr. L. H. Dye of Newport. It was quite a happy reunion. Everything passed off pleasantly. Conversation, music and a fine dinner were the main features of the occasion. Mrs. Jackson and all of her children and grandchildren look healthy and strong, having the appearance of bright prospects for many more happy reunions. The entire family show prosperity and contentment. The Good Master seems to be smiling nicely on this good lady and her flock.

Chester Lantern, August 12: The county fair, which opens in this city on the 14th inst., has already been published in the Lantern, is being talked all over Chester and adjoining counties and people are already commencing to get ready to spend the entire three days of the fair in Chester. Farmers from all sections have indicated their intention of having exhibits of farm, poultry and stock on exhibition and a splendid showing of the wonderful resources of Chester is going to be the result. The horse races to be conducted during the week of the fair, which has accepted the position of instructor in bookkeeping and commercial law in Schickler's Business College, Mr. Bailes is another of Lancaster county's young men who is making good in life in a marked degree. A homicide occurred in the eastern portion of the county, in Buford township, Tuesday evening, the parties being colored. John Fraser was shot and almost instantly killed by John Wright, a Baltimore resident, who was held Wednesday by Coroner King. The verdict of the jury charges Wright with the killing and his brother, Nime Wright, as being an accessory. The Wright brother came to town Wednesday and voluntarily surrendered to the sheriff. They were lodged in jail, where they now are. The dead man was a son of Lum Fraser and was about 35 years old. He leaves a family. The parties charged with the killing are both young men. The facts as reported here are that Fraser was returning from church when he was shot by the Wrights in the road. The shaft of his buggy struck Nime, tearing his shirt. After exchanging some words, Nime drew his knife, whereupon Fraser got out of the buggy and picked up a rock, and as he did so, was shot by John Wright. "Pike," a writer in Thursday's issue of the Chester Reporter, on the subject of the Wrights, says: "But Lancaster county is the best school lesson of the good roads law of any county I know of. Some four or five years ago a traveled over a considerable number of miles of the Lancaster county roads. All the northern and western sections of the county are hilly, and for the most part composed of clay soil. At that time the roads were fearfully bad, and the county had no chain gang and were hiring their convicts to Chester county. The people of the county got tired

GOOD ROAD CHEAP.

Dragged Across Iowa at Three Dollars a Mile.

Any man who can transform an Iowa mud road to a nearly perfect highway, 380 miles long, at an estimated cost of building and maintenance for the first year of $3 a mile, has grasped a new idea in the matter of road building. That the road from Council Bluffs to Davenport is a success and is commanding the attention of the entire country and Canada is shown not only by its splendid condition, but by the enormous mail which pours in upon the secretary of the River-to-River Draggod road, which is Mr. Eichinger's official designation without pay. Once Eichinger hit upon the township unit, he promptly proceeded to interest the influential men of the county in the project—farmers, bankers, automobilists, school teachers, clergymen, merchants, county and city officials, all were pressed into service. Gov. Carroll appointed commissioners for each county, every one of whom received a commission bearing the great seal of the state, with a lot of ribbon, and all together an imposing document. And these men worked without pay. Upon a diplomatic hint the townships of a county through which the road passed were formed into an organization like a company of infantry, with the Special River-to-River Draggod Road commissioner as captain. He had his squads strung out along the road, and used the word from Secretary Eichinger, started them to work dragging the highway. The haughty owner of an automobile, performer, hitcher or drag behind his car and got to work. It did not take long to establish the fact that a motor car could drag after a rain from eight to ten miles of the highway in an hour, thus leaving the road in excellent condition.

When the feminine portion of the community discovered that the draggod road meant more frequent trips to town, more visitors and lots of touring cars whizzing by, they spurred the male laggards. Roaddragging parties became the vogue for the Missouri to the Mississippi. The old time luxury by ride, formerly a Sunday luxury, became an every-day occurrence. The farmer and his family started to talk motor-cars—and before they realized it they bought one. More than 8,000 cars have been sold in the state this spring. Up to date 17,000 automobiles have been licensed by the state.—Harper's Weekly.

A Funny Proposition. Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his life is spent in one continuous round of contradictions and misunderstandings by the balance of our species. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up; in his duties he is a fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a small chump he is a thief, and then law raises the devil with him; if he is a poor man, he is a poor manager and has no sense; if he is rich he is dishonest, but considered smart; if he is in politics he is a grafter and a hypocrite; if he stays away from his duties he is a sinner and damned; if he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy.

When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him—before he goes out they all want to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age he is simply living to save funeral expenses. Life is a funny road, but one all like to travel.—Inland Farmer.

Swoning in its time was as complex and difficult an art as courting. The maiden of 1855 practiced it assiduously in secret, beginning with easy falls upon a mattress and ending with sensational and hazardous collapses among the unsightly ceramics and antimacassars of those times. It was not sufficient merely to tumble in a heap. One had to do so gracefully and yet, imply, carefully and dramatically. The art in its higher forms involved an almost complete cover over the lungs and capillaries. The truth, unacknowledged sooner, ceased to breathe and turned a deathly white, simulating the symptoms of syncope in every detail. It was realistic and thrilling and it loosed a storm of pity, with lightnings of love in the masculine heart.

But no more! Swoning has gone the way of the water under the bridges. The modern damsel never swoons. She is too lazy, we suppose to master the trick. Instead she encourages her nose and forehead in shells of talcum and pads her scalp with the sweet cream of the world to enhance his arms.—Baltimore Evening Sun.

Chester special of August 10, to the meeting of Old Purity Church society was held today at the rendezvous of the society, two miles south of Chester. President R. A. Love in the chair. An interesting address dealing with matter relative to the early settlement of this section was delivered by Dr. G. W. Wright, an honored descendant of John Wright, who located here in 1768, and who, with numbers of his kindred and friends coming soon afterward served in the patriot army in the war of the Revolution. The society was organized in 1802, its objects are to preserve and memorialize to gather and preserve any incidents that may refer to the people of this region in the earlier days and to preserve from injury the large graveyard adjacent to Old Purity church, which was burned some years ago. Educational advancement is likewise one of the objects of the society and its friends, a new and improved school building having been erected near the church. The next scholastic session will open tomorrow with T. J. Irwin, a graduate, 1910, of Erskine college, as president; Fred Walker, second vice president; C. McAllister, secretary; J. K. Henry, treasurer. R. A. Love, John C. McAfee, C. O. McAllister, R. L. Stroop and W. H. Walker, trustees. A historical committee of three was appointed. Rev. H. M. BEST OF SEVEN

Mr. J. J. Pittner, Agent. Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Hoopston, Illinois. Dear Sir:—I was much surprised this morning to receive from you a check for $41.80 as a special dividend on my $20.00 policy which I hold in your company. Last March I received my regular dividend of $17.00 and thought that was liberal enough, and was perfectly satisfied, but this addition of $14.80, making a total of $31.80 this year, is certainly most satisfactory, and confirms my conviction that the Mutual Benefit is absolutely a mutual company in fact as well as in name, and that I made no mistake when I selected it nine years ago.

At that time there were seven special policies, called to sell me insurance, and after I had listened to all of them while they explained their different policies, I selected the Mutual Benefit without the aid of a special agent. There are a few larger companies than yours, but they have more irregularity on their books perhaps, but in my judgment it would be hard to find a more conservative, careful, better managed company, or one that produces better results for its policy holders than the old reliable Mutual Benefit of Newark, New Jersey.

I can heartily recommend it to any one, and wish you unlimited success in your solicitations. Yours very truly, Dale Wallace.

There are today about 180 legal reserve "old line" companies seeking to insure the lives of the people of the United States, as against about 50 ten years ago, and of this number less than 50 per cent. are doing business, and had it been possible for Mr. Wallace to have examined the records and contracts of all of them, his decision would have been the same, as that of other men who are intelligently seeking the best company, the best contract and the lowest cost. There are scores of citizens in York county, who have secured policies in the Mutual Benefit during the past 15 years, who endorse all that Mr. Wallace has said.

SAM M. GRIST, Special Agent.

DECLAY OF SWOONING.

A German baroness, haled into court in Cincinnati recently, to answer various allegations of her American husband, "promptly swooned" when he refused to speak to her. The fact speaks eloquently of the hankeringness of the German aristocracy. Swoning has been out of fashion in America for thirty years. Only during intervals, such as the coming of the mail or the arrival of a dear old grandmother who still practices the ancient art. It was abandoned by the generality of American women in the year of 1879, which also saw the passing of curl papers and the beginning of that wave of iconoclasm which has since exterminated the haircloth sofa, the tidy, the novels of "The Duchess" and "Go-dy's Lady's Book." But among the noblesse of Prussia, it appears, swooning is still a recognized weapon in every lady's emotional arsenal.

There is always something romantic and melancholy about the institutions and customs of the fripperies and superstitions of other days. One cannot help feeling a kindly interest in the ancient who clings to them and in the reactionary who seeks to revive them. The paleozoic granddam who insists that her ultimate descendants be dosed with chamomile tea, sweet spirits of nitre and sulphur and molasses, as she was herself in her remote youth and the children of Noah before her, is an assassin perhaps, but all the same it is agreeable to observe her reverence for the antique. So to one smiles indulgently upon the doddering oldster who clings desperately to his scarlet medicated linings, his lavender hat, his fish and shell, and his fear of lingering twilight passions. The world as a world would be far happier if it were not so eager to stop rattles with the icons of yesterday.

Swoning in its time was as complex and difficult an art as courting. The maiden of 1855 practiced it assiduously in secret, beginning with easy falls upon a mattress and ending with sensational and hazardous collapses among the unsightly ceramics and antimacassars of those times.
