The Smell of Imagination.-At certain northern Chatauqua gathering last summer a lecturer, at the opening of his address, came to the fron of the platform and took a small vial from his pocket.

"My friends," he said, "before I begin my address, I wish to test the ventilation of this auditorium. I am going to pour out this oil of peppermint When the odor reaches you raise your hands, so that I may see how rapidly

He emptied the vial, and almost in stantly several hands on the front benches went up; then farther back the hands began to go up by the dozens, until at last the people in the last seats caught the odor, and raised their

The lecturer thanked his auditors and went on with his address. When he had almost finished, and was speaking of the effect of the imagination on our senses, he paused, and said with smile that it was only clear water he had poured out of his vial.

The audience had been caught neatly that even those who had held up their hands joined in the laugh. But one illiterate fellow, whose hand had gone up more promptly and emphatically than any other, did not quite understand.

"What they laughin' at?" he asked audibly, of the man sitting beside him. "Why," explained the man, "you did not smell peppermint at all; it was only imagination."

"Well," said the other, "I knowed i was something that smelled mighty strong."-Youth's Companion.

Hot Shirt and Cold Beans .- Mr Fussy Dresser made it a point of pride that he never had less than a hundred shirts in his wardrobe, says the New York Sun, and every one of them with his monogram embroidered on the sleeve. WIFE KILLED BY SLANDER Was Driven to Her Grave by False

Roosevelt's libel suit against a Michigan editor brings back memories of other presidential candidates to whom the gods have been less kind in this regard. Slander, like death, loves a shining mark, and there have been few of our presidents, from Washington down, who have been able to escape its slimy fingers. But perhaps the most pathetic case of all is that of Andrew Jackson, whose wife was literally driven into the grave by the false stories circulated by her husband's enemies. Mrs. Andrew Jackson was laughter of a Tennessee pioneer, Col. John Donelson, who came from Virginia in 1779, floating down the Holston and Tennessee rivers and up the Ohio until he reached the present site of Nashville. His daughter, Rachel, a black-eyed child of 12, was with him, and the Donelsons, accustomed to all the luxuries of Virginia, settled down to life in a log cabin. A few years afterward they were living on a plantation in Kentucky, a

The story of the Jacksons' home life in Tennessee is a delightful one. Mrs. Jackson, having found a haven at last for her troubles, blossomed out like a thirsty wild flower after a rain, finding the keenest delight in all the simple pleasures of the rural home. Those were the days of lay. home. Those were the days of lavish hospitality, and the Jackson plantation was the centre of neighborhood gayeties.
