

Innocuous Department

Try This Plan.—"Miss Willing," began the young man as he wiped the perspiration from his brow, "are you fond of stories?"

"If they are new, Mr. Woolby," replied the fair maid, "I simply don't care for them."

"But the one I was going to tell you, Miss Willing, is not new," said the young man. "It is, I might say, Miss Willing—or, Clara—the old, old story, but—"

"Oh, never mind, George," she interrupted. "Even if it is a chestnut, I'm sure I never heard of it. Go on please!" — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

When Bills Don't Count.—Having made his payments for Liberty bonds, warrent, rent, coal, gas, and groceries, the poor man was broke. "But he needed winter clothes, so he compromised by digging through the closet and unearthing a heavy vest that belonged to a winter suit he had worn some years ago. He brushed the vest off and felt in the pockets.

Eureka! A discovery! In the inside pocket of the vest was a roll of bills amounting to $123. And not one of them was recognized. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

New Pet Words.—"See that man over there? He's a bombastic ass, a wind-jammer nonentity, a conceited humbug, a parasite, and an encumbrance to the earth."

She—"Would you mind writing all that down for me?"

He—"Why in the world?"

She—"He's my husband, and I should like to use it on him some time." — Tit-Bits.

Just Missed Perfection.—When Mrs. Langtry was at the summit of her beauty and fame, she met at a dinner an African king who was visiting London. She did her best to please the dusky monarch and evidently succeeded, for he said to her as they parted: "Ah, madam, if heaven had only made you black and fat, you would be irresistible." — Boston Transcript.

He's a Failure at Either Game.—"I hope that Wilhelm has not decided to take up politics," mused Senator Sorghum.

"Why?"

"Because a military man can be definitely disposed of, but a politician never quits." — Washington Star.

A Harder Thing.—"How are you getting along in the stock market?"

Green—"Well, I'll tell you. I traded a lot of money for experience, and now I'm trying to reverse the process." — Jersey City Journal.

Sure Sign.—"And what did you say the patient did," asked the doctor, "when you ripped off the dressing?"

"Swore," doctor!" exclaimed the nurse. "He swore frightfully!"

"Did he have any money?"

FACTS ABOUT NITRATE.

Supply Tied Up Last Year on Account of Army Requirements. Bernard M. Faruch, chairman of the war industries board, has given out the following:

Facts concerning the importation and use of nitrate during the war period, hitherto suppressed for military reasons, are herewith made public by C. H. MacDowell director of the chemicals division of the war industries board, for the purpose of clearing up certain misunderstandings which have existed.

In the fall of 1917 the congress appropriated $10,000,000 to be used by the agricultural department in importing nitrate of soda to be sold by them to the farmers at cost. This was later made a revolving fund. Under this the war industries board procured for the department of agriculture some 109,000 long tons of nitrate for shipment from Chile during the winter and spring. Owing to disturbed shipping conditions in the early spring, it was possible to bring in for February-March arrival the tonnage expected, and with the needs developed by the expected spring offensive of the Germans, it became necessary to divert to France a large tonnage of nitrate for manufacture of explosives in that country and for further increasing production of explosives in this country for use in France. This immediate need made it impossible for the department of agriculture to secure boats sufficient to bring in the full 190,000 tons so that $6,778 tons was actually imported in time for use by the farmers for spring planting.

Shortage Explained. Owing to the military necessity, publicity could not, of course, be given to the reason of the non arrival of the nitrate sold to the farmers, and this inability to deliver was the cause of considerable feeling on the part of users of nitrate of soda. The military necessity was the greatest one and the planters who were unable to get the nitrate were in this way contributing to the supply of explosives in France, which later led to the winning of the war.

The nitrate of soda situation in the United States up until about the first of August was a serious one, although every explosive and chemical plant was kept supplied with sufficient nitrate to maintain full operations at all times. This was done by drawing from government arsenals reserves and by transferring stocks from fertilizer manufacturers and other holders to plants when stocks were about exhausted. Owing to the shortage of nitrate, it was deemed wise to ask the importer to discontinue sales of nitrate to fertilizer manufacturers other than for the making of sulphuric acid, and after the first of July all consignments of nitrate arriving in the country sold to such manufacturers were commandeered by the ordnance department and turned over to munitions and chemical manufacturers. These contracts thus handled were made between the importers and the fertilizer people in the fall of 1917.

All Restrictions Removed. Immediately on the signing of the armistice, all restrictions on sales of nitrate to fertilizer manufacturers and agricultural users were concerned, so that there will be no difficulty in supplying the entire needs of the United States for agricultural use for spring planting.

Nitrate of soda is the foundation of smokeless powder and high explosives as well as for other needed chemicals and the purchase and importation of nitrate to the United States was controlled by the United States government through the war industries board in co-operation with the importers of the fertilizer industry. The material, the importers buying in Chile in times past. The government received their nitrate through the importers at cost and the profit charged by the importers to private users was controlled by the government so that uniform cost to all users was secured, this cost being based on the average monthly cost in Chile, plus the freight storage exchange, and other elements of cost.

A committee known as the nitrate committee of the United States was established in New York and a New York representative of the war industries board represented that board in the offices of this committee. Government needs for nitrate were increasing rapidly and the 1919 requirement would have been very large. During the entire period of the war all needed nitrate was secured and there was no let up in the manufacture of war materials depending upon this article.

AMERICANS AT COBLENZ. Germans Are Bringing in Airplanes and Motor Trucks. The proud fortress of Coblenz, in its long military history, writes a special correspondent of the New York World under date of January 1, never saw a scene such as yesterday, when in a huge aerodrome created by American huile on the plateau behind Fort Alexander, towering high above the Rhine, a commission of German aviators began the humiliating task of turning over 6,000,000 marks ($1,380,000) worth of airplanes, comprising 240 of the newest model Fokkers, to their American victors.

Under the terms of the armistice the Germans are forced to give a fifteen-minute trial flight in one aeroplane out of every twenty. In the presence of a large crowd of American flyers, Red Cross nurses, Y. M. C. A. entertainers and staff officers, Pilot Serg. Dunham, who boasts that he brought down Quentin Roosevelt, was forced to make trick flights despite a gale and German protests.

After an exhibition of trick flying, looping the loop included, he was charged to learn upon landing that he had flown only thirteen minutes and was compelled to do it all over again.

All Formalities Required. The ranking American flyer intimidated to the German commissioners that this was not a sporting but strictly a business proposition, and that all the formalities under the terms of the armistice must be lived up to.

Other German commissioners are here turning over millions of dollars' worth of motor trucks to the Americans. On a trip to the front the correspondent passed nearly a mile of German motor trucks within the American lines and awaiting inspection and an American tryout.

Brig. Gen. Winans of the 64th Brigade, 32d Division, has discovered and is setting up headquarters at Senec, Cannon King Krupp's idyllic hunting lodge near Eisenberg, not far from the Coblenz bridgehead. The lodge is surrounded by one of the finest game preserves in Germany, the forest abounding in boar, deer and other game. Herr Ungerling is in possession, and Gen. Winans would rather be his unbidden guest than Krupp's. The whole staff is enjoying the irony of camping de luxe on the cannon king's premises.

In Bridal Chamber. Gen. Winans occupies the Krupp "bridal chambers," resembling a sumptuous suite on a palace liner, while the lodge of the Krupp gamekeepers furnishes beds for the men of the brigade headquarters—the French call Winan's force "la brigade terrible."

Troops at the front in Germany are expecting to see some "action." They hear that the enemy has broken the armistice and that German patrols are advancing against the Americans? Such is the sensational, though purely hypothetical introduction to certain division orders, and the correspondents today found the generals on edge for an elaborate "Kriegspiel" and tactical manoeuvres at the bridgehead, which will begin almost immediately. Assuming the armistice to have been broken, the manoeuvres are showing how even remote contingencies would be met, and they will bring home vividly to the rank and file that peace treaties are yet unsigned. They will have the effect of maintaining the present magnificent field discipline of the American army of occupation.

MONEY RATIONING HINTED.

Federal Reserve Bulletin Says Method Inures Sound Economic Basis. A new era in American finance "replete with new and momentous problems demanding no less serious consideration than those of war," is predicted in the December bulletin of the Federal reserve board, made public last week.

Rationing of the financial resources of the country during the transition period, not widely differing from that required when the nation was at war; aid to foreign governments through the medium of the banks, in addition to that which may be required from the American government; prevention of inflation; limitation of industry to "those lines which may properly be called essential," and methods for absorption of war loans, were some of the suggestions made for securing a sound economic basis for the future.

With the termination of the war, the United States, in common with the rest of the world, is confronted with problems and needs growing out of reconstruction, but, in the opinion of the board, definite limits must be set to the requirements of public financing.

"The liquor capital of the country," the bulletin continues, "may for a long time to come be inadequate to meet the demands of the world, and some process of husbanding or rationing it must, therefore be applied during reconstruction, just as has been the case during the period of the war. The methods will not be the same, but will be closely analogous to those pursued during the war."

Attention is called to the fact that the Federal Reserve system is now in an exceptional position for influencing the distribution and use of banking credit upon economic basis.

Necessity for the reduction of loans on war paper is dealt with at length and direct absorption of the government bonds now carried by the banks through extensive popular saving is suggested as a means of creating new current wealth.

With the return of banks' obligations to normal liquidity and as commercial paper takes the place of notes and certificates of indebtedness, now making up a large portion of the Federal Reserve system assets, the bulletin says, prices will gradually work toward a normal and stable basis.

"Coincident with the reduction of domestic war loans," the bulletin says with reference to foreign aid: "There may probably be expected to develop a direct demand upon our banking resources for accommodation designed to facilitate the movement of goods to other countries. . . . From this time forward the bulk of our foreign financing will necessarily return to a peace basis and the service of our banks will lie in supplying the means of financing the movement of consumable goods to the foreign countries by which they are needed."

One of Our War Gains.

"When we count up our gains from a war which will cost us the flower of our manhood, we reckon a lesson in economy as one of our national assets. But abnegation is better than economy. It is the lesson, which of all others, is taught us by the first Christian, and now is the time to take it soberly to heart. Those are good words of Lloyd George's, spoken to a nation, which has made every sacrifice for freedom's sake: "Don't be always thinking of getting back to where you were before the war. Get a really new world. A new and artificial production, full of essentials, freely shared. We have been carrying too much cargo for a short and stormy voyage. Two of the cardinal virtues, prudence and temperance, combine to insure thrift; and where prudence and temperance are found, their nobler sisters, justice and fortitude, are close at hand. Christianity borrowed these cardinal virtues from paganism, which honored them for centuries, and built its finest civilization on their strong support. Their best fruit today is that voluntary austerity which Bacon says 'may be as well for a man's country as for the Kingdom of Heaven.'" — Henry Seldel Conby in the Century.

—W. Preston McAlhany, a large farmer of Branchville, was killed last Tuesday by a stray bullet. A new war hero, McAlhany killed Barnes as he was falling. The statement is that McAlhany having learned that some of his hogs had been shot by Barnes, went to Barnes's house to see about it. As McAlhany called Barnes out, Barnes fired, striking McAlhany in the neck. McAlhany returned the fire, striking Barnes in the abdomen. McAlhany died almost instantly and Barnes died within a few hours.

A YORK INTERVIEW

Mr. Brian Tells His Experience.

The following brief account of an interview with a York man three years ago, and his sequel, will be read with keen interest by every citizen.

J. M. Brian, proprietor of grocery, Lincoln St., York, says: "About two years ago when I was in Greenville attending court, sitting on the bench for so many hours, brought on a mighty severe pain across my back. I got Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Soon my back was well and strong and my kidneys were all right. I too and Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me in that case, too, relieving the pains in my knees and left leg. Doan's certainly are a splendid remedy."

LASTING RESULTS

Mr. Brian gave the above statement May 14, 1914, and on February 25, 1918, he said: "It still gives me great pleasure to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for they have cured me of kidney trouble. I am glad to confirm my former statement."
