Paragraphs That Are of More Especial Interest to Women

Sport Garments. Sport dresses for southern wear and for the coming spring...

Albatross has been revived as a smart dress fabric, and very charming are the youthful dresses for girls...

Taffeta frocks for growing girls are a midseason mode. Many of these are made with waist-length sleeves...

Faille silk, mentioned so frequently now as being much in evidence for women's hats for spring...

Brilliant in color are the midseason scarfs and sweaters that, being so effective, well surely have a strong influence upon the modes that will soon be shown for spring and summer.

Sweaters of fiber silk, it is predicted, will be in great demand for spring wear. Models of this fabric already seen have collar, belt and cuffs of brushel wool, Angora or wool crocheted bands.

Pique binding on colored chambray is an effective combination used for some very practical and pleasing little dresses for little girls.

Double-faced ribbons in two colors and ribbon in two or more colors about an inch to an inch and a quarter wide are being used extensively for sashes with long loop ends and as streamer trimming to give a smart color touch to dresses of somber or delicate coloring...

Long waistlines, panels front and back to give a princess effect, hip fullness and circular overskirts showing just about an inch of the tight foundation skirt—these are some of the most prominent style lines in spring dresses.

Spring models in smart dresses show an almost absolute departure from the extremely short sleeve, the sleeve cap effect. New dresses show elbow length and waist length sleeves almost entirely.

Effective patterns in printed satens have been employed for new blouses of the mannish shirt style and are included with assortments of tailored blouses developed in pongee, wash silk and mannish cotton shirtings.

Chicken in Oranges. Roast a fine chicken in the usual way and put it aside to cool. Then cut eight small rounds from the breast, remove the rest of the meat and chop it fine. Pound this meat well, season with salt and pepper, add half a cupful of thick white sauce and rub the whole through a sieve...

Stawod Duck With Turnips. Truss two small or one large duck the same as for roasting, and partly roast it in a hot oven. Let cool, untrussed, and cut into neat joints. Pour two cupfuls of brown sauce into a stewpan, and the pieces of duck and three turnips, peeled and quartered and previously fried in a little hot fat. Season with salt, pepper and paprika, add half a cupful of apple juice and simmer for twenty-five minutes. Serve hot garnished with toasted bread croutons. A few stoned olives may be added if liked.

Chicken Fillets With Oysters. Remove the breast from a large chicken, take off the skin and flatten the meat. Cut each fillet in two, trim them a little, and place one oyster in the center of each slice of fillet. Season lightly with salt, pepper and lemon juice, and roll each fillet in oiled paper or a small paper bag. Place them in a greased pan, pour in a little stock or water and cook them in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Remove the paper, place the fillet on a hot dish and cover with a nicely seasoned white sauce. Serve hot.

Goose a la Chipolata. Draw and singe a large goose, clean and truss it. Stuff it with a nicely seasoned sausage forcement. Line a saucepan with slices of fat pork, add two carrots sliced, two onions sliced and a small bunch of parsley; lay the goose on the top of these, pour in hot stock or water to half its height, add one bay leaf and a blade of mace; bring to boiling point, then skin and simmer until tender. Place the goose on a hot platter. Strain the stock, remove all the fat from the top and boil for five minutes. Add one cupful of this stock to one cupful of brown sauce and serve with the goose. The bird should be garnished with braised chestnuts, glazed onions and cooked carrots.

Braised Goose. Truss a goose as for roasting. Put into a large saucepan two sliced carrots, one sliced turnip, one chopped onion, one stalk of celery diced, two peeled and sliced beets, one small cabbage shredded, one bay leaf, one blade of mace, and three shivers of fat bacon; place the goose on the vegetables, add one teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of pepper, and put in the oven with one tablespoonful of butter substitute spread on the top of the bird. Cook carefully, first over a hot fire to brown the surface, and then reduce the heat; baste frequently. When nearly ready remove the goose, cut into neat joints. Have ready half a cupful of brown sauce; into this add two tablespoonfuls of red currant jelly and half a cupful of plum juice; place the pieces of goose in this cook slowly until quite tender.

Serve the goose with celery sauce made as follows: Chop finely the white part of a bunch of celery; fry this in two tablespoonfuls of butter substitute for a few minutes without browning the celery, stir in one tablespoonful of flour and cook for eight minutes, stirring all the time; moisten with two cupfuls of stock or milk, stir until it boils, and cook slowly for thirty minutes. Strain, add salt and white pepper to taste, reheat and serve.

"The Favorite Child." "Which one do I love best?" you ask. Ah, that would be hard to tell. For loving, to me, is an easy task. And I may love them all too well; And though they may not be as comely and fair As many you have known. Yet the mother's eye sees beauty and grace In each child she can call her own.

When Jennie, our first born, came to crown The morn of our married life, How proud my husband was of the child; How proud he was of his wife! Together we watched her cunning ways, And both for her comfort toiled, And made so much of our baby girl, 'Twas a wonder she wasn't spoiled.

And then came Belle, with her sunny face, And her laughter so light and free; We thought there had never been before Such a frolicsome sprite as she; She made no trouble about the house, Was always so gentle and mild, And merry withal there was good excuse For loving the precious child.

But there was Anna, so weak and frail, She needed my constant care, And the older children were forced to be Content with a lesser share; And when, to quiet her fretful moods, I held her close to my breast, I fancied I loved her most; because I understood her best.

When, later on in my wedded life, God gave me my darling boy, I thought that my heart—my mother heart— Would burst from excess of joy! For the Father above had heard my prayer, And granted my soul's request; And my precious treasure, my only son! Oh, surely, I loved him best!

But other children compelled my care, And he must be set aside; And, oh, he fought for the baby's place And the comfort to him denied! Then the trouble came, and perchance I feel A little more tenderly.

For the youngest lamb of the flock, because So soon she was fatherless.

We make mistakes, and I may have failed In lessons I strove to impart; But I trust that my darling learned how dear The loyal soul from his chosen way Not easily is beguiled.

I cannot tell, though I'm often asked, Which is my favorite child.

Work of Taking up Bodies of Old Hickory Men Begun Dec. 2. Exhumation of the bodies of the American soldiers buried at Bony cemetery, all men of the 27th (New York National Guard) and 30th (Old Hickory, from Tennessee and North and South Carolina) divisions began Dec. 2, says a Paris dispatch. Of bodies in the cemetery about 900 will be returned to the United States and the remainder will not be disturbed. Bony is to be one of the four permanent cemeteries in France, and other bodies will be moved into the cemetery, but this work will not start until the work of sending bodies to America has been completed.

It is the first big battlefield cemetery to be reached by the army exhumation units. The district is so devastated that there is no shelter for the workers and a train had to be provided to make quarters for them. The winter weather has also set in and movable sheds have had to be built to shelter the men while working.

TWO TREASURERS SHORT

Alleged Discrepancies in Horry and Hampton Counties.

Two county treasurers are alleged to be short in their books, it develops from the reports made to state officers preparatory to the new terms of county officers, which start January 4th. The two treasurers who are "short" are those of Horry county, W. T. Bellamy, and Hampton county, W. A. Mason.

The shortage in the Hampton county books has been reported to state officials by the grand jury of the county, charging that the shortage amounts to $17,801. In the Horry case it is stated that the shortage is only of bad bookkeeping. Tax penalties for several years were not collected, and the amount has been charged against the treasurer. The matter has been reported to the grand jury of Horry county. The shortage is about $3,000.

All county officers take the oath of office January 4th, with the exception of the county superintendents of education, and they assume office in July. County officers are sending their bonds now to the attorney general's office for approval, as required by law, and for several days Assistant Attorney General Daniel has been busy going over these bonds.

Attorney General Wolfe is out of the city, and as yet he has taken no action in the Hampton county case, in which the grand jury asks that suit be brought against Treasurer Mason's bondsmen.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK FINE

President of Standard Oil Is Confident of the Future.

"What's the outlook for business?" The question was put to Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

"Good!" "When will business start to pick up?" "Soon—if we all stick to our tasks and pull together."

"What can the people, as a whole do to speed up the return of business to normal?" "Think of optimism, talk optimism, act optimism."

"Just how will the end of the present depression manifest itself?" "By a great wave of buying. The world is in need of many things. It simply is hesitating about investing."

"Why?" "Purchasers always are conservative about buying in a falling market."

"What will be the general effect of today's condition on America's future business outlook?" "American business is on too firm a foundation to be dislodged by the storm we're passing through."

"Just what will the world trade, for which this country is reaching out, mean to us?" "The spirit of the age is the spirit of commerce. And upon commerce rests the responsibility not only for the continuance of our nation's prosperity and welfare, but for the development and maintenance of beneficial international relations."

"What bearing will this have on peace or war in the future?"

"It is not too much to hope that commerce, which we have seen as the greatest of the causes which kindled strife, will become the great civilizer, the greatest of all our pacemakers."

"Whom do you include when you say 'commerce'?" "The smallest as well as the largest factors in our industrial and business life."

"But just how large a factor are the smallest?" "There is a place and there always will be a place for both little and big business—one is the complement of the other. But it's upon the large units of industry that the country's development depends."

"It is true as often stated, that British oil interests control all the world's potential oil supplies outside of the United States."

ABOUT THE FLU

One Attack Virtually Renders Person Immune Declares Health Service. Influenza attacks carry with them "a definite immunity to subsequent attacks, lasting several years" according to conclusions reached by the Public Health Service after intensive study in the homes where the disease was epidemic in 1918-1919.

"Inasmuch as the epidemic in 1918-19 affected so very large a proportion of the population," the statement by Surgeon General Cumming added, "there would seem to be reasonable ground for believing that even should it become prevalent here and there this winter it would not assume the epidemic proportion of the past two years, nor would it rage in such severe form."

Dr. Cumming pointed out, however, that there was no way of definitely foretelling "whether this winter will witness any recurrence of influenza in epidemic form." He added that it was "unfortunate" that the public took such interest in "spectacular epidemic outbreaks of disease" and was "so little moved" by the "daily occurrence of preventable death."

"Of the one and one quarter million deaths occurring in the United States annually at least 100,000 could easily have been prevented by the application of available medical knowledge," he said, pointing out that 15,000 annually died of diphtheria despite the existence of an effective anti-toxin which could have prevented "practically every" one of these deaths. "Another 10,000 deaths were due to typhoid fever, he said, in similar circumstances, and there were 400 "entirely unnecessary" deaths from small-pox.

GILT EDGE VALUES

Nothing in Entire List Equals Good Farm Land

YES, THERE HAS BEEN A LOT of speculation in Farm Lands, and as is always the case under such circumstances, some have made big money while others have lost it; but that has not affected the value of the property speculated in. Real Estate—good farm land—has always been the most exact measure of value known to civilization and it always will be. And now that the flurry of frenzied speculation has passed, you can take it from me or consult your own intelligence for assurance that Real Estate values remain unscathed. Listen to this from the Charlotte Observer of Wednesday, December 7th, about farm lands over in Mecklenburg county, right across the North Carolina line, which lands are no better than ours:

MECKLENBURG LAND. Mecklenburg does not seem to be figuring in the tales of the "tragedy" of the farm that have been heard around Washington in recent days. One day last week, a farm located 10 or 12 miles from Charlotte was sold for $45,000. Money a farm located six miles from town was put up at public auction at the courthouse door and was "knocked down" for $24,000. This was a cash sale, and as it was held open for a higher bid, it is probable that in the final transaction it will call for even a larger exchange of money. This farm consists of about 183 acres, only two or three of which front on the "main road," the balance being in a "cut-off." The portion of the land facing the improved highway brought $700 an acre. The average price offered for the farm in cash was about $200 an acre. It is just an ordinary country-side farm, with no modern improvements of note and no extra qualities about the soil. It was never suspected that there is a gold mine on the land, but bidders wanted this farm and were willing to pay what a few years ago would have been regarded as an amazing price. These $24,000 and $45,000 transactions in Mecklenburg lands might be taken as good indication that things are not in a bad way in at least one North Carolina County.

In connection with the foregoing, I want to say that I have a number of farms—many of them that are as good as the best that are to be found anywhere—at prices and terms that are right. If you are a man business, I cannot only suit you, but I can surprise you. I can probably fix you up better than you have any hope that you can be fixed up. If you have money that you want to invest in the best property to be had, I am the man to see. If you want to borrow long time money, I am in touch with the people who have it and who would rather lend it on Farm Land Security than on any other security in the list. If you want money with which to buy a farm, come and see me in my office. I can tell you things that you don't know and that you will be glad to hear. I can help you with regard to any real estate transaction you might have in mind, and it will give me pleasure to do so.
