SOUTHERN LITERARY MESENGER MACFARLANE & FERGUSSON, Publishers. RICHMOND, VA.

Price, $3 per Annum, in advance. N announcing the Thirty-second and Thirty-third volumes of the Messenger, the publishers take pleasure in acknowledging the unabated confidence of the public and the press in a magazine which, during so many years, has obtained the favor of the Bouthern people. For more than a quarter of a century, the Messenger has been the exponent of Southern opinion, the medium of Southern genius, the bold and outspoken advocate of Southern instithe bold and outspoken advocate of Southern insti-tions. Far from abandoning the position hereto-fore held in regard to the paramount question of Slavery, it is prepared to take still higher ground. It will maintain, not only that slavery is a social and political blessing, but that its extension is a necessary condition of its existence. Essentially a Southern Magazine, the Messenger claims the right to shave the good or evil fortune of the South, to share the good or evil fortune of the South, whether in the Union or out of the Union

With respect to its literary merits, the Messenger must speak for itself. Its editorial columns have been illustrated by the genius or Edgar A. Poe and John R. Thompson, and its pages have been adorned by many of the ablest essays, the profoundest critisisms, the post by illight sheat and the control of the state of profoundest criticisms, the most brilliant sketches, the best poetry, and the most popular novels of the age. In verification of this statement, we need but to instance "The Reveries of a Bachelor,"
"The Flush Times of Alabama," and "Vernon Grove;" all of which were given to the readers of the Messenger before they appeared in the form of books. No pains will be spared to secure literary materials quite as attractive as any that have appeared in the past.

Among the New Features to be introduced, are Original Illustrations, Fashion Plates, Popular Scientific Articles, and a Series of Humorous Sketches and Poems of Southern Life! The admirable Lee tures of Professor Faraday will be continued. A sparkling Novelet, entitled "A Story of Cham-paigne," will appear. Also Translations of the shorter and most brilliant stories of the younger Dumas and other celebrated French writers. NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The Messenger is not only a literary journal, in the modern sense of the word, but is political to the extent of being ever ready to defend the South and her institutions, without invading the domain of party politics. Its contributors are men of solid ability and established reputation, and its contents are usually a happy compromise between the light literature of Northern Magazines and the heavy and solid intellectual food of the British Reviews .- New Orleans Crescent.

The contents are various, lively; and some of the papers exhibit thinking, on the part of the writer, and will require it from the reader. The new editor presents himself gracefully to his reader in his proper department, and opens his game of bat-tle with enthusiasm.—Charleston Mercury.

John R. Thompson, Esq., is succeeded by a young man of great talent, already known in liter-ary circles as the author of "The Virginia Editor," "Mozis Addums Letters to Billy Ivins," "Blue Eyes and Battlewick," and many other articles Eyes and Battlewick," and many other articles evincing talent and humor. Under the editorial control of Dr. George W. Bagby, we feel assured that the Messenger will, at all times, sustain its rank as one of the best periodicals in the country. We congratulate the readers of the Messenger upon the happy choice of its present editor by the proprietors.—Virginia Echo.
