HOME AFTER BUSINESS HOURS.—The road which the man of business travels in pursuit of competence and wealth is not a macadamized one, nor does it ordinarily lead through pleasant scenes and by well-springs of delight. On the contrary, it is a rough and rugged path, beset with "wait-a-bit" thorns, and full of pitfalls which only can be avoided by the watchful care of circumspection. After each day's journey over this worse than turnpike road, the wayfarer needs something more than rest; he requires solace—and deserves it.

He is weary of the dull prose of life, and athirst for its poetry. Happy is the man who can find that solace and poetry at home. Warm greetings from loving hearts, fond glances from bright eyes, and welcome shouts of children, the many thousand little arrangements for comfort and enjoyment, that silently tell of thoughtful love, the gentle ministrations that beguile us into an old and easy seat before we are aware of it; these and like tokens of affection and sympathy, constitute the poetry of life, which reconciles us to the prose of life. Think of this, ye wives and daughters of business men!

A TOUGH STORY.—There is a place in Maine so rocky that when the natives plant corn they look for crevices in the rocks, and shoot the grains in with a musket; they can't raise ducks there no how, for the stones are so thick that the ducks can't get their bills between them to pick out the grass-hoppers, and the only way the sheep can get at the sprigs of grass is by grinding their noses on a grindstone. But this ain't a circumstance to a place in Maryland—there the land is so poor that it takes two killers to cry "kilder," and on a clear day you can see the grasshoppers climb up a mule stalk, and look with tears over a fifty acre field; and the bumblebees have to go down on their knees to get at the grass; all the mosquitoes died of starvation, and the turkey buzzards were obliged to emigrate. But there is a county in Virginia which can beat that—there the land is so sterile that when the wind is north-west they have to tie the children to keep 'em from being blown away—there it takes six frogs to raise one croak, and when the dogs bark they have to lean against the fences—the horses are so thin that it takes twelve of them to make a shadow, and when they kill a beef they have to hold him up to knock him down!

FRIENDS AND RELATIVES.—Intimate friends and relations should be careful when they go out into the world together, or admit others to their own circle, that they do not make a bad use of the knowledge which they have gained of each other by their intimacy. Nothing is more common than this, and did it not mostly proceed from mere carelessness, it would be superlatively ungenerous. You seldom need wait for the written life of a man to hear about his weakness, or what are supposed to be such, if you know his intimate friends, or meet him in company with them.

The eyes of the mind are like the eyes of the body—they can see only to such a distance, but because they cannot see beyond this point, is there nothing beyond it?—Johnson.

—When the Conference assembled in Hillsboro' some years since, on the last day of the session, a lad, whose father had entertained some half a dozen preachers, entered the room in a terrible state of excitement.

"What's the matter, Isaac?" asked one, "You seem excited."

"Excited! I ain't excited; I'm mad all over."

"What are you mad about, Isaac?—Don't you know it's wrong to suffer yourself to become angered?"

"Wrong or not wrong, it's enough to make anybody but a preacher mad.—Here's every chicken on the place out up, except the old rooster, and just now he happened to get a glimpse of you fellows and sung out: 'And must this feeble body die'—and dropped over stone dead."

"SHE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COULD."—This is the highest eulogy by the highest authority. Blessed is the man or woman who can deserve such commendation. Alas! few of us can say that we have done that we could for Christ. Rare have been the occasions when the covetous could have blamed us for giving too much, or the indolent for overtaking our strength for Jesus. How many times, when prompted by the nobler principle to do more, we have listened to the selfish principle, and done less! The rich man has felt sometimes as if he ought to give out of his abundance large sums; and then, ere he could answer the suggestion, another voice has sounded within, you will do your part if you give less.

These words of Jesus carry comfort to the poor. They have not the silver and the gold; but they can, out of their scanty store, give to Christ a larger amount proportionately than the rich. Let them do what they can, and they shall be commended by their Lord. So the humble believer, however lowly may be his lot on earth, if he put forth his energies for Christ, will have the same eulogy that the woman had, "Ye have done what ye could."—Christian Work.

—Aim at perfection in everything, though however, they who aim at it, and persevere, will come much nearer to it, than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as unattainable.

—Some men nobly serve their country by dying upon the battle field. Others can serve it by dying anywhere.

NEW ORLEANS.
Rob't. Mure & Co., Agents,
CHARLESTON, S. C.

THESE TIES AND BANDS are made of the best wrought iron, and have been fairly tested and approved by the cotton pressers in all the principal sea ports, and by planters in all the cotton growing States.

The advantage of baling cotton with iron is now generally acknowledged, and it is recommended by boat and ship-owners and insurance companies.

It costs less, makes a more compact bale, and gives greater security than rope.
