Thursday and Friday, the 25th and 26th of hundred and sixty-nine, will long be remembered in Anderson as the inaugural era of Agricultural Fairs in this county. True, last fall witnessed a creditable exhibition, if we consider the circumstances by which we were then surrounded; and it is likewise true that before the present generation of active, moving spirits came upon the stage an agricultural society flourished at this place. It is furthermore to the credit of our fathers, that a similar society has existed at Pendleton for the last half century, and which is still in the land of the living, and altogether likely to continue its usefulness for many years to come. But we repeat that Agricultural Fairs have just now been inaugurated; and by this we mean to say, that with first insertion and Fifty Cents for each subsequent | a new era of prosperity to the country, the people are awakening to the dawn of a progressive spirit, and have manifested the utmost interest in this enterprise, and intend making it a permanent and enduring success-dating this expression of their interest from the developments produced by the For announcing candidates, Five Dollars in each recent Fair. Already, the ball is in motion, and we hear of numerous gentlemen declaring that future years will witness splendid repetitions of this exhibition, and that prompt and energetic measures must be taken to place the Farmers' Association upon a solid basis, with appropriate Fair Grounds, and all the necessary appurtenances to accomodate the crowds of exhibitors and visitors expected at these annual gatherings. Various schemes are suggested, and it is likely that the most practicable and feasible suggestions will be at once utilized, and rendered available in attaining the end now desired by the entire community, which is nothing less than a fixed and permanent habitation for the "Farmers' Association" of old Anderson. As we expect to urge this matter upon the attention of our readers hereafter, we will not further loiter by the way, but proceed at once to give a brief and succinct account of the events connected with the Fair last week.

The sun shone brilliantly on Thursday, and at an early hour it was apparent that hundreds of people from the surrounding country would enliwen the occasion by their presence. The Secretary's books were opened at nine o'clock, in the Court House, and it was not long until that official or perpetual members. A number of gentlemen was crowded with applicants to register their names and the articles intended for exhibition. With the assistance of several others, the Secretary was kept busy until poon, when the doors were opened, and the crowd of fair ladies and sturdy men flocked in to witness the exhibition. It is simply impossible to describe each department, and we must be content with a meagre reference

In the Household Department, it was especially, noticeable that the ladies had not ignored their peculiar domain, but had presented the greatest Executive Committee. B. F. Charton, Esq., to sich like," and which would do credit to any sec- successful completion of the enterprise, and upon tion of the country.

Busy fingers had plied away to make a respectable collection of articles in patch, crochet and needlework, and this division of labor was unexpectedly large. Of course, there were many garments of beautiful and exquisite make, and some of them exceedingly puzzling to our old bachelor friends, who never can understand how it is that the ladies find time to bestow so much care and pains-taking upon simple articles of dress.

Another table revealed a splendid assortment of akin to that species of woman's labor. Worsted rations. work and tatten came under the supervision of this committee, and several specimens of drawing and painting likewise engaged their attention.

The native wines spread before the gentlemen designated to " inspect " their flavor and strength, mbraced twenty-two samples, and richly demonstrated the fact that this is a wine-producing region, lacking only the attention and care of our people to make them famous in this department.

In Domestic Manufactures, there was a commendable rivalry, and scores of articles were brought to the attention of the committee.

The manufactures of wood and iron, although not large, attested the motive genius now lying almost dormant, and which deserves to be quickened into active and constant usefulness. Other States contributed no little to this department, and the comparison of work in some instances redounded to the credit of an estimable gentleman of this

There was no competition in the leather department, but the sides of leather, as well as the saddle and harness on exhibition, attested the superiority of our workmen in this respect.. And lastly, so far as the exhibition in doors is concerned, we come to the varied and excellent samples of farm products entered for premiums. In this regard, we might as well declare here and now that our farmers do not expect to be excelled in the Southern country. The samples of wheat were certainly surprising, and to give an idea of their quality and appearance, it was remarked to us by a gentleman that, in his opinion, these specimens were obtained from a better wheat country than he ever believed this would be. The corn was equally astonishing, and when we relate that one exhibitor told us that fifty-four ears of his corn made a bushel, and that this did not take the premium either, our readers at a distance will also share in this astonishment. The premium corn produced severy-four bushels per acre. And so we might continue, as to the merits of the turnips, cabbage, &c., but we will desist, with calling attention to the fact that this highly creditable exposition af farm products follows a most unfavorable season!

The exhibition of cattle, sheep, and swine; took place in the lot belonging to the Catholic church, and we regret that our duties as Secretary kept us so closely engaged in the Court House as to prevent a personal inspection of the stock. The number was not very great, but we believe that it was fully equal to the anticipations of the Executive Committee in charge of the Fair, as the lateness of the season doubtless had something to do with the meagre show of cattle and sheep especi-

The poultry exhibition was also small, but there were some genuine g me-cocks presented, together with a variety of chickens, geese and ducks.

We have gone through the list at random, and only reserve the horses, jacks and mules, as these animals were not on exhibition the first day.

When night arrived, it was the unanimous opinion that the Fair was a decided success, and it was determined to hold the annual meeting in Masonic Hall, with a view to make the beginning for vig-If all, with a view to make the beginning for vigorous and active measures of permanency in the organization. The particulars of this meeting will exhibited a grade Heifer, 18 months old, which organization. The particulars of this meeting will be found elsewhere in our columns to-day.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The crowd in attendance on Friday was even greater than the day before. Articles continued ultimo. He served in Congress many years, to be received until about ten o'clock, when the books of entry were closed, and a variety of artiwas also once Governor of his State, and was alarrived too late. The doors were opened about cles exhibited in their department, and in many

Among the chief features of the morning, we may mention the "dog-power" belonging to Mr. NANCE, of Honea Path, which was highly amusing and instructive. By the aid of this power, the owner stated that for two years his family had been enabled to churn with the utmost ease and facility. The power can be applied to anything within its scope, and is quite a novelty. Another simple and useful contrivance, intended to save labor in churning, was exhibited by Mr. W. T. BROWNE, of this neighborhood. Being his own invention, and certainly adapted to the purpose for which it was intended, it attracted much attention, and was highly complimented.

The exhibition of horses began about one o'clock, and lasted for several hours. Every class enumerated in the premium list was represented, we believe, and though the entries were comparatively few, the display was indeed creditable. The committee took their stand upon the public square, and each class of horses required to "pass in review" before them. The square was thronged with ladies and gentlemen, and great difficulty was experienced in keeping back the surging tide of people. The best horses were decorated with the blue ribbon, and the second best obtained a badge of red ribbon, although the committee were authorized to award premiums only for the best.

During the progress of the horse-show, the Anderson Brass Band enlivened the occasion by inspiring strains of music, and added much to the exhibition. Indeed, on both days these clever gentlemen contributed no little to the success and pleasure of the occasion by furnishing music at proper intervals. It is conceded that we cannot do without the Band, and its members always evince a cheerful disposition to accommodate the public.

The closing exercises of the day took place in the Court House, when the doors were opened to the public generally. Maj. RUSSELL called the meeting to order, and made a few appropriate remarks concerning the Fair and its results, not forgetting to thank the people for their interest and assistance, and urging farmers to connect themselves with the Association, either as amount, life enrolled their names at ouce, principally as life members. Upon motion, Maj. George Seabonn was unanimously elected an honorary life member

We cannot close this hasty and imperfect report of the Fair without alluding to the energy and public spirit manifested by the Chairman of the abundance of butter, lard, preserves, pickles, "and whom in a great measure is due the inception and whose shoulders fell the greatest responsibility. BRIEF MENTION .- A party of confidence gentlemen swindled some of our wide-awake citizens on Monday last, by forging orders, and selling a horse and wagon supposed to be stolen.
