Making Honest Politicians.

A great many people, both men and women, profess to have a "perfect horror of politics." They look upon the modes by which government is carried on as a game in the hands of shrewd, unscrupplous, daring men, who have little regard for truth, honesty, or the real prosperity of the country, but who are impelled by love of luces, of position and power. It is common to hear politics spoken of as a Serbosian bog, in which every man must be mired who attempts to reach greatness through that who attempts to reach greatness through that highway

Now we hold, and we think the justice of our Now we hold, and we think the justice of our position can be established, that every man and every woman in the republic is responsible to a greater or less extent for corruption in politics. And more, that it is the duty of every individual to have a hand in this matter of purifying politics. How is it to be done? In the first place, "laying the ax at the root of the tree;" by beginning at the cradle to inculcate lessons of truth, honesty, civil and social, and of Christiau charity, which is "Peace on earth and good will to men." It is a common saying, we have heard it a thousand times in Fourth of July and similar orations, that the Bible is the corner-stone of this Republic. We all believe this to be so, but how do we act in reference to this connection? How many parents, taking this book as the rule of moral action, diligently instruct their children in its teachings in order that they may become good citizens. How many take pains to cultivate in their offspring the love, for its own intrinsic excellence, of that which is absolutely pure and just and true? that which is absolutely pure and just and true? How many teach them when tempted to go astray to reply, "How can I do this great wick-edness and sin against God?" There is in every man's house a perfect antidote to this corruption in politics which is so much prated about. Did Joseph in Egypt attain and retain his eminence at the Court of Pharaoh by bribe-mond objected? His story is full of lessons ry and chicanery? His story is full of lessons of political wisdom and sagacity, of truth and honesty, of high capacity and incorruptible in-tegrity, of all the elements that make statesmen great. Was it by trickery that Daniel became third ruler in Belshazzar's kingdom, and first of the three President's in the reign of Darius?

dren, nominally Christian, of a great many characters and events portrayed in the Sacred Scriptures, is simply deplorable. You cannot find a carpenter without his rule in his pocket, you will never catch a stone-mason without his line or plummet, a railroad contractor without maps and charts somewhere about him, an edi-tor without his newspaper, but how often do we meet men and women, nominally honest, about whom we can find no trace of this absolute line of moral action, this plummet of Divine recti-tude, this title-deed to everlasting inheritance, but must take it for granted that they have got it stowed away in some secret pocket. As long administer it, and it is for the interest of every-body that these men be honest; it is in the power of every father and mother in the land to contribute to this result.

The ignorance of men and women and chil-

Instead of keeping out of politics let every man act his part in it well and honestly, and do what he can to make others conduct in the same manner, let him train his sons to imitate the demigods of this nation—Washington, and Jefferson, and Patrick Henry, and Chief Justice Marshall, and John Jay-men whose social and political lives were equally stainless.

Men and women of high virtue are no more the result of an accident than the raising of eighty bushels of shelled corn to the acre is an eighty bushels of shelled corn to the acre is an accident. Miracles do not happen in this nineteenth century. The seed that was sown in good ground brought forth abundantly; that ground had been carefully prepared; it was not hard like the wayside, weedy or without depth of earth, but mellow, moist, pulverized, and fertilized. Thus with moral soil. Our greatest envines, our noblest statesmen, our most eminent philosophers and scientists, are the blossoms of generations of culture and intelligence, It was John Smith.—Danbury News. of morality and virtue.

A FIGHTING PARSON.—The Edgefield Advertiser tells the following anecdote of the late

During Longstreet's campaign in Tennessee while a portion of his army was under a fearful fire of shells from the enemy, at Campbell's Station, a private soldier, within a few feet of the Colonel of his regiment, had both his legs torn off. The regiment was not fighting, but waiting orders. The wounded man was lifted a couple of yards in the rear to die. Another a couple of yards in the rear to die. Another private now marched down the line under a hail of missiles, and said to the commanding officer, "Colonel, may I have a few moments of prayer with that dying man?" The Colonel said, "are you a clergyman?" The private answered, "I am." "Then," said the Colonel, "do as you desire." And the man of God knelt and prayed with and for the dying man for or ten minutes without moving or awaying five or ten minutes, without moving or swaying his body, seemingly totally unconscious of a storm of shot and shell, which, the Colonel tells us, he never saw surpassed in fury. In a few days the praying private was announced in field orders as Chaplain of the regiment-"promoted for gallantry and piety on the field." The regiment was the Hampton Legion. The Colonel was Gary. The private soldier was the Rev. W. M. Thomas, now pastor of the Methodist Churches of our circuit.

- The following story is told of the Rev. Mr. Hammend, who approached a man at Burlington the other day, asking him if he was a Christian. "No," replied the other party, "I am a railroad man." "Well," said Mr. Hammond, "I know of several conductors in New England that are Christians." "That may work down East all right, but a man can't be both in Iowa," responded the employee.

It may be the club of form, bronzed in complexion, and with a certain air of better days about him, the stranger was not discredited in his further as extranger gether rejected, for the proprietors of a machine shop engaged his services, in a small position, for a salary which was to increase with his proficiency. Thus beginning his career in mechanics, the captain was not averse to the so-cial consideration gained by report of his more pretentious past, and in a few weeks found himself a modest lion in the parlors of several highly respectable families. A majority of the young ladies were discreetly cautious in receiving his courtesies, to be sure; but a Miss Taylor, whose parents were of the local aristocracy, was more hearty in recognizing him at once as of aligible casto, and was presently involved. of eligible caste, and was presently involved thereby in a relation of sentiment by which young hearts are easily led to think themselves wiser than old heads. Her family, however, did not partake of this affinity, and by a too hasty development of opposition precipitated hasty development of opposition precipitated the very crisis they designed averting. Thinking herself persecuted and the high-born machinist cruelly misjudged, and of course resolved to take part in a new Southern rebellion, she and the captain met at parties, exchanged notes by stealth, and gradually arrived at the climax usual in such affairs. From rived at the climar usual in such affairs. From an evening entertainment last week at which both had been guests they repaired to an adjacent parsonage, and from thence, as man and wife, took their way audaciously to the bride's stately home. It was the paternal Taylor who answered the door-bell, and perceiving who his daughter's escort was, and being addressed by that gentleman as "father," he retired frantically up stairs to call Mrs. Taylor to the field. In the ensuing exciting consultation of all par-ties in the parlor the bridegroom was sternly summoned to give an exact rehearsal of his past history and future expectations, and show how he intended supporting himself and wife in future. His style of response made it more evident that he counted upon material help from his father-in-law; and this practical view of the event not only excited the wrath of the old people, but also aroused the sudden con-tempt of the bride herself. Whether realizing at last her own imprudence, or beholding her lover in a new light, the young lady burst into a passion of tears and fairly asked her father to save her from her husband. The scene ended in the captain's enforced acceptance of onely quarters for the remainder of the night and polite dismissal from the premises next merning; but a correspondent of the St. Louis Republican reports that he is determined to have the wife he has married, and will proba-bly appeal to the law for vindication in the

THE VIRGINIA SALT WORKS.—The origin of the Southwestern Virginia Salt Works is curious. The place was once a vast swamp, noisome, alimy and dangerous. Deer, hogs and cattle would often be found dead there. Vapor continually arose from the sodden ground. So lonely was it that it got the reputation of being haunted, and when Wm. Crabtree, a hunter, settled upon it and claimed it, he found no one to dispute his right. From his heirs a certain William King, suspecting its value as a salt field from various indications, bought it for a rifle and a pony. He opened it and cleared it, and dug his wells. It was profitable business, and rapidly increased. During the war these works were the principal dependence of the works were the principal dependence of the Confederacy for salt. Often a thousand wagons Confederacy for salt. Often a thousand wagons system can be understood when it is considered waited at one time to load. They conveyed the that now only seven counties, Jasper, Crawford, salt for hundreds of miles into the interior. Calhoun, Hardin, Pope, Massac and Franklin, After several attempts the Federal troops demolished the works, but never held them for any length of time. The company now have six furnaces, and can make two thousand four hundred bushels of salt a day.

Social Equality at the Inaugural.— Some of the Northern journals are offended at the social equality feature of the grand inaugural hall. One spectacle in particular, they say, "called forth special indignation"—a "perfectly white man sandwiched between two colored women." In view of the President's inauguration speech, which they have so loudly applauded and loyally approved, this mawkishapplauded and loyally approved, this mawkishness of our Northern brethren seems both ill-timed and absurd. The doctrine of civil rights, which Gen. Grant so earnestly urges upon the country, amounts practically to noth-ing more nor less than social equality. If the colored people are to be forced into Southern hotels, theatres, churches and schools, we do not see why they shouldn't go to balls and lift their heels with the upper crust of Northern society. Sauce, which is proclaimed a good thing for the goose, can't be objectionable when applied to the gander.

RISE OF A POOR YOUNG MAN .- Thirty years ago a young man entered the city of New York in an almost penniless condition, and without a single acquaintance in the great wilderness of houses. To-day his name is known wherever humanity breathes. It is spoken in every city, and is as familiar to the workers in the mines as to the brothers in the mills, and wherever language is known and ideas ex-

A correspondent of the Scientific American commends onions as a specific against epidemics—not as an esculent, but sliced and kept in a sick room where they will absorb any atmosphereic poison. They should be replaced by fresh ones every hour. It is noticed that in the room of a small pox patient they will blister and decompose very rapidly, but will prevent the spread of the disease. Their application has also proved effective in the ease of snake bites.

- The immense amount of ink included in the stationary account of the Pennsylvania Legislature was an inexplicable mystery until some one discovered that a shrewd whiskey dealer in the neighborhood was a large buyer of empty ink bottles, which were refilled and vended under the label of extra writing fluid, warranted not to corrode the pen.

- Books, says Lord Bacon, can never teach the use of books; the student must learn by commerce with mankind to reduce his speculations to practice. No man should think so highly of himself as to think he can receive but little light from books, nor so meanly as to believe he can discover nothing but what is to be learned from them.

He's a notary public, and he's an 'pothecary, and can fill teeth, and he's a hoss doctor, and he can mend wagons, and things, and he can play the fiddle, and he's a jackass at all trades." The curse of our country is the bitter partisan spirit that prevails in one and all par-ties. If men would be looked at for their actual worth, and be weighed according to their deeds, and not judged by their political opinions, it would be better for the country. Let us take a man as we find him, and judge him accordingly.

— Here is another one of those delightful facts of science: Feeling is a much slower sense than sight. If a man had an arm long enough to reach the sun, and were to touch that body with the tip of his finger, he would never find out whether it was hot or cold, as he would be dead before the sensation arrived at headquarters, which would require 100 years.

— One of the Ohio papers tells about a brave little boy out there who found a broken rail on the railroad track, and preceiving the peril in which the train would be placed if it should come dashing past without warning, set out on the fence for five long hours in the bitter winter cold, in order that he might carry the winter cold, in order that he might carry the first news of the accident to his father, who is local editor of a paper published in a neighboring village. - From letters received in Washington, it appears that there is no doubt of money being used in the late Senatorial election in Florida, not, however, to any very large amount. The sable legislators of that State are not very high-toned in regard to prices. According to the investigation rulling rates were a "suit of store clothes," a big silver watch, or enough to pay for a buggy ride.

— The magnitude of the Illinois railroad

Even in the seven counties mentioned, railroads are already projected, so that it will be but a short time until every county in the State will be reached by rail, aggregating a total of between 7,000 and 8,000 miles of road.

- Ever since agriculture has been practiced soot has been known to be a valuable manure, and yet in the nineteenth century there are hundreds of farmers who cannot be persuaded to believe this. It is really as valuable as guano. Take a hogshead of water, and dissolve in it twelve quarts of soot, and you will have a splendid liquid manure for plants.

- We don't think that we ever met with more melancholy story than this, of a young couple in Hardin Co., Ohio. They being very much enamored of each other, protracted their sitting to a late hour, and falling asleep before the stove the poor young woman's dress took fire, and she was fatally burned. We usually like startling and remarkable para-graphs, but really we hope that this one is not ounded on fact.

- There is a story affoat about a German gentleman in Berks county, who buried his wife, and married again in about ten days. The young men of the neighborhood determined to signify their disapproval of such a breach of propriety as this speedy marriage; so, while the wedding feast was in progress in the house, they called and gave the parties a calathumpian serenade. After awhile the groom appeared at the front door and when silence had been obtained, he said, in a deprecatory tone: "I say, poys, you ought to pe ashampt of yourselves to pe making all dis noise, ven dere vos a funeral here so soon. It ain't right." The band then adjourned.

 Ossawatamie, Kansas, has come down to us linked with the name of old John Brown, though he is supposed to be some distance from there at the present time, as he has kept "marching on" at a desperate rate ever since he died. The place, however, has entitled itself to new distinction by lynching the most desperate horse thief to be found on the border, one George Ellis. He fought fiercely, but was hung to a tree, with a blanket over his head, and irons on his hands and feet. When he was buried one of the lynchers, to make sure that the dirt was well packed, got upon the new made grave and stamped it down until it was firm, and the coffinless man rested in peace in the shadow of the primeval woods.
