Burning of Gin Houses. Almost every one of our exchanges brings the news of some gin house in their localities being destroyed by fire. In the majority of cases, the origin of these fires are said to be incendiary. We have long entertained the opinion that the greatest number of the fires originate from the careless handling of matches near the loose cotton, or from the friction of following pertinent paragraph: "The finanthe machinery, or other accidental cause. Doubtless the incendiary often wreaks vengeance upon the owners of gin houses, because as a general rule these buildings are isolated | the true course of her relief." and offer peculiar temptations to the evil disposed. But we know that a great many gin houses are burned while the gins are in motion, and this is usually attributed to loose as the Mississippi House, corner of Market and matches or pebbles in the cotton. Important to Insurers.

Insurance placed in companies that have not complied with the laws of the State where the property insured is situated (either by the company direct or through agents or brokers,) can not in case of loss be sued for and recovered in any of the United States or State courts, and the assured is left entirely at the mercy of such companies, and without legal remedy.

The statute of all the States imposes certain conditions upon all insurance companies (chartered by other States) to enable them to obtain authority to transact business, and make binding contracts within the State, and without having first complied with such laws, and obtained the legal authority to do business, all insurance written by them is illegal and void.

The following is an abstract from a recent opinion of the attorney-general of the State of Indiana, upon the subject : "As the statute prohibits any foreign insurance company, directly or indirectly, to take risks, or transact any business of insurance in the State, without first procuring legal authority, this includes a prohibition upon any person or corporation (not duly authorized) from acting in any capacity as insurance agents, either by soliciting applications or collecting money upon premiums. A policy issued by an agent in violation of a law, declaring his act to be criminal, has been decided by the Supreme the property insured (20th Indiana, p. 520.) ing that he advocated the propagation of yel

Insurers may, therefore, well understand, that in accepting policies in such companies, they are wholly without indemnity against loss, except at the caprice of the companies whose illegal and void policies they hold.
