Going to the Dentist's.

I like to come across a man with the toothache. There's something so pleasant in advising him to stuff cotton in it, to use camphor, creosote, peppermint and "relief" that I always feel better after giving it.

I have been there—had an aching snag, and know just how it feels. It used to wake me up at night, and make me mad at noon, and set me to swearing early in the morning. I didn't meet man or woman but what they advised me. One said that a hot knitting-needle pushed down on the roots was an excellent thing; and others said that it must be dug out by a dentist.

They smiled when they said so—smiled like fiends. They didn't know that the old snag seemed an inch too high, and was as tender as my eye, and that the bare thought of "digging out" made a chill run up my spine. Yes, they did know it, too, but it wasn't their snag, and they didn't care.

If I sat down to dinner that old tooth began to growl. If I went to bed, or got up, or went to a party, or staid at home, she growled just the same. It wasn't always a growl; sometimes it was a jump that made me make up faces at the baby, and slam doors, and break windows. I ate cotton, peppermint, camphor and opium until I got black in the face, and that old snag kept right on. I put bags of hot ashes to my cheek, applied mustard, held my head in the oven, took a sweat, and the ache still ached.

After the third week the neighbors didn't dare let their boys pass my house, and tin peddlers and book canvassers went around on another street. I was becoming a menagerie, and at last I decided to have my tooth out. I decided to, and then I decided not to. I changed my mind four times in one afternoon, and at last I went.

The dentist was glad to see me. He said if he could not take the tooth out without hurting me he would give me a million dollars. It got easier as he talked, and I concluded not to have it pulled. I started down stairs, but a jump caught me, and I rushed back. He said he would look at it; perhaps it did not need pulling at all, but he could kill the nerve.

By dint of flattery he got me in the chair. Then he softly inserted a knife and cut away the gums. I leaped up and said I would kill him, but he begged me not to; said the cutting was all the pain there was to it. He finally got me to lean back and open my mouth, and then slipped in his forceps, and closed them around the tooth.

"Oh, ordor-ordor-ordor-ordor!" I cried, but he didn't pay any attention to it. He drew in a full breath, grasped the forceps tightly, and then pulled.

Great spoons! but didn't it seem as if my head was going! I tried to shout, grappled at him, kicked, and then he held up the old snag, and said:

"There! guess you won't feel any more aching!"

I leaped down and hugged him. I promised him ten million dollars. I told him to make my home his home forever. I hugged him again. I shook hands with every body on the street, kissed my wife, bought the baby a dozen rattle boxes in a heap, and it seemed to me as if the world was too small for me, I was so happy.

OATS AS HORSE FEED.—It is a very general belief among our people that for horses or mules required to do farm work, no food is as nutritious as corn, and that it is impossible to "keep up the stock" on any other kind of grain. This is a great mistake, however. I am satisfied from a long and careful experience in the management of draft animals, that good, sound oats are by far the most nourishing and wholesome food for either horses or mules on a plantation, for the reason that they are more easy of digestion, are less liable to sour, and are more easily assimilated than corn in any shape. For instance, I never saw a mule or horse fed on good, clean oats troubled with colic or flatulency. I allude only to good, clean oats. If they are musty or mouldy they are the worst possible food, and will produce the worst result; but if they are sound and about four or five months old, I am positive that no other food is as good or possesses a combination of healthful and nutritive qualities as they do, no matter what the work which the animals are required to do.

A horse or mule doing very hard work may be allowed to eat as much as he will, without injury. He should have just a little good hay or fodder in addition. For an animal doing light work a less quantity may be given, and good condition will be kept up if they are ground coarsely and mixed with chopped food, and sprinkled with a little salt and water.

Corn is the most expensive stock food that we can possibly use. Oats are cheapest and most easily raised. Even were corn as wholesome food as oats, the latter are preferable in an economical point of view. But were the cost of both equal, I should prefer the oats as the more conducive to the health and serviceability of the stock.—Farm and Home.

THE TRANSIT OF VENUS.—Telegrams from various sources report the successful observation of the transit of Venus. The elaborate and costly expeditions sent to so many points of the earth, to note the movement of the planet as it passes across the center of the solar system, provokes inquiry as to the object. The Baltimore American gives the reason briefly, thus:

The primary object is to ascertain the distance of the sun from the earth, which, once fixed, will enable us to determine the distance of all the various members of the planetary system from the earth and from each other, even to that of Neptune, so far removed that even of its days is a cycle of our years, whilst the warmth of the rays of the sun never reaches its perpetual ice and snow. Our distance from the sun is a yardstick for measuring other celestial distances, and when that is once definitely known, we have a positive basis to go upon for measuring space. The preliminary trouble is that there are millions of miles of difference in the various estimates of the distance between the earth and the sun. The ancient astronomers fixed it at five millions of miles; but Encke calculated it at ninety-five millions, which has been the common acceptance up to the present time. But the object to be attained is absolute certainty, and the supposition is that the modern perfection of science would attain this from the observations of the recent transit of Venus. It is the claim of scientists that it will enable them to arrive at certainty in their work and demonstrate it to the popular comprehension. Under such conditions it is not difficult to understand the value of these observations.

CUMULATIVE VOTING.—The bill introduced by Senator Cochran, to provide for the incorporation of towns and villages, requires that all elections of municipal officers shall be conducted under the Cumulative system of voting. At the instance of Senator Bucklew, Cumulative voting in Pennsylvania was first applied to a Democratic township, in which, until minority representation was established, no Republican could be elected to a public office. In like manner the system is in operation in the Democratic Town of Anderson, in this State, where Senator Cochran lives. Only good can come from the wider and deeper application of the principle, of which the Cumulative vote is the expression, that the majority of voters are entitled to a majority of representation and not to exclusive representation.

Senator Cochran is on the right path, and every citizen who has at heart the permanent good of the State will sustain him in his efforts to give to both Conservatives and Republicans the proportional representation which is theirs, and which they have not.—News and Courier.

Don't Farm Too Much Land.

The most unwise and discouraging thing a farmer ever does is to try to cultivate too much land. If no more than ten acres can be improved at a time, by all means confine yourself to ten acres. Don't farm an acre in such a manner that it deteriorates in value for the next year's crop. What opinion would you have of a grocer who so abused his patronage as to make it sure he would have no returns from it the following year? It is extreme folly to cultivate land that will not pay for the tillage, and all land will, sooner or later, reach this state unless it is farmed well; by well we mean intelligently and improvingly, if we may be allowed the expression. All available fertilizers should be used on the best of land, and not allowed to go to waste, until the land begins to grow poor. We feel that many farmers are making a great mistake in burning their straw and fodder, allowing manures to waste, and lands to be drained of everything that grows upon them for successive years, merely because they are new. They are not, consequently, inexhaustible, and the evil effects of this system, or rather want of system, will be seen much sooner than now anticipated. The old rule, that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," holds good in agriculture as well as in hygiene, and we would impress it upon the minds of our farmers that it is far cheaper and easier to keep our land rich and in good condition than it will be to reclaim it when it once becomes unprofitable.

It is a source of delight as well as profit to gather fine crops, but it is sadly disheartening to gather but little more than the seed, and feel that through one's negligence and ignorance the time and cost of tillage have been thrown away. Limit yourselves to whatever number of acres can be made to grow maximum crops; it is cheaper, easier and more profitable, and vastly more satisfactory.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL GRANGE IN CHARLESTON.—The National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of the United States, will commence its annual session in Charleston on the first Wednesday in February, 1875.

It will be a great occasion for this city, for the State of South Carolina, and for the South generally—indeed, we may say, for the whole country, since it will promote, as nothing else could, the true unity of the Republic and fraternal feeling and kindness among the people of all parts of our land. It will bring here representatives of the Union, and from the British Provinces, all working together for the common good, and all bound to each other by the most sacred obligations and the closest brotherly ties. The spectacle will be impressive, and its significance of the greatest import.

The representatives of Granges come here for work, and that work will be of the most serious and important character.

We trust it will be wisely performed. But we believe in recreation as well as in work, and the Grange of Charleston and of the State intend to provide such means of recreation as will make the visit of our brothers and sisters from abroad as pleasant as we have no doubt it will be profitable. Next month we hope to be able to give our programme of reception and entertainment in full. In the meantime, brothers and sisters of the North, the South, the East and the West, be assured that a warm, hearty, fraternal welcome awaits you in this famous old historic "City by the Sea." We open the doors of our homes and our hearts with true Southern hospitality to all who come with the pass words and signs of the "Noble Order of Patrons."—Rural Carolinian for December.

It is the season of the year when people should be careful of their fires, unless they wish to move rather suddenly, and not take much time.

READ! READ! Consumption Cured!

OFFICE OF O. SACKETT, Druggist and Medicines, NEW ALBANY, IND., April 10, 1874.

Dr. J. S. Pemberton, Atlanta, Ga.—DEAR SIR: I have received your circular, and in consequence of the distribution, I have sold about six dozen Globe Flower Syrup in the last two weeks. The Globe Flower Syrup is gaining great celebrity. I recommended it in two cases of consumption. One case was bed-fast; had not laid on but one side for two years; hemorrhages almost every day; much emaciated, and expected to die. He has taken six bottles of Globe Flower Syrup; his troubles are all gone, except prostration, which is rapidly improving. He will certainly get well. The other case is similar, with same good results. I can send you many testimonials if you want them.

Yours truly, etc.,

O. SACKETT, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 25, 1874.

Dr. J. S. Pemberton—DEAR SIR: I have used your Globe Flower Syrup myself, and in my family, with benefits so marked as to leave unquestioned the merits of a remedy, which, in my experience, has proved one that excels everything for colds, coughs and obstinate lung affections. I shall always use it with perfect confidence, and recommend it to the public as a remedy which will afford that satisfaction experienced by me and mine.

Very respectfully yours,

JAMES M. SMITH, Governor State of Georgia.

THE IMPROVED Home Shuttle Sewing Machine.

THIS Machine does the same kind of work as a high-priced Machine, making the Lock-STITCH, and using a straight needle. The price of the "Home Shuttle" places it within the reach of all persons who are needing Machines, and can't afford to pay for a high-priced Machine.

We are also agents for the "HOME" MACHINE, than which there is no better high-priced Machine in the country. Both of these Machines are warranted by the company who manufacture them for five years, and if any part fails from any imperfection during that time, said part will be supplied free of cost. Prices of "Home"—from $80 to $125.

For samples of work and circulars, address A. & E. BACON, Agents for Greenville and adjoining Counties.

Local Dr. W. G. BROWNIE, at Dental Office, over N. K. Sullivan & Co. Agents wanted, to whom liberal commissions will be given.
