people of our town a delightful serenade on last Friday afternoon from the public square. The gentlemen who compose this band are improving very rapidly in music, and we predict that soon they will rank among the first musical associations in the

The address delivered by Rev. W. H. Strickland, before the Alumini Association of Furman University on last Thursday night in Greenville, is said to have been a very fine production, abounding with valuable, practical suggestions and hits upon the subject of "Work." From the amount of professional labor performed by Mr. Strickland, we imagine he knew what he was talking about. We had the pleasure of a call on last Saturday from Mr. T. D. Kennedy, late editor of the Blackville News. Mr. Kennedy is at present visiting his father at this place, and purposes remaining in Anderson some weeks. He is evidently enjoying excellent health, and therefore has no cause for complaint against the low country, though he good. slightly prefers the mountainous belt of our State during the summer months.

A runaway scrape was caused by the carelessness of drivers at the Baptist Church on last Thursday. The frightened horse dashed off at fearful speed carrying a draw with him and passing down a street crowded with persons, and passed on without damage until the vehicle struck Mr. Murphy's dray, and the horse loosed in the smash up. The dray was considerably damaged, but the horse escaped without injury. This should serve as a warning to drivers where there are numerous vehicles, to be more cautious in running into or against one another. There is no excuse for such reckless-

Capt. A. A. Dickson, an aged and respectable citizen of Anderson County, departed this life after a brief illness on last Friday. Capt. Dickson was about seventy years old, and though his health was at times feeble, he retained to the last of his life more than the usual vigor for men of his years. He was one of the old teachers of the County, and years ago, in his younger days, he was noted for the precision and thoroughness with which he trained the youthful mind. He ranked especially high as a mathematician among his fellow teachers. Capt. Dickson leaves numerous scholars who, with relatives and friends, cherish his memory and regret his decease.

Rev. D. E. Frierson has returned from his visit to Alabama, and seems much invigorated by his short vacation. While absent he attended the commencement exercises of Vanderbilt University, and expresses himself as most highly gratified with the evidences of proficiency and scholarship displayed by the graduates. He was much captivated by the fine country of Alabama, but evidently is still a believer in the merits of old Carolina. Mr. Frierson has resumed his pastoral labors, and henceforth the services of his Church will be conducted as usual. The community are gratified to have Mr. Frierson back again, as he is one of our most popular ministers.

The amount of travel over the South Carolina Railroads is considerable larger this summer than it has been heretofore, and we are gratified to observe a growing tendency on the part of our people to spend their summer vacations in traveling through the mountainous regions of South Carolina, instead of frequenting the Northern watering places and summer resorts. This is decided y an indication of good sense in the people of South Carolina, for, by pursuing such a course a large amount of money will be spent n developing our own beautiful scenery which has no superior, instead of draining the resources of our impoverished people to keep up Northern resorts which are of no to the advertisements of J. CUFFEE CREEK.

Mr. Editor: We have not troubled your columns with any locals from this neighborhood up to this time, and would not do so now, but having been visited on the 18th nst. with a terrific storm of rain and wind which did immense damage. I do not believe we are a meaner set of people than those in other sections; but it seems that Providence is getting after us sharply. After the June freshet last year, we planted over our bottom lands on this creek, and had a fair prospect of a crop, but the first of August a hail and rain storm swept down upon us, destroying the crop irreparably and now again this creek has been visited with another terrible storm, which did very great damage, destroying the fruit crop and fruit trees, blowing down the wheat that was cut and that which was not cut, leveling our oat crop as flat as if a brush had been dragged over it, blowing down nearly all the fence on the writer's plantation, and uprooting three large shade trees in his ard. One of them struck the top of the house, breaking in the roof at one corner: mother just missed another corner of the house. The two doors of the house on the west side was so blockaded by fallen timber that we could not get out on that side until an axman had done a day's work. It blew down a forage house in my horse lot, and scattered it in every direction. The rain oured in torrents, rushing down to the creek, covering the crop in the bottom, which was a solid sheet of water from hill to hill. Corn crops in the bottom land now seem to be destroyed. They are covered with mud and sand. The tract of the storm is about one and a half miles down this creek to the junction of Twenty-Three Mile creek, including the writer's farm, Messrs. Owen's, Hunter McMurtry's, R. W. Simpson's, G. B. Whitten's, and the Kelley farm. Hundreds of trees were blown down, which is a great loss of timber. The rain has continued up to this writing, the 25th inst. The wheat that was cut before the storm was all blown down, and got so wet fear it will be greatly damaged. But we are thankful we are left alive, and have no mad dogs in this neighborhood; out we have a large number of poor, hungry, skeleton dogs that would make a campmeeting howl, if they were all there at one time.

ANSWER TO "VARENNES."

MR EDITOR: Both sides of any question

must be seen before any man can make a vise and just decision, and as "Varennes" has presented his idea of the effect of the stock law, I propose to give him mine, which is not theory, but practice, for eight years past. Since that time I have kept apon my little farm generally two cows and calves, two hogs, some times three, and two good mules. During this time with ordinary scrub stock, I have been able to supply at all times a family of six with milk and butter in abundance, and at all times plenty to sell at a remunerative price; and in these eight years experience not one single time have I ever lost a milking by cows not being at home at night, and very little time lost either myself or hired men in getting the cows in their stalls ready for the milk pail. Again, my cows have never trespassed upon any man's land, and should they by accident get through the fence, my crop was the first to suffer, and hence a good fence. The stock law has enabled me at all times to make a sufficiency of pork to supply my family, the smallest hog killed weighing 346 pounds, the largest 510 pounds; these each year being purchased wherever I could buy them. The secret of this is all attributable to fencing my stock, where they could receive regular attention at all times. It is the nature of both cows and hogs to roam, and though they may be turned into a clover field containing fifty or more acres they will see all sides of it each day. The result of such a course is, that the food that should be applied to the making of butter and milk is consumed in keeping up the system. Much more is this the situation of cows all perfect Six farmers paid an aggregate tax over the country, where they are allowed to roam at will. Again, the loss of milk and butter in this county, by cows staying out fence law Some slight damage to wheat over night, and time spent in search of them keep our county fence in good repair, and I am almost ready to say build it, too.

"Varennes" says that it will oppress the poor, some of them have no water on their farms, others have to go a mile twice each day to feed, and last, it will cause them to maul rails. An instance of oppression is before me. A neighbor (and by the by a "Varennes") who rents a small farm of one hundred and fifty acres, which is enclosed, and upon which this season he says he has split, hauled and put up 2,500 rails for the use of twenty acres of land. Can it be deman do that amount of work, free of cost to the owner? epecially so when I tell you that his stock consists of one cow and calf. one mule and three or four shoats, and nothing to feel on in June. This law proposes to assist this poor man by relieving tivate this twenty acre,, scattered here and there, with perfect safety, knowing that not only his but everybodys stock is fenced in, and there is no danger. Next, how nany farmers are there in this county who have not water on their farms? About two hundred, I suppose, in all. There is only one in this neighborhood, as far as I am informed, and I have endeavored to inform myself. The question is, then, should this small handful of men prevent five thousand men from e: ying so good a law? The next hardship proposed is, this poor man walks a lorg distance (one mile) to feed each day. How many poor men are there who own such possessions? In my eyes he cannot be classed as poor, and should he be a renter there vill be a "general" pasture for all stock. Inside of this, there will be a division fence to separate sheep and goats, and there will be no difficulty in that way. This fence, instad of new, as "Varennes" suggested, will be built of the old rails now in use, of which there are a sufficiency to last for the next ten years, without splitting new ones. But should the old system remain, probably the land owner might fence all his land, and the greater portion of these rails be made by the renter for the use of the land. But aside from all this, are we not in duty bound as farmers to keep pace with the world? Stop this suicidal plan of felling the timber of our forests, leaving none for succeeding generations, and allowing ourselves to be pulled along in the old rut our fathers traveled, be satisfied with a dozen or more shabby cows and hogs, sticking close to the rail fence for a shelter from the cold winter's rains and winds, instead of taking a pride in knowing that we have a few, the quality of each being satisfactory, and that they are amply provided with food and a

WILLIAMSTON COMMENCEMENT.

WILLIAMSTON, S. C., June 24, 1877. Mr. Epiron: The Commencement exer cises of the Williamston Female College came off on the 20th and 21st insts. There was a very good attendance, and everybody seemed to feel repaid for having attended. The exercises began with a sermon before the "Young Ladies' Christian Association," by the Rev. Coke Smith, of Greenville, S. C., from 1st Cor. 10:31-"Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

On Thursday morning at 11 o'clock we ound ourselves in the Chapel again, awaiting the address of Hon, Samuel Dibble, of Orangeburg, S. C., before the Erosophic Society. Prior to introducing the orator, President Lander announced that the young adies would favor the audience with the following

Mr. Dibble was then introduced to the audience, and after wandering off into the land of flowers in making his opening remarks, stated as his subject, "Queen Vashti," and portrayed the miseries to which she was subjected as attributable to her drunken After Mr. Dibble's address was finished,

To have an idea of the worth of his address, one would have to have heard the whole of it. There was nothing superfluous, nor was there anything that could be criticised in it. It would do Prof. Duncan an injury to try to give an analysis. With this closed the exercises, and every one seemed to feel fully repaid for having attended. One will observe on looking over the programme, that there was no effort at display, but the whole of the exercises serve as a mirror which reflects the worth and merit of the institution; and the taste and ability of the faculty under whose management the College is conducted. Of the seven graduates our little town boasts of

SCRIBNER FOR JULY opens with an illustrated paper on "Bow-Shooting," by Maurice Thompson, who deals with his subject not in an archæological but in a practical vein. Mr. Thompson is accustomed to shoot his game with the bow, and he gives his reason for preferring it to the shot-gun. There are auecdotes of some of his archery trips, chiefly in Florida and Northwestern Indiana, and explicit directions are given as to the manufacture of the implements, with suggestions about their use for sport or pleasure. "The Eattle of Bunkerloo," a remarkable engagement not hitherto reported, is described by William Henry Bishop, with illustrations of the opening of the battle, and sketches of the participants, among whom were Lord Nelson, Benedict Arnold, Judas Maccabeus, "The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan," and the "Gallant Six Hundred." A special feature of the number is a story of twenty-five pages by the Russian novelist, Tourgueneff, entitled "The Nobleman of the Steppe," in which a distinguished part is played by a Cossack horse, upon whose identity the interest hinges. Mr. George Inness, jr, who has drawn two pictures for this story, is a new acquisition to the ranks of illustrators. "Rechmond since the War," is the title of an illustrated paper by R. W. Wright, in which the pluck and prosperity of the Virginia metropolis are spoken of with enthusiasm. Miss Jane Stuart has a paper of "Anecdotes" of her father, Gilbert Stuart, the painter, which is said to be much more interesting than her former article which attracted so much attention. Among the contributors of poetry are Philip Bourke Marston, "H. H.," Paul H. Hayne, R. R. Bowker, and Edgar Faweett. In the Editorial Department, Dr. Holland discusses "The Future of American Politics," "The New Temperance Movement," and "The Pauper Poison." "The Old Cabinet" writes of "Spring," "Allston's Dead Man," "The Truth Teller," "Gambrinus," "Conscientious Work," "Stage Struck," "The Barber," "A Personal Resemblance," and "Love and Death," the last a poem. The editors expect that SCRIBNER FOR JULY opens with an illustrated paper on "Bow-Shooting," by Maurice Thompson,

"The Sure Witness." "The nineteenth century is the age of novels," remarks a literary historian—he might have added with equal truth, "and novel impositions." Studied politeness has been passed off on us for native refinement, the forms of devotion for its essence, and speculation for science, until we look askance at every new person or thing, and to an assertion of merit, invariably exclaim, 'Prove it!" In brief, Satan has made him self so omnipresent, that we look for his cloven foot everywhere—even in a bottle of medicine. Imagine a lady, having a complexion so sallow that you would deny her laims to the Caucasian type if her features did not conform to it, purchasing her first bottle of the Golden Medical Discovery. The one dollar is paid in the very identical manner in which Mr. Taylor might be expected to purchase a lottery ticket after his experience with "No. 104,163," with this difference, his doubt would be the result of personal experience, while hers would be founded on what a certain practitioner) who has been a whole year trying to correct her refractory liver) has said concerning it. At home, she examines the bottle half suspi-ciously, tastes of its contents carefully, takes the prescribed dose more carefully, and then proceeds to watch the result with as much anxiety as a practitioner would count the pulse-beats of a dying man. She takes another dose, and another, and shows the bot-tle to her friends, telling them she "feels better." Her skin loses its bilious tint, her eyes regain their lustre, her accustomed energy returns, and the fact that she purchases another bottle is a sure witness that she has found the Golden Medical Discovery to be a reliable remedy for the disease indicated. The lady wisely resolves that in the future her estimate of any medicine will be based upon a personal knowledge of its effects, and not upon what some practitioner (who always makes long bills rhyme with pills) may say of it. Dr. Pierce is in receipt of letters from hundreds of the largest wholesale and retail druggists in the United States stating that at the present time there is a greater demand for the Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets than ever before. In affections of the liver and blood they are unsurpassed.
