CHAPTER II. It used to be the fashion in novels of the Rosa Matilda school to represent young governesses as beings of incomparable beauty, safe to cause havoc in the heart of the house's eldest son and heir, and trouble to everybody else in consequence. Now this had absolutely happened in the case of Dorothy Stevensalthough she could not boast of much beauty, save in her fine golden hair and sweet blue eyes, and, it may be, in an innocent, confiding expression of counte-nance. Upon leaving school a situation had been found for her in the house of Mrs. Calloway-a rigid gentlewoman who boasted of high descent; to conduct the education of her only daughter. There was an only son, as well, much older: twenty-one, in fact; and he fell forthwith in love with the governess's pretty eyes and hair, after the alleged customs of those half-fledged younsters. For a long while Mrs. Calloway suspected not the treason hatching in her son's heart; and she, confiding woman, continued to have Miss Stevens down to the drawingroom whenever she received evening guests; for the young lady, don't you see, was useful in the matter of playing and singing. Now and then Dorothy went out with them also; always when the daughter went. It was in these social evening gatherings that Mr. Hastings had seen her and learnt to love; and she, poor girl, had no notion that anybody else did. Young Mr. Calloway, who was of a bashful, nervous temperament, kept his sentiments to himself, and did not armov Dora: she only used to wonder why he stared at her so, and wished he would not. But one unlucky day he came to the desperate resolution of declaring his love, and penned a letter describing it. By some awkward mischance it fell into the possession of Mrs. Calloway instead of that of the governess, and a fine hubub it caused. Dora, with earnest words and tearful eyes, protested that she had been in utter ignorance of the treason; and Mrs. Calloway believing it in her secret heart, and not caring to part with her, kept her on; but she spoke to her in very severe terms, and candidly avowed that she would exercise a rigid espionage over her in the future. Dora agreed to that willingly. She was conscious of no ill; moreover, she was a jured them. friendless orphan and feared to throw herself out of Mrs. Calloway's situation, lest she should not find another. Young Mr. Calloway was sent to the care of a clergyman at a distance, to read up for it. Let him never in honor speak to me the Church which he was to enter.

From that time, Dora found herself next kin to a prisoner. No more evening parties for her, no more social meetings. Mrs. Calloway exercised the right (she said she possessed it) of opening her letters. Dora made no objection; she had never had but one letter since she entered the house, and that was from her duty to take care of yours," Mrs. Calloway observed to her by way of semiapology; and Dora thought she was right (as no doubt she was) and thanked her

But all this put a great barrier between her and Mr. Hastings—at least between their meetings. He thought it was Dora's fault, and a slight coolness had him, though not through Dora; and she had always been somewhat jealous of the great heiress Miss Lawrence, with whom Mr. Hastings was so frequently seen. Still, she did trust him; she believed he loved her the best, and that when he was rich enough he would make her his wife, as he one day told her he would. She, in her unpretentious ideas, thought he was quite rich enough now for anything; he had a large salary; but she and Mr. Hastings had been brought up with quite opposite notions on that point. When the sun sets be at the stile at the cross roads," he had whispered in her ear. Evening came; and just as the sun was sinking below the western hills, Dora Stevens crossed Mrs. Calloway's before, upon returning from a walk with Miss Calloway, they had accidentally encountered him at that spot and stayed to tect him! Help him, and keep him from talk. But Dora felt rather sorry now for all harm." the tacit assent she had given to his request; and she meant to tell him this evening that she could not meet him again unless openly. It was not right

Nevertheless, despite of conscience, her heart was foolishly light as she sped along through the rustling leaves. She sang lightly some pretty, silly nonsense about the lasses oh, which one Robert Burns wrote many years ago; wrote perchance in days when he, too, sat by the stile with his Highland Mary, and watched the birds hopping in the stubble, or the poppies nodding in the

Dora, as she drew near the trystingplace saw a shadow as of some one waiting near the stile, half hidden by the tangled branches of the copse, thick yet with leaves above and below.

No need to guess who it was, though Dora, as she pulled he pretty hat lower on her face, and pushed back her prettier hair. How good of him to come so early of the two years tidings came. Bad and wait for her. Suddenly a voice spoke; not the voice that Dora had expected to hear. "Dean, is it you? Have you come back ?" The voice was that of Miss Lawrence. It was Bella Lawrence who confronted Dora's pale, surprised face with a face quite as surprised and a great deal whiter for it was a hazardous game she she always had been. was playing-and with a perfectly studied confusion in her manner.

Dora paused. Hot tears of disappointment, which she could not suppress, flooded her eyes and dropped on her white cheeks. "You here, Miss Lawrence?" she said, with struggling breath, "I don't understand. Did you speak of—of Mr. Hasting?" for a terrible fear had rushed into her mind; that it was Bella with whom he had sought to make the appointment,

And the words were fitly chosen. The girl's allusion to her money cut keenly and closely; Dora bit her lips and her great absorbing love for the man who was false to her.

Without one word she rose and turned

Without one word she rose and turned to go, but Bella caught her by the arm and held her. "Wait, please; how strange you are! Why do you look so wild at me? You won't betray us; promise me that you will not betray us."

Dora drew proudly back. "I never betray. You have my word. I never broke it yet! I-I am sorry I came." "Why did you come? This is so unfrequented a pathway."

A cry, in spite of herself broke from the poor girl's lips. There are moments in life when anguish is stronger than we are, when reticence is overborne in his whirling torrent.

"Oh, Heaven, help me to bear this pain!" she sobbed; and down she fell in She did not faint; but a heap on the grass, and bowed her fair golden head, and rocked herself back and forth, with wild hysterical sobs, in spite of those cruel unrelenting eyes above

"What do you mean by this emotion?" asked Bella, sternly. "What is the matter? Is it possible—but no, it cannot be. Yet he has more than once hinted of a something that might come between him and me-some irksome, half-passing amusement that clung to him like an incumbus, though he was doing his best to shake it off. Is it you. Can it be you, you ridiculous girl ?"

Dora rose up, her face white as death, and lifted a warning hand. "Stop, Miss Lawrence. I will not hear nother word. I do not stand between you and your false lover; yes, he is false, in spite of what he says to you, false and cowardly. You need not fear him. I You are not yet Mrs. Charles Callowill never come between him and you. have no money to keep him, and he is free from all he has said to me. I will never speak to him again; never. You can tell him so from me. Never again."

With the last words Dora turned away, passed into the grounds, and ran swiftly nome. But not very long had Miss Lawrence reached her father's house, before Dora was sh wn into her room. Pale, wild-eyed, a snawl wrapped about her, what do you say? You know, at least Dora put down a letter. A hasty, blotted, nicely-written-letter in that passionate hour-oh, how cruelly, and likely, after it was received, to put all the wide world between her and her lover. For when girls are strung into madness, they do all kinds of incomprehensible

"It is my renouncement!" Dora panted. "I thought I would bring it to you, and of crimson and purple fell upon them as you would send it to him as you know where he is gone. Bid him never answer again-never look at me. Fare you well Miss Lawrence. I wish you both

Mr. Richard Lawrence did not do his work by halves. In spite of Mr. Law-rence's gout and his confinement to the counting house, he found time to run down to Liverpool and talk over some arrangements with Dean Hastings. And "Characters are much easier lost than that Mr. Hastings had sailed for the regained amidst young people who have to earn their bread; and I consider it my arisen out there, and Mr. Hastings was West Indies. Some complications had gone to set them to rights. Meanwhile, Miss Lawrence paid a friendly visit to Mrs. Calloway, during which she imparted a few hints of that designing Dorothy Stevens' wickedness, in wanting to come between her and a gentleman to whom she was privately engaged. Mrs. Calloway lifted her hands and eyes, and readily promised that if arisen in consequence. He felt inclined to be jealous of Mr. Charles Calloway, whose cause of banishment had reached of whom she did not feel assured yet) of mind.

And Dora, finding herself looked upon coldly, yearning to get away from Richborough, the scene of her misery, besought that lady to get her a situation at a distance. Mrs. Calloway seized upon the idea, and lost no time in doing it; but she made a stipulation with the girl that she should not disclose to Richborough where her new home was.

"Indeed I will not," acquiesced the poor girl, all too readily. "I shall never care to see Richboroug again, or to hear need to boast of his brightness nor the Dean Hastings was plowing his way on the ocean; and of the two women left behind it would be difficult to say which garden to the copse beyond. For the trysting place was but just behind Mrs. Calloway's boundary hedge. It was the first time Dora had deliberately met him, there or elsewhere, but a few evenings her tenderness returned. Night by night she bent in prayer for him at her bed-

Mr. Hastings landed in safety. The first packet of letters he received from home contained that angry one of renouncement, written by Dora. Not that to do so; neither would Mrs. Calloway it betrayed anger, only a calm, studied coldness. Opening mechanically the letter that lay next to it, he found it in the handwriting of Miss Lawrence. This letter chiefly contained items of news, written in a playful style; one of them ran as follows: "Will you be surprised to hear that Mrs. Calloway has at length people? Report says they are about to be married shortly. Do not break your heart; Dorothy Stevens is not worth it. It is very wrong of her to be so much given to flirting—worse than I am; and that, perhaps you will say, need not be." The time went on; two years of it. Dean Hastings had left soon the employ of Mr. Lawrence and entered that of another house in the West Indies, con-

Her ill-starred passion, already nearly dead, dead of its very hopelessness, was now thrust away from her heart forever. She entered upon her reign, as queen of society, heartless, callous, self-indulgent—but so

But what of Dora Stevens? > No time if she was waiting for him .-Oh, I wonder how it all was? Did he love her?—But, why ask it?—to what end now? She is here, beginning her wedded life; and he-lies there." It appeared, however, if she spoke of Dean Hastings (as she undoubtedly did,) that he did not lie there. He was at her elbow. His footsteps fell softly over the

"Oh!" put in Dorothy.
"Stay a bit, my dear. And I am not yet the husband of Miss Lawrence. She has taken another, by the way. So-do you see any reason why we should not take one another? No impediment exists now, my darling; I am in a good position; a partner of the house I am in; and can set up our tent well. Dora, you ought to know, that I never would have married anyone but you." What did she say? Nothing. She yielded herself to the arms held out to her, and bent her face down on the true hearted, sheltering breast, happy sobs, joyful tears, bedewing it. Oh, how merciful was God!

The sun went down behind the hill in a blaze of glory. Its last lingering rays they stood together in happiness.

KEEPING SWEET POTATOES.—I be-lieve I promised to give you my plan of keeping potatoes, which is the cheapest, I think, and certainly the safest I've ever seen tried: I build a pen of logs, any desired length, and five feet wide, (this lessens the risk of bulking,) four to six feet high, hew it down evenly on the inside, so that the walls may be ceiled or daubed with a good roof; and have a small door in the end. When this is done, raise the bottom with stones, five or six inches high; cover these with dry sand to keep them from cutting the potatoes, which may now be put in, beginning in the middle Three or four inches of dry sand must be placed between them and the wall. I sometimes have a plank for this purpose, raising it up as the potatoes are put in, keeping the space between the plank and wall well filled in with the sand, which will run down through the potatoes, as the plank is raised. Let them remain so until freezing weather, when you can readily cover entirely with dry sand, deep enough to keep them from being chilled Some attention may be necessary for a while, as the sand will continue to disperse itself, among them, and leave the top naked. There should be no leaks in the roof. There is but little waste in the sand when once procured. Like the house it is always ready, and at the spot. The philosophy of the plan is the uniform temperature it ensures, while it ab sorbs and carries off the excessive moisture that may be in the potato. I have tried this plan satisfactorily for twenty years. It was suggested to my mind by seeing hogs rooting up potatoes in the spring.—Southern Cultivator.

FIRST DOSE ON A BOSTON POLICE OFFICER.

BOSTON, Nov. 15, 1871. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—In the spring of 1869 I was stricken down with fever, which had a long and almost hopeless run. The best medical advice being in attendance, I was taken through the fever; but it left me terribly reduced and weak, with excruciating pains in my side, back and hips. I was completely prostrated with Kidney Complaint, and no medicine seemed to reach my case.

In this condition I was persuaded to try Veoettine by a friend whom it cured of the same disease, and it seemed as though I could feel the effect of the first dose through my whole system:

effect of the first dose through my whole system; and from that moment I began to mend, gradually growing better from day to day; and I followed on with the VEGETINE, until it completely restored me to health, since which time I have been able to perform my duties as a police officer, enjoying good health; and there is no doubt about the great value of VEGETINE in Kidney Complaint and similar diseases. fould Give a Dollar for a Dose. Boston, May 30, 1871.

I. R. Stevens, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have been badly afflicted with Kidney complaint for ten years; have suffered great pain in my back, hips and side, with great di deulty in passing urine, which was often and invery small quantities, frequently accompanied with blood and excruciating pain. Have faithfully fried most of the popular remedies recommended for my complaint; I have been under the treatment of some of the most skilful physicians in Boston, all of whom pronounced my case incurable. This was my condition when I was advised by a friend to try the Vegetine, and could see the good effects from the first dose I took, and from that moment I kept on improving until I was entirely cured, taking in all, I should think, about six bottles.

It is indeed a valuable medicine, and if I should be afflicted again in the same way I would give a dollar for a dose, if I could not get it without.

BUSINESS! BUSINESS IS

A ND those who carry on business are compelled to have money. That is our situation at present. Therefore, we earnestly call upon all parties indebted to us to pay at once and SAVE COST. Prompt payment is a great source of friendship, and it is our, desire to remain friendly with our customers, if they come forward promptly and pay us what they owe. Money we are obliged to have. We offer an inducement of one cent per pound for Cotton over market value to those indebted to us, and wish to settle their Accounts. We have on hand a large stack of counts. We have on hand a large stock of Flour, Bacon, Shoulders, Hams, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses. ALSO, Boots, Shoes, Leather, Saddles, Hats, Caps, Dry Goods, Tobacco, Cigars, Wines, Liquors, Iron. Steel, And all Farming Implements.

Any person or persons purchasing Goods will benefit themselves by calling and examining our stock before purchasing elsewhere. We buy for Cash and sell for cash only; therefore, we are enabled to sell cheaper. Call and judge for yourselves, and be convinced of this first.

DOMAINE GOLD, so extensively worn in Paris, was first discovered in 1870, by the celebrated by French chemist, Mons. D. Be Lainge, who manufactured it into jewelry, and for five years sold it to the leading jewelers of Paris for SOLID GOLD. In 1875, when his secret became known, ten of the manufacturing jewelers established a stock company, with a capital of $10,000,000 for the purpose of manufacturing ROMAINE GOLD JEWELY AND WATCHES. With this immense capital, and the aid of improved machinery they are enabled to produce all the latest patterns of jewelry at less than one-tenth the cost of Solid Gold, and of a quality and color which makes it impossible even for experts to detect it from the genuine.

We have secured the exclusive agency of the United States and Canada, for the sale of all goods manufactured from this metal, and in order to introduce them in the most speedy manner, have put up assorted sample lots as given below, which we will sell at one-tenth the retail value until January 1st, 1878. ## THE BEST PUMP IN THE WORLD

DOUBLE ACTING STONE FORCE PUMP.

Manufactured by J. C. Nichols & Bro., Atlanta, Ga., which brings the water pure and fresh Manufactured by J. C. Nichols & Bro., Atlanta, Ga., which brings the water pure and fresh from the bottom of the well. No slime or filth collects on the pump or in the well. No snails, worms or green moss gets about the water. It is free from rust or other impurities, and can be operated by a small child with ease, and brings the water fresher than any other Pump. It is of stone, glazed inside and outside, and never will decay. It improves the water beyond a doubt by ventilating the well, and keeping it like a moving stream of water. With a hose attached, it becomes a good fire-engine, ever ready at your door to extinguish the flames in case of fire. It is better and cheaper than insurance. Its working gives complete satisfaction, as those acquainted with it will testify.

It is a home enterprise, permanently established, and relies on its own merits, upon which it asks your patronage. This Pump is represented in Anderson and addining which it asks your patronage. This Pump is represented in Anderson at I adjoining Counties, together with the Counties of Hart, Elbert, Wilkes and Oglethorpe in Georgia by
