The National! Hotel Poisoning Twenty Years Ago.

Washington Correspondence Chicago Times. Among the more prominent of the National's late arrivals are Senator Ben. Hill and wife, of Georgia. They occupy the suit of rooms known as the presidential parlors. If the walls had tongues number of thoughtful Brahmins, to whom they might discourse of people prominent he communicated his glowing zeal to do in the past, and, perchance, tell tales of private life never suspicioned. But the graded fellow-men and fellow-subjects in tall mantel looks blank under its modern Australia. The only perfect remedy, he ornament, the brass mountings of the considered, would be the conversion of ornament, the brass mountings of the fender reflect new faces, the heavy curtains shut in the secrets never voiced, and in the room sits a little, dark-eyed, prim woman, and a blue-eyed man "from away down South in Georgia," a man mild as May, velvety, and unassuming as a field dandelion. These rooms where Senator Hill now lives, on that fatal fourth of March, which witnessed Buchanan's inauguration, were occupied by the new President. Twelve hundred guests were crowded in the house. In the evening nearly all were seized by similar symptoms of poisoning, and thirty or more died. The dead bodies lay in rows in the parlors, the sick and dying were moaning in the halls; a gloom hung over the city, and extended to distant homes, from whence had come guests to witness the inauguration. The house had just previous to this been entirely refurnished. It was the grand hotel of the capital, and built in a style of magnificence rare in those times. The hotel poisoning is remembered with horror by old people, but many of the younger ones have never heard of it. The affair was investigated and the house examined. No positive clue has ever been found. Some said defective drainage, some poisoned rats in the wells,

some that the sugar was poisoned to ruin

the business of the hotel. It is generally,

I think, believed now that the poison was mineral poison, and was in the sugar-for the reason that persons not stopping at the house, who took fancy drinks at the bar, were also seized by cramps

Doubtless the new President's death was meditated, but Mr. Buchanan never touched sugar, nor ate it in anything, so that he almost alone escaped the peril.

Some of those beside his Excellency, who escaped, have been interrogated, and all those whose address could be found after the lapse of years, replied that they did not partake of sugar, even in coffee. The house was closed, the splendid furniture was sold at auction. For years the hotel was uninhabited. People tooked at the barred windows something as visitors now pause before Ford's theatre, where President Lincoln was assassinated. Strangers stood in front of it and related to each other sad incidents of the inexplicable death which had overtaken thirty persons in a night. Twenty years ago, a gentleman from New Hampshire, visiting in Washington, asked to go through the house. People had been afraid to enter the walls after the panic. The gentlemen, upon examination, immediately leased the building, threw open the windows, had the house cleansed, one hundred and fifty loads of dirt taken from the cellar, put one hundred thousand dollars worth of furniture in the hotel, and was called crazy by his friends. In December every corner was filled by guests, and the quaint, low rooms, where had danced the belles of a quarter of a century before, were again filled with life

Why Jacob Wept after Kissing Rachel. ers and the mechanics want, just what the railroad men, the lumber men, and the mining men want, they want labor, capital and brains. There is not a farmer in the State but will stand an application of this trio—work, money and thought."
We asked him again, what simple and easy methods he would recommend to the farmers from which they could get the quickest returns, and he replied: cow in the State be crossed by a thorough

"First, I would recommend that every bred bull. I calculate that would add $1,500,000 to the wealth of the State in two years, and that would double the cattle of the State in four years. Second, I would cross every breeding ewe in the State with a thoroughbred ram of approved pedigree, and I calculate that would add one pound of wool to every shearing in two years, besides improving the flocks in many respects. You can calculate the gain yourself. Third, I would have every farmer select his seeds of every grain, especially of wheat and corn—that is to pick out the best and discard the inferior. The profit would be immense, for there is no telling how much can be gained by the selection of

Now here are three things within the reach of almost every farmer. They require a little money, some work and a quire a little money, some work and a good deal of nerve and will power. Was the old man right? Let every farmer adopt these precepts and then contradict with the best of all kinds of Liquors, Conwich with the best of all kinds of Liquors with the best of all kinds o thein-if he can.

- What next? Before the war the fashionable styles in ladies' dresses reminded us of an umbrella hoisted. Now they remind us of an umbrella let down and buttoned.

- The heathen are organizing foreign these Christians to a better and purer faith. A large sum was collected for the pious and benevolent enterprise, and some of the Brahmins declared their willingness to devote themselves to the work, and to spend and be spent in this humane and holy cause. Suradschi is now engaged in translating fitting passages from the Vedas into the English tongue for the use of the missionaries.

- The Carolina Spartan urges that both the rogue and roguery should be made odious, and that stealing should be proportionately punished. It urges the Legislature to enact some law that will make thieves dread the consequence of crimes, which they now do not do. It points out that stealing is a degraded crime which should be visited by a degrading punishment, and evidently leans strongly to the whipping post.

McGRATH & BYRUM,

WATCHES! JEWELRY!

DOMAINE GOLD, so extensively worn in Paris, was first discovered in 1870, by the celebrated by French chemist, Mons. D. Be Lainge, who manufactured it into jewelry, and for five years sold it to the leading jewelers of Paris for SOLID GOLD. In 1875, when his secret became known, ten of the manufacturing jewelers established a stock company, with a capital of $10,000,000 for the purpose of manufacturing ROMAINE GOLD JEWELY AND WATCHES. With this immense capital, and the aid of improved machinery they are enabled to produce all the latest patterns of jewelry at less than one-tenth the cost of Solid Gold, and of a quality and color which makes it impossible even for experts to detect it from the genuine.

We have secured the exclusive agency of the United States and Canada, f-r the sale of all goods manufactured from this metal, and in order to introduce them in the most speedy manner, have put up assorted sample lots as given below, which we will sell at one-tenth the retail value until January 1st, 1878.
