MARK TWAIN ON BABIES. His Serious Talk to the Soldiers of the Army of the Tennessee.

Mark Twain's remarks at the banquet of the Army of the Tennessee on the night of November 13, at Chicago, were in response to the following toast:

The Babies: As they comfort us in our sorrows, let us not forget them in our festivities.

Now, that's something like. We haven't all had the good fortune to be ladies; we haven't all been generals, or bies. It is a shame that for a thousand years the world's banquets have utterly ignored the baby—as if he didn't amount to anything! If you, gentlemen, will stop and think a minute—if you go back fifty or a hundred years, to your early married life, and recontemplate your first baby, you will remember that he amounted to a good deal—and even something over.

You soldiers all know that when that little fellow arrived at family headquar-ters you had to hand in your resignation. He took entire command. You became his lackey, his mere bodyguard; and you had to stand around, too. He was not a commander who made allowances for and pulled your hair, and twisted your nose, you had to take it. When the thunders of war were sounding in your steady tread; but when he turned on the terrors of his war-whoop you advanced in—the other direction, and mighty glad of the chance, too. When he called for soothing syrup, did you venture to throw out any side remarks about certain services being unbecoming an officer and a gentleman? No, you got it! If he ordered his pap bottle, and it wasn't warm, did you talk back? Not you; you went to work and warmed it. You you gester the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy." even descended so far in your menial office as to take a suck at that warm, insipid stuff yourself to see if it was right? three parts water to one of milk, a touch of sugar to modify the colic, and a drop of peppermint to kill those immortal

And how many things you learned as you went along! Sentimental young folks still took stock in that beautiful old saying that when the baby smiles in his sleep it is because the angels are whispering to him. Very pretty, but "too thin"—simply wind on the stomach, my friends. If the baby proposed to take a walk at his usual hour—half-past 2 in the morning—didn't you rise up prompt. which wouldn't improve a Sunday shool much) that that was the verything you were about to propose yourself? Oh you were under good discipline. And as you went fluttering up and down the room in your "undress uniform," you not only prattled undignified baby talk, but even tuned up your martial voices and tried to sing, "Rock-a-by-baby on the tree top," for instance. I like the idea that a baby dozen't amount to anything. Why, one baby is just a house and a front yard full by itself; one baby can furnish more business than one papy can turnish more business than you and your whole interior department can attend to; he is enterprising, irrepressible, brimful of lawless activities—do what you please you can't make him stay on the reservation. Sufficient unto the day is one below. unto the day is one baby. As long as you are in your right mind don't you ever pray for twins. Twins amount to a permanent riot; and there ain't any real difference between triplets and an insur-

Among the three or four million cradles now rocking in the land are some which this nation would preserve for ages as sacred things if we could know which ones they are. For in one of these cradles the unconscious Farragut of the future is at this moment teething. Think of it! and putting in a word of dead earnest, unarticulated, but perfectly justifiable, profanity over it, too; in another the future renowned astronomer is blinking at the shining Milky Way, with but a languid interest, poor little chap, and wondering what has become of that other one they call the wet nurse; in another, the future great historian is lying, and doubtless he will continue to lie till his earthly mission is ended; in another, the future President is busying himself with no profounder problem of State than what the mischief has become of his hair so early, and in a mighty array, of other cradles there are now some 60,000 future office-seekers getting ready to iurnish him occasion to grapple with that same old problem a second time!
And in still one more cradle somewhere under the flag, the future illustrious commander-in-chief of the American armies is so little burdened with his approaching grandeurs and responsibilities as to be giving his whole strategic mind, at this moment, to trying to find out some way to get his own big toe into his mouth —an achievement which (meaning no disrespect) the illustrious guest of this evening also turned his attention to some fifty-sixty years ago! And if the child is but the prophecy of the man there are mighty few will doubt that he succeeded.

Bob. Ingersoll on Alcohol.

Colonel Robert Ingersoll was lately employed in a case which involved the manufacture of ardent spirits, and in his speech to the jury he used the following

"I am aware there is a prejudice against any man engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. I believe from the time it issues distillery until it empties into the hell of death, dishonor and crime, that it is demoralizing to everybody that touches it, when the Indians of Alaska and those from the source to where it ends. I do not believe that anybody can contemplate the sucject without being prejudiced against the crime. All we have to do is to think of the wrecks on either side the stream of death, of suicides, of the insan-ity, of the poverty, of the destruction, of the little children tugging at the breast, of weeping and despairing wives asking for bread, of the man of genius it has wrecked, the man struggling with imagi-nary serpents, produced by this devilish thing; and when you think of the jails, of the almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons and of the scaffolds on either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this vile stuff called alcohol. Intemperance cuts stuff called alcohol. Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial atttachment and blights parental hope, and brings premature age in sorrow the stuff of the swamp firs; then, with buckskin thongs or cords of plaited grass, the baby is bound down tight and secure, for any and all dispositions that the mether may see fit to make of it for dies; we haven't all been generals, or poets, or statesmen; but when the toast works down to the babies, we stand on common ground—for we've all been babies. It is a shame that for a thousand years the world's banquets have utterly It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, wel-comes epidemics, invites cholora, imports crime. The recent absurd statement that the negro is never known to sneeze, which has been going the rounds of the newspapers, led a reporter of the New York Sun to make an effort to settle the disputed question by obtaining a number of interviews on the subject from intelligent colored residents of New York City. Without exception these interviews resulted in indignant denials of the statement that the nasal possibilities of he man of color were not equal to those of his white brother. Here is the

Ex-Alderman and present Deputy Sheriff Seaton, the ebon giant who guards the lower hallway of the Equita-

George and half a dozen other colored waiters listened with interest to the reading of the obnoxious paragraph, and their black faces were lighted by broad grins before it was finished.—
"Well, I knows I sneeze," said one.—
"Me, too," said another, "we all sneeze, don't we Josh?" But Josh only smiled and walked away. George said that he sneezed sometimes "fit to sneeze his head

In the Astor House the flourish of a whisk broom in close proximity to the reporter's ears was suddenly suspended as he mildly inquired of the artist of the broom, "Do you sneeze?"
"Does I sneeze? does I sneeze? Why, of course, I sneeze; everybody what has breaf sneeze. Why, boss, you must be a little off to ask me such a fool question as that."

At Twenty-third street and Sixth evenue "Black Joe" polishes boots; but he stopped his work in astonishment when the reporter, on whose boots he was laboring, asked him if gentlemen of color like himself were able to sneeze. "Sneeze! Does colored gemmen sneeze! Well, now, dey jess do for a fac. Why, dere ain't no sneezers in the worl' like nigger sneezers. A lusty colored youth, who acts as stable boy in one of the great horse car stables, was willing to bet, "an' the money planked down," that he could sneeze louder than any white man in the city, and he knew a feller what could sneeze louder'n me." Suiting his actions to his words, he picked up a whisp of stress tickled his nose with a terriof straw, tickled his nose with a terri-ble contortion of the facial muscles, startled the neighborhood with a sneeze so loud and so emphatic that it alone was sufficient to set at rest forever the

To make assurance doubly sure, the reporter called upon an eminent physician in an uptown hospital, and aroused him from his perusal of a work on histology by the question, "Can a negro Indian Babies and Their Mothers.

The love of an Indian mother for her child is made plain to us by the care and labor which she often expends upon the cradle; the choicest production of her skill in grass and woolen weaving, the neatest needle-work and the richest bead embroidery that she can devise and bestow, are lavished on the quaint looking cribs which savage mothers nurse and carry their little ones around in. This thing, no matter where is it found be-tween the Indians of Alaska and those far to the South in Mexico. The Esqui-maux are the exception, however, for they use no cradle whatever, carrying their infants snugly enconsed in the hoods of their darkies and otter-fur jumpers. The governing principle of a pa poose cradle is an unyielding board upon which the baby can be firmly lashed at full length on its back.

This board is usually covered by softly dressed buckskin, with flaps and pouches in which to envelop the baby; other tribes, not rich or fortunate enough to procure this material, have recourse to a its mother may see fit to make of it for the next day or two.

Indian babies, as a rule, are not kept in their cradles more than twenty or twenty-four consecutive hours at any one comes epidemics, invites cholora, imports pestilence, and embraces consumption. It covers the land with misery, idleness and covers the land with misery, idleness and roll and tumble at will on the blanket, or land to the covers the land with misery idleness and roll and tumble at will on the blanket, or in the grass or sand if the sun shines warm and bright. But this liberty is always conditional on their good behavior when free, for the moment a baby begins to fret or whimper, the mother claps it back into its cradle where it rests with emphasis, for it can there move nothing save its head; but so far from disliking these rigid couches, the babies actually sleep better in them than when free, and positively cry to be returned to them when neglected and left longer than usual at liberty. This fact is certain usual at liberty. tainly an amusing instance of the force of habit.

When the papoose is put away in its cradle, the mother has little or no more concern with it, other than to keep within sight or hearing. If she is engaged about the wigwam or in the village, she stands it up in the lodge corner, or hangs it to some convenient tree, taking it down at irregular intervals to nurse. When she retires at night the baby is brought and suspended at some point within easy reaching; if the baby is ill it is kept at her side, or she sits up all ion. When the women leave the village on any errand, such as going to the mountains for berries or to the river cannon for fish, the cradles, with the babies therein, are slung upon the mother's backs and carried, no matter how far, how rough the road or how dismal the wheather.

Indian babies are born subject to all the ills that baby flesh is heir to, but with this great difference between them and ours—when sick they are either killed or cured without delay. This does not hap-pen, however, from sinister motives; it is not done to avoid the irksome care of a sickly, puny child; it is not the result of lack of natural love for offspring; it is due to their wonderful "medicine," their fearful system incantation.

A papoose becomes ill; it refuses to eat or to be comforted; and after several days and nights of anxious, tender endeavor to relieve her child, the mother begins to fear the worst, and, growing thoroughly alarmed, she at last sends for the "shaman," or a doctress of the tribe, and surrenders her babe to his or

Never lose your temper, for the mo-ment you do so, you at the same time lose the advantage which you should always have over him. In handling a colt remember that you are forming the future horse, and care now taken either in his appearance or character is by no means lost. By the time he is a year old, he should allow you to place light articles on his back without any resistance, and should be taught not to be afraid of straps hanging loose either about the body or heels. This education is best done in the winter, and should be repeated until perfectly broken, and when harnessed for the first time he will permit himself to be driven alongside of a quiet horse. During the operation of halterbreaking, great care should be taken to always make him walk fast. Fast walking (the best gait of a horse) should be part of his education, and he will never forget it in his after life. We have had a wide experience with colts, and have yet to find perience with colts, and have yet to and one which could not be made a good walker if properly trained when young; but this is a fast age, and walking is too slow to keep up with. With reference to balky horses, there are more balky drivers; hence the driver shall be addressed rather than the horse, which can be well done by the following from the Farm Journal:

"If you have balky horses, it is your "If you have balky horses, it is your own fault and not the horses', for if they do not pull true there is some cause for it, and if you remove the cause the effect will cease. When your horse balks he is excited, and does not know what to do. When he gets a little excited, stop him for five or ten minutes; let him become calm, and as soon as he is over his excitement he will, in pipe cases out of ten citement he will, in nine cases out of ten, pull at the word. Whipping and slashing and swearing only make the matter worse. After you have handled him awhile, and his excitement has cooled, take him by the bits, turn him each way a few minutes as far as you can, pull out the tongue, gentle him a little, unrein him, then step before the balky horse and let the other start first; then you can take them anywhere you wish. A balky take them anywhere you wish. A balky horse is always high-spirited and starts quick—half the pull is out before the other starts; by standing before him the other starts first. By close application to this rule you can make any horse pull. If a horse has been badly spoiled, you should first hitch him to an empty wagon, and let him draw it around for a while on level ground; then put on a little load and increase it gradually, caressing as before, and in a short time you can have a good work horse."—Turf, Field and Farm.

— A decision was rendered in the Supreme Court of the United States on November 17th, in three cases of the United States against Emil Steffens, Adolph Wiltman and W. W. Johnson, involving the validity and constitutionality of the so-called trade mark laws. This Court holds that the statutes here in question, and establishing the general system of trade mark registration and prescribing penalties for violations of its provisions, cannot be upheld either in whole or in part, and must be declared invalid and unconstitutional. Under the provisions of the Federal trade mark law which, as stated above, the Supreme Court has pronounced unconstitutional, about 8,000 trade marks have been registered at the nounced unconstitutional, about 8,000 trade marks have been registered at the patent office, and about 200 applications for registry are now pending.

REMARKABLE CURE OF SCROFULA, &c. Cuse of Col. J. C. Branson.

KINGSTON, GA. September 15, 1871.

GENTS—For sixteen years I have been a great sufferer from Scrofula in its most distressing forms. I have been confined to my room and bed for fifteen years with serofulous ulcerations. The most approved remedies for such cases had been used, and the most eminent physicians consulted, without any decided benefit. Thus prostrated, distressed, desponding, I was advised by Dr. Ayer, of Floyd County, Ga., to commence the use of your Compound Extract Stillingia. Language is as insufficient to describe the relief I obtained from the use of the Stillingia as it is to convey an adequate idea of the intensity of my suffering before using your medicine; sufficient to say, I abandoned all other remedies and continued the use of your Extract of Stillingia, until I can say truly, "I am cured of all pain," of all disease, with nothing to obstruct the active pursuit of my profession. More than eight months have clapsed since this remarkable cure, without any return of the disease.

For the truth of the above statement, I refer to any gentleman in Bartow County, Ga., and to the members of the bar of Cherokee Circuit, who are acquainted with me. I shall ever remain, with the deepest gratitude, your obedient servant,

GENTS—My daughter was taken on the 25th day of June, 1863, with what was supposed to be Acute Rheumatism, and was treated for the same with no success. In March, following, pieces of bone began to work out of the right arm, and continued to appear till all the bone from the clow to the shoulder joint came out. Many pieces of bone came out of the right foot and leg. The case was then pronounced one of White Swelling. After having been confined about six years to her bed, and the case considered hopeles, i was induced to try Dr. Pemberton's Compound Extract of Stillingia, and was so well satisfied with its effects that I have continued the use of it until the present. My daughter was confined to her bed about six years before she sat up or even turned over without help. She now sits up all day, and sews most of her time—has walked across the room. Her general health is now good, and I believe she will, as her limbs gain strength, walk well. I attribute her recovery, with the blessing of God, to the use of your invaluable medicine.
